Nassau's Nicer at the Nassau Beach Hotel

Quite deliberately, we've made the Nassau Beach the "fun" hotel of the islands. We provided a private balcony for every room, with a spell-binding view of the ocean. We arranged poolside luncheons with calypso music for every day. And we painted each night with the glamour and gaiety of Latin American music and limbo, native shows and dancing to 5 bands, and parties, parties, parties. Top it off with treasure hunts, crab races, water skiing, sailing, skin and scuba diving, barbeques, beach parties, aqua shows, and you'll agree the Nassau Beach is "where the action is".

House Beautiful's Address Book

Valuable names and places from our little black book to yours

By EPSIE KINARD

To add the cachet of monograms to your linen and towels, Smith & Weigler, 37 W. 26th St., N.Y.C., will make up a special design for you. They embroider crowns, tiaras, golden crests, and seals of state into the royal ciphers of kings, queens, shahs, and U.S. Presidents. Send ideas in writing, a sketch, a wallpaper swatch, or a silver pattern. For her cipher, Danish Princess Benedikte sent a spoon with two crossed "B's" engraved under a tiny crown. This firm will take orders for your local linen shop to deliver.

Christmas cards with photograph, sketch, or a drawing of your house, child, pet parakeet, or a snapshot of you spearing a 100-pound blue marlin, are a favored way to personalize a greeting. Dempsey & Carroll, 556 Madison Ave., N.Y.C., whose customers read like a Who's Who, will tastefully reproduce a black-and-white positive or negative, mount it on a card with a tip-on of color. Price estimate and style sheet with choice of greetings will be sent upon request.

Bookplates as personal as thumbprints, and better able to bring your books back from careless borrowers, will be designed for you by the Antioch Bookplate Co. of Yellow Springs, Ohio (founded years ago by two Antioch College students). You may supply your own artwork or their artists will create it, using ideas you describe or sketch or photograph to express your personality or interests. Catalog sent upon request.

Personalizing your glassware or china by hand-painting or etching your crest, or your monogram, or the name, emblem, or flag of your Sea Valiant II is offered by Abercrombie & Fitch, Madison Avenue at 45th St., N.Y.C. Their artists will also paint a portrait of your racehorse, a winning jockey wearing your racing silks, a champion dog, or the mutt who doesn't have to be a show dog to rate a picture on glass or china. Glassware used is machine-blown blanks. China is plain Pickard with gold border fired at intense heat to fuse decorations into the glaze. Your design will be worked out from a rough sketch, photograph, or description, and will be submitted for approval. This store will also have your name and house number assembled on house-marker ornaments that attach to the house or screw into a post. Markers may be picked from a supply of 67 designs of painted aluminum (black, or some in colors), but reflective duo-glo letters and numerals will be assembled to your specifications.

House Beautiful is building a list of china-matching and replacement sources. Please send information and addresses to Epsie Kinard, Room 702, 572 Madison Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022.

Come close...touch the luxury of Cannon

This magnificent bedspread is Fantasia—from the Royal Family Collection. This unique Collection has been designed to re-create the glories of the past—the Renaissance, the Court of Louis XIV, the richness of Moorish Spain. Each is more than a bedspread; each is a whole decorating motif. Weaves, colors, textures have an old-world splendor, and a wholly contemporary way of staying beautiful always. Looking like at least three times the price, the entire Collection is priced from $25 to $50, twin size. Fantasia available in king and queen size. At fine department stores. Look for Royal Family towels and sheets, too. Cannon Mills, Inc., N. Y. 10020

from your walls

An extra closet or cabinet will not make a room seem smaller if proper design and trimming make it visually a part of the original structure

GRAPH BY THE HOWLAND ASSOCIATES

Of all rooms, the bedroom has the greatest storage need. Here, for two girls, closets were built in on each side of the window, creating an alcove big enough for two chairs and a table. Careful matching of molding tied the new work to the old. Ellen McCluskey, decorator.

When a gate is necessary

Sometimes, for privacy or protection, a homeowner has to place a barrier at the entrance. Here are two ways to say "no" pleasantly but firmly

JOHN GARNER, DESIGNER — PHOTOGRAPH BY MAYNARD PARKER

The hoop-and-harlequin design of this gate adds a welcome counterpoint to the vertical lines of the mansard roof. The gate was added when the house was remodeled. Before, the house fronted almost immediately on the street and had no feeling of security. The gate swings back. It's light in weight, but the diagonals make it rigid.

EUINE FAY JONES, ARCHITECT — PHOTOGRAPH BY EZRA STOLLER ASSOCIATES

This counterweight gate can be raised or lowered easily. It can be locked in position, either up or down. Its supporting post is of the same material as the house, and blends naturally into the scene. Though anyone could easily step over this gate or get around it, it says with polite authority that to do so would be unwelcome.

The Garage Door —three ways to enhance the scene

OTTO ZENKE, DESIGNER-OWNER PHOTOGRAPH BY O. PHILIP ROEDEL

Six louvered panels, attached to plywood, makes a swing-up garage door. Side shown closed is for storage, and here matching panels fold back. Similar louvered panels are used in the house for closet doors.

HENRY EGGERS, ARCHITECT

The rhythm and horizontal line of the bricks in the entrance stairs are continued by the small panels in the bottom of this garage door. Though the door is custom made, it uses standard hardware.

AARON GREEN, ARCHITECT TWO PHOTOGRAPHS BY MAYNARD PARKER

The first thing a visitor sees in many houses is its garage door. This one, right at the front entrance, was designed to resemble the structure of the house itself; it looks more like a handsome wall than like a door.

Comments on Holland's flowering springtime and how to make it a memorable holiday—offered not a moment too soon; nowadays a wise traveler plots his course in advance

It is time, according to the admonitions of garden editors, to plant a bit of Holland in your own back yard—meaning, of course, that this is the moment when next spring's tulips, hyacinths, and daffodils go into the ground (a procedure conscientiously detailed on page 260). But it also occurs to us that there is no time like the present to plan a visit to these vernal flowers on their native heath. This means Holland in the months of April and May—a period inadequately referred to as Tulip Time.

COURTESY NETHERLANDS NATIONAL TOURIST OFFICE

If you could go only to one place in springtime Holland, it would have to be the Keukenhof near the great bulb center of Lisse, between Haarlem and Leyden. Here, in a park of tender, early-green beech trees and mirror lakes, sixty acres of flower garden blooms in full panoply. The park is open from March 31 to mid-May.

It is, in fact, a time of brilliant, successive bloom for the whole procession of springtime bulbs. In a flat landscape flaming with azalea and foaming with the blossoms of rapeseed, currant, and all the dear old fruit trees, you could ride all day (hire a car or, in very Dutch fashion, a bike) through seas of brilliant flowers.

Of all the enchanting springtimes, and the world is full of them, the Dutch spring is extra-special, and the Dutch themselves are well aware of it, turning out in their legions to enjoy their own country. This is why it is wise to plan your trip as early as now, certainly as far as hotel reservations go. It is said that Hollanders are so hospitable and accommodations in private homes are so frequently forthcoming to the desperate visitor that no one ever spends a night in a Dutch railroad, bus, or air terminal. Even so, it's best not to stretch your luck, lest some of the bloom come off blossom time. The Netherlands National Tourist Office, more generally known in Holland by its initials, ANVV, has offices at 605 Fifth Ave., New York City, and at 681 Market St., San Francisco, where prospective travelers may visit or write for helpful information and literature, which can help you and your travel agent plan your trip.

Arriving by sea from the U.S.A., you'd probably sail into Rotterdam aboard a Holland-America liner and so, having spent several days in characteristically Dutch gezellig atmosphere, you'd have had a certain cultural orientation to Dutch life. Rotterdam will come as a major surprise, however, to those nurtured on the legend of Peter, the little boy who saved Holland from flooding by sticking his finger into the hole in the dike. According to the story, he did this picturesquely attired in wooden shoes, balloon breeches, and black cap, and expired in the process. The weakness of the story is that no Dutchman has ever heard it, although it has done more to color the American notion of Holland and the Hollanders than Edam cheese, hopjkes, Delft china, and Heineken beer all put together.

No, Rotterdam, far from being the place to see doughty little boys in quaint costume, is a town of consummate sophistication, shining, new.

THE DECORATORS

PART I

We salute, in this first of a series, these extraordinary men and women who are artist-historian-designer-colorist-entrepreneur-teacher-psychologist-idealist-sophisticate-romantic-ace shoppers-of-the-world. Lovers of people. Stage setters. Spinners of the tangible dream. We dedicate this issue to them for the grace they bring to living today.

14 ROOMS SIGNED BY THE ARTISTS

Rather as an artist puts pigment on canvas, a topnotch designer-decorator paints with cloth and wood, glass and metal, porcelain and paper—composing color, texture, and form into the three-dimensional harmony of lovely, livable rooms. This portfolio proves that, besides native talent, a good decorator brings to a client's problem a trained esthetic judgment, a combination that puts a subtle, distinguishing seal of excellence upon a room, like the painter's signature on a work of art.

DINING ROOM BY

Dorothy Parish

HOME OF MRS. THOMAS JEFFERSON COOLIDGE
MANCHESTER-BY-THE-SEA, MASS.

Known for her wondrous, unself-conscious ways with pastel colors, embroidered silk, and antique French furnishings, Mrs. Henry Parish II ("Sister" to friends and well-acquainted clients) interprets one client's appreciation of sunny seaside lawns, flower-growing, and mannerly dining in this glass-doored, breeze-washed room. The painted chairs are faux bambou, the glazed table top is marbleized, and all is light and delicately conceived. Year round, the tôle container on the Directoire commode holds masses of homegrown flowers from gardens or conservatory.

LIVING ROOM BY

Andrew Delfino

HOME OF MR. AND MRS. JOHN McGUIRE
SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.

In a remodeled town house of late 19th-century vintage whose owners are knowledgeable collectors of Oriental objets d'art, Andrew Delfino demonstrates his philosophy that the old, the rare, and the new may live together beautifully, and that fine things are best highlighted when they are used sparsely, without clutter. Setting off the magnificence of the Chinese rugs, he stained the floor ebony, gave it a soft-glowing polish. Armchairs, keeping company with Chinese antiques, are modern, designed and manufactured by the owners. The compatible cabinet is, surprisingly, Italian.

Alice Spalding Bowen

IN HER OWN HOME,
HONOLULU, HAWAII

Expressing her tenets that simplicity, through restraint, is the essence of beauty, and that spiritual as well as physical needs require the decorator's consideration, Mrs. Alice Spalding Bowen's silvery gray and leaf-green room is her serene retreat after a busy work day. Dwarf trees of fresh green and white flowers are as comforting to her in this room as the silver-embroidered chairs. Sheerest sudaris, or blinds, veil the windows, creating misty transparencies of her white and green garden. Silver-leaf moldings and crystal accessories underline the cool quiet.

BEDROOM BY

Tony Duquette

LOS ANGELES, CALIF.

Tony Duquette believes a decorator's privilege is to help clients realize their own individuality, in surroundings that delight and sometimes surprise the eye. Here, in a room of romantic serenity, where the tester bed rises almost architecturally from floor to ceiling, plain linen bed curtains are lined with the same Fortuny print that covers the wall. Wall fabric at each side of the bed is actually applied to floor-length roller shades that cover long windows, creating restful duskiness. The bed throw is alpaca. In the corners, panels of mirror, taken from a screen, give glitter and depth.

LIBRARY BY

William Baldwin

APARTMENT OF MOLLIE PARNIS

NEW YORK, N.Y.

Decoration is not an end in itself but a means to an end—the end being a climate in which the owner lives most comfortably and self-expressively. Such is the philosophy of William Baldwin of Baldwin and Martin, who also believes that no room should ever be "done" but should always leave an "open end" for new acquisitions and improvements as life goes on. As background for the art collection of his fashion-designer client, he stretched the walls with moiré, then gave the pictures tinted mats, baroque frames. A rare rug suggested the taupe paper taffeta sofa covering.

LIVING ROOM BY

Charlotte Handy

IN HER OWN HOME,

OLD LYME, CONN.

In her New England home, Mrs. Truman Handy of Thedlow deftly puts her decorating philosophy to work, using one basic color with accents, mixing furniture and styles, but taking care that they are all compatible in scale. Here are French, Victorian, 18th-century English—in the same classic purlieus as an Adam mantel, a Palladian doorway, and Greek Revival columns. Flowers, plants, books, personable evidences of living, are as important to her as the fineness of furnishings. She insists upon meticulous tailoring—as in the beautifully fitting sofa slipcover.

LIBRARY BY

Mary E. Dunn

NEW YORK, N.Y.

The room below was designed by Miss Mary E. Dunn, head of the firm of Nancy McClelland, Inc., and now president of the American Institute of Interior Designers. An expert on rare papers, she used an antique French scenic to give a feeling of spaciousness to an elliptical room which measures a mere 12′ by 16′. She shares with all enlightened decorators the opinion that a decorator must not intrude his tastes upon a client but encourage the client's self-expression. The Louis XVI flavor here was suggested by a library of books dealing with the art and architecture of the period.

LIVING ROOM AND SITTING ROOM

Ellen McCluskey

IN HER OWN APARTMENT
NEW YORK, N. Y.

Mrs. Ellen Lehman McCluskey has been described as a charter member of the return-to-elegance school of decoration. Consistently, she lives with the pleasant formality of 18th-century French furniture, the sheen of silk and satin, and a collection of modern art. The living room, which flows into a smaller sitting room, demonstrates her insistence upon comfortable conversation groups and clear traffic lanes—a practicality she has applied to hotels and offices as well as homes.

LIVING ROOM BY

Mabel Schamberg

IN SUBURBAN ILLINOIS

This is the room that is shown on our front cover. Miss Mabel Schamberg, a vivid personality herself, believes that compelling individual choice of color springboards the best room design, because color is a true and emotional reflection of personality. In their selection of fine abstract art, these clients immediately revealed their color preferences, as well as a predilection for elegance that is more geometrically straight-lined than baroque. Second to color in this decorator's book comes a smooth-flowing arrangement, which she feels takes on more interest if it has an unexpected feature, like the long, fireside bibelot shelf.

LIVING-DINING ROOM BY

John FitzGibbons

HOME OF MRS. THOMAS KEMPNER

PURCHASE, N.Y.

John FitzGibbons of Yale Burge, Inc., an advocate of the fresh and unexpected, uses it to meet the challenges of this living room. He makes obstructive posts, as though by design, mark off a dining area; he gets sofa seating in small space with an antique iron day bed; he borrows daylight via hour-glass curtaining, and lights the table with a French railway station lamp.

LIBRARY-MUSIC ROOM BY

HOME OF MR. ROBERT TOBIN
SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS

Norman Foster feels that a decorator must give top priority to a study of a client's needs, then carry them out with simplicity and realism. An appraisal of one client who is bibliophile and connoisseur of music produced this vast and elegantly functional room where similar ranks of bookshelves pattern the walls at each end. Music-playing equipment is built in behind cabinet doors, and walls flanking the mantel are covered with grillecloth to hide the speaker system.

LIVING ROOM BY

Margaret Sedwick

DALLAS, TEXAS

Successful decoration is a joint enterprise, a matter of constant rapport between client and decorator, in shopping as well as planning. This is the philosophy of Margaret Sedwick who, besides her American design affiliations, is a Fellow of the Royal Society of Arts in England. She believes that a house should be allowed to grow, with lovely things added from time to time. Sunlit colors here—sherry, topaz, orange, lemon, lime, mossy green—spring from the elegant crewel-embroidered sofa covering. Rug took its color cue from the same floral pattern and the brick wall.

LIBRARY-MUSIC ROOM BY

Otto Zenke

HOME OF MR. AND MRS. CHARLES H. BABCOCK

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C.

According to Otto Zenke, besides being aware of his client's tastes, a decorator must also see how the changing social scene is reflected in changing living arrangements. Servantless informality, the family room, the room of double purpose are examples. One such room is shown overleaf left, stylishly acknowledging its owners' taste for traditional—pine paneling, Queen Anne chairs, damask in shades and upholstery—yet including such modernities as a window wall, concealed music makers, and an acoustical leather wall stylishly studded with brass nailheads.

DINING ROOM BY

William Pahlmann

HOME OF MR. AND MRS. B. W. CRAIN, JR.

LONGVIEW, TEXAS

In William Pahlmann's phrase, a room should suit the time, the place, the people, and the purpose; and since people are a mixture of the past and present, he feels they are happiest when they live with some of each. In a mahogany-paneled, glass-walled room, in the strictest idiom of contemporary architecture yet a paragon of silken elegance, he has put such riches of the past as Regency table and chairs, a rare Chinese Chippendale pagoda cabinet, Chinese Export porcelain, and Georgian silver. Console is a 17th-century Ming altar table; vases are of Ch'ien Lung Dynasty.

Russell Lynes:

WHAT DID THEY DO TILL THE DECORATOR CAME?

Stucco bas reliefs, thermae in Herculaneum, 79 A.D.

When Elsie de Wolfe was well into her seventies (and more properly and more augustly called Lady Mendl), she used to entertain her dinner guests in Hollywood by standing on her head. Lady Mendl had, in a sense, been standing on her head since she was a very young woman. Before she became America's first woman decorator (which was a headstand in itself in the days when it was not quite nice for ladies to have jobs except as teachers), she was briefly an actress who made her reputation with "a double back roll onto the floor" in a play called A Cup of Tea. "This," she wrote in her biography, "was considered very fine acting." It was nothing, however, to the acrobatics through which she was to put American taste in the early decades of this century.

So flamboyant was the personality and success of Lady Mendl that a great many people thought that the profession of interior decoration was, if not invented by her, at least made reputable by her. In one sense, but only one sense, it was. It was she who picked up the glove thrown down by Candace Wheeler in an article called "Interior Decoration As a Profession for Women" in Outlook magazine. It was a new idea and a challenge, and Elsie liked both. But she was not inventing a profession; she was merely changing its sex, or, more accurately, giving the female an opportunity to exercise professionally a prerogative she had long exercised privately—the dictation of domestic taste.

During most of the last century and in the early part of this one, the term "interior decorator" was almost exclusively applied to upholsterers. They not only repaired and remade furniture, but they also sold new pieces along with carpets and fabrics and fringe, and they gave heartily of their advice on Early Georgian hall. Furniture and architecture by William Kent, 1714-1760.

Russell Lynes, managing editor of Harper's Magazine, has written extensively about American taste and homes in The Tastemakers, The Domesticated Americans, and other books. He has two houses, a town house built in the 1870's and a New England country house, circa 1750.

Dutch interior, 17th Century.

matters of household taste. But essentially the inside of a house, like the outside, was the business of the architect who designed it. He was concerned with every detail of interior structural delight, just as he was with every exterior one. He designed the parlor moldings and made renderings of the ornament that the plaster expert (in England he was called a stuccador) applied to the ceiling. He designed mantels and cupboards and concerned himself about the color of the walls and the size of the dining-room chandelier. He was consulted about carpets and curtains and sideboards.

"When a villa is designed by an architect," wrote Andrew Jackson Downing, America's principal guardian of taste in the 1840's, "he generally superintends and directs the finishing of the interior." He noted, however, that "in villas of considerable importance, interior decorators, who devote themselves to this branch of the profession, are called in to complete the whole, as the builder leaves it." He mentioned one in particular, Mr. George Platt of New York, "at present the most popular decorator in the country," who possessed "talent enough to take an apartment [the word apartment then meant room], or suite of apartments, design and execute the decorations and color, and furnish them throughout in any style."

Library, Osterley House. Designed by Robert Adam. 1761-1780.

Brighton Pavilion, by John Nash. Corridor, banquet room, and kitchen. 1822.

I do not wish to put too much importance on George Platt, who was my great-grandfather, but he is a convenient link between Elsie de Wolfe and the founders of her profession in the Eighteenth Century in England. Platt was an Englishman, and though he lived and prospered in America, he remained one until his death. Interior decoration was, so far as he was concerned, an English profession, and he took care not to be identified with upholsterers and shopkeepers. The sign on his offices at 53 Broadway said "Interior Decorations."

French bedchamber, Percier and Fontaine, 1812.

When Platt was a young man in London in the first decades of the last century, the profession of interior decoration was doubly established. On the one hand it had been for a century a branch of the profession of architecture, and on the other it was identified with the craftsmanship of great furniture designers and manufacturers. There was a brilliant tradition of architects, men like William Kent and the brothers Adam, who were idolized by the fashionable and sought after primarily because of their delight in interiors and their superlative talents in creating and overseeing every detail and nuance of surface and furnishing. And there were names like Chippendale and Hepplewhite that were synonyms for elegance and taste.

It is worth pausing for a minute to consider William Kent (as Platt unquestionably did with awe), for it was he who first envisioned the architect's job as encompassing every aspect of a house from its cornices to its console tables. Kent, a Yorkshireman, was a student at St. Luke's Academy in Rome when he was discovered by the famous patron of the arts and architecture, Lord Burlington, in 1719. Burlington brought the talented (and, it was said, nearly illiterate) young man back to London with him, and together they created a series of country houses in the Palladian manner. Horace Walpole, who had an opinion about everything and especially strong feelings about architecture and decoration, said that Burlington was "the Apollo of the arts" and Kent was "his proper priest."

Louis C. Tiffany's New York residence. About 1885.

Kent believed that only furniture that he designed himself was entirely harmonious with the elaborate decoration that he imposed on the walls and ceilings of his interiors, and he was the first architect so to insist. Evidently his contemporaries were delighted with his insistence; he became, as mentors of taste not infrequently have, something of a cult. "His oracle was so much consulted by all who affected taste," wrote Walpole, "that nothing was thought compleat [sic] without his insistence. He was not only consulted for furniture, as frames for pictures, glasses, tables, chairs, etc., but for plate, for a barge, for a cradle." His authority extended even to what ladies should wear in such exemplary surroundings. "And so impetuous was fashion," Walpole went on, "that two great ladies prevailed upon him to make designs for their birthday gowns. The one he dressed in a petticoat with columns of the five orders [of classical architecture]; the other like a bronze, in a copper-coloured sattin [sic] with ornaments of gold."

My brief story of the origins of the profession of interior decoration has, as you have noticed, been proceeding backwards. The profession was established just about two centuries before Elsie de Wolfe went into business with the help of the architect Stanford White (who got her the job of decorating the New York Colony Club) and a little more than a century before George Platt came to New York to establish himself. But the beginnings of interior decoration are not, of course, modern (as historians use the word); they are ancient. There have always been interior decorators, or so one must assume from the decorative drawings of animals made on the caves of Altamira in Spain thirty thousand years ago. The embellishment of his dwelling has concerned man as long as history has known him. The furnishings of his house have challenged his ingenuity since the time when he first converted a stump into a chair.

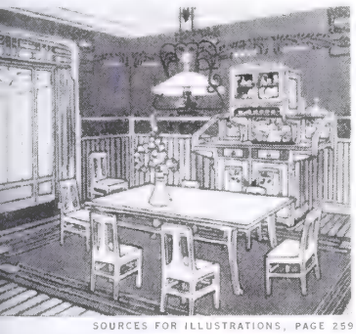
The earliest decoration, however, to have had a direct effect on the modern profession of interior decoration was that of the houses of Pompeii and Herculaneum, which, for the convenience of posterity if hardly of their inhabitants, were preserved in the lava and ash from Vesuvius that engulfed them in 69 A.D. Robert Adam, the older of the famous eighteenth-century architect-decorator brothers, insisted that contrary to general belief the Romans did not live in monotonous, solemn halls; Rome, he said, was "tasteful, not profuse." It was the domestic scale of Pomeii that he so admired, not the massive public buildings of Imperial Rome; it was the fresh and pleasing frescoes of mythological subjects and the mosaics of fruits and fish and flowers that inspired and delighted him. Unlike the great palaces of the Renaissance, whose architects had a different view of what Romans were like, Adam was concerned with human scale and the relation of the size and comfort and dignity of people to the size of rooms. The palaces of the Renaissance dwarfed their inhabitants by the grandeur and the massiveness of their ornament; neither furniture nor people seemed to bear any relation to their surroundings. "The first modern Italian artists," says Mario Praz, the historian, in his remarkable and beautiful book, An Illustrated History of Furnishings, "had erroneously conceived everything according to a canon of magnificence, and for three centuries all of Europe had simply groaned slavishly under the weight of this error."



It was architects with a concern not only for human scale but for the delights of interior detail who rescued Europe, if not America, from Renaissance drafts and damps and massive halls. We had our own so-called Renaissance toward the end of the last century, when the Vanderbilts and Astors of New York and the Potter Palmers of Chicago and the gold-rush millionaires of San Francisco built on a scale to make a Medici envious . . . or possibly to feel cozy by comparison.

It is fair to say that it is characteristic of decorators, as we now use the term, to look backward or very far afield, and to search out and recast in new molds the delights of the past and of exotic lands. In one sense this is what Kent was doing with his modernized version of Palladio. (Please turn to page 250)

CHOCOLATE

—RICH, ELEGANT, IRRESISTIBLE

First to taste "chocolatl" was the 16th-century royal court of Mexico. The Emperor Montezuma served it to the Spanish conquistadors in great golden goblets. It was a bitter brew then, not at all to the Spaniards' taste. Nevertheless, the explorer Cortez recognized the possibilities inherent in the precious little brown beans and took them back to Spain in 1519. There, the Spaniards crushed the beans and sweetened them with honey and vanilla, creating something comparable, we assume, to our breakfast chocolate. Spanish gentlewomen were so fond of the drink that they took little pots of chocolate with them to church.

The Spaniards kept the secret of this new drink so well that it was more than a hundred years before the rest of the world knew it and the chocolate craze swept through the royal houses of Europe. It is believed the first box of chocolates was presented to Louis XIV when he was betrothed to the daughter of the Spanish King, Philip IV. The first chocolate shop was opened in London around 1657. By the middle of the 18th Century, the little dark brown beans had completed the round trip back to the New World, and the American colonists could share in this "new" New World discovery.

Since then, no well-polished sweet tooth, American or European, has been able to resist the irresistible flavor of chocolate.

Herewith, a choice collection of chocolate recipes to delight all who delight in chocolate and, on page 251, "What You Should Know About Chocolate and Chocolate Cookery."

By HELEN McCULLY

The cake that inspired our marble cake fantasy was adapted from *The Delectable Past by Esther B. Aresty, a richly diverting social history with a generous collection of old recipes brought up to date by a knowing and loving hand. A book that should be in the library of every cook worthy of the name.

Miss Parloa's Rich Chocolate Marble Cake

- ¾ cup (1½ sticks) butter
- 1½ cups sugar
- 3 eggs
- 2½ cups sifted all-purpose flour
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 3 teaspoons baking powder
- ⅞ cup milk
- 1½ teaspoons vanilla
- 4 squares (1-ounce size) unsweetened chocolate, or 4 envelopes (1-ounce size) no-melt unsweetened chocolate

Grease an 8″ spring-form pan thoroughly, then line bottom and sides with wax paper. Melt the chocolate squares over hot, not boiling, water.

Cream the butter until soft, then gradually work in the sugar until fluffy. Add the eggs, one at a time, beating only long enough to blend well after each addition.

Resift the flour with salt and baking powder. Add to the creamed mixture alternately with milk, ending with flour. Stir in the vanilla.

Spoon 6 tablespoons of the batter into a small bowl and combine with the melted or no-melt chocolate thoroughly. Pour balance of batter into prepared pan. Drop spoonfuls of the chocolate mixture, at intervals, on top of the white batter.

"Marble" in broad streaks by pulling a spatula through the batter, taking care not to dilute the chocolate any more than you can help, since the rich streaks of chocolate give this cake its very special quality.

Bake in a preheated 350° F. oven 1 hour and 15 to 20 minutes, or until a toothpick inserted in the center comes out dry. Cool briefly, then turn out on a cake rack and pull off the wax paper gently. When cold, frost with

Marble Frosting

- 1 cup sugar
- ½ cup water
- 2 egg whites
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice, strained
- 1 envelope (1-ounce size) no-melt chocolate

Combine sugar with water. Bring to a boil slowly, stirring constantly. Once mixture has reached the boiling point, cook, without stirring, until syrup dropped from tip of spoon makes long gossamer threads or syrup reaches 225° F. on thermometer.

Beat egg whites with a dash of salt until they stand in peaks when you lift the beater. Add the syrup to the beaten whites in a steady, thin stream, beating constantly. Unless there is a helper at hand, this is best done with an electric beater. When all the syrup is in, stir in the lemon juice. Finally, mix the chocolate in lightly, so it remains in broad streaks or "marbleized." Frost sides and top of cake. (Please turn to page 252)

How to be owned by

by BORIS GOLDOVSKY

An account—by a man of eminence in American music—of how he acquired one of the country's major operatic libraries, with suggestions for starting a library of opera literature, libretti, and recordings for yourself

A youngster who innocently starts out by purchasing and owning a few music books or recordings may wake up one day being owned and bankrupted by a library of several thousand volumes and albums. Bankrupt or not, he will in all probability continue to be driven by an unquenchable desire for the latest set of 14th-century madrigals or the newest super-stereophonic equipment of ever-increasing stratospheric fidelity.

My own situation is slightly different. Having unlimited access to live music—much of it produced by myself or by members of my opera company—I am relatively immune to discus germs and the tape virus, but I do have a severe case of pernicious bibliomania.

The first attack of this incurable affliction struck me when I was 13 years old and studying to become a pianist in Berlin. In that faraway winter of 1922, Germany was going through a dreadful period of galloping inflation when the value of the money fell daily and precipitously. An American dollar that might be worth seven hundred thousand German marks on Monday would buy one million marks on Friday and double that amount the next time you went to the bank. While the prices of commodities would also increase with frightening rapidity, they could not keep pace with the monetary devaluation. As a result of this discrepancy, the foreign visitors who were lucky enough to have access to hard currency (of the English, Swiss, or U.S. variety) were in an enviable position. My mother and I, who had left Soviet Russia some months earlier with a meager hoard of two hundred dollars, discovered that we could manage quite comfortably on one dollar a week, provided that the German money bought with that single dollar was immediately converted into food and lodging. Holding on to the local greenbacks for even a few days might result in a sharp decline of their purchasing power.

A few weeks after our arrival in Berlin, I was befriended by a gentleman from Chicago who was very fond of music and who could listen for hours while I practiced Debussy on his rather miserable upright piano. One day he mentioned that if I could find him a decent grand piano he would be willing to pay for it in American dollars. I knew of a lovely Bluethner baby grand in a little piano store where I was told that if I could persuade my Chicago music lover to buy the instrument for forty American dollars, I would be entitled to a commission of ten percent. It all worked like a charm and within hours, it seemed, I found myself with four crisp new dollar bills.

ARCHITECTURAL FORECAST

Six architects share their thoughts and drawings with House Beautiful. Houses-to-come in Washington, California, Missouri, New Jersey, Connecticut, and the West Indies.

JAMES DELONG, Architectural Editor

RALPH ANDERSON

plans a vertical house of wood for the shore of Lake Washington

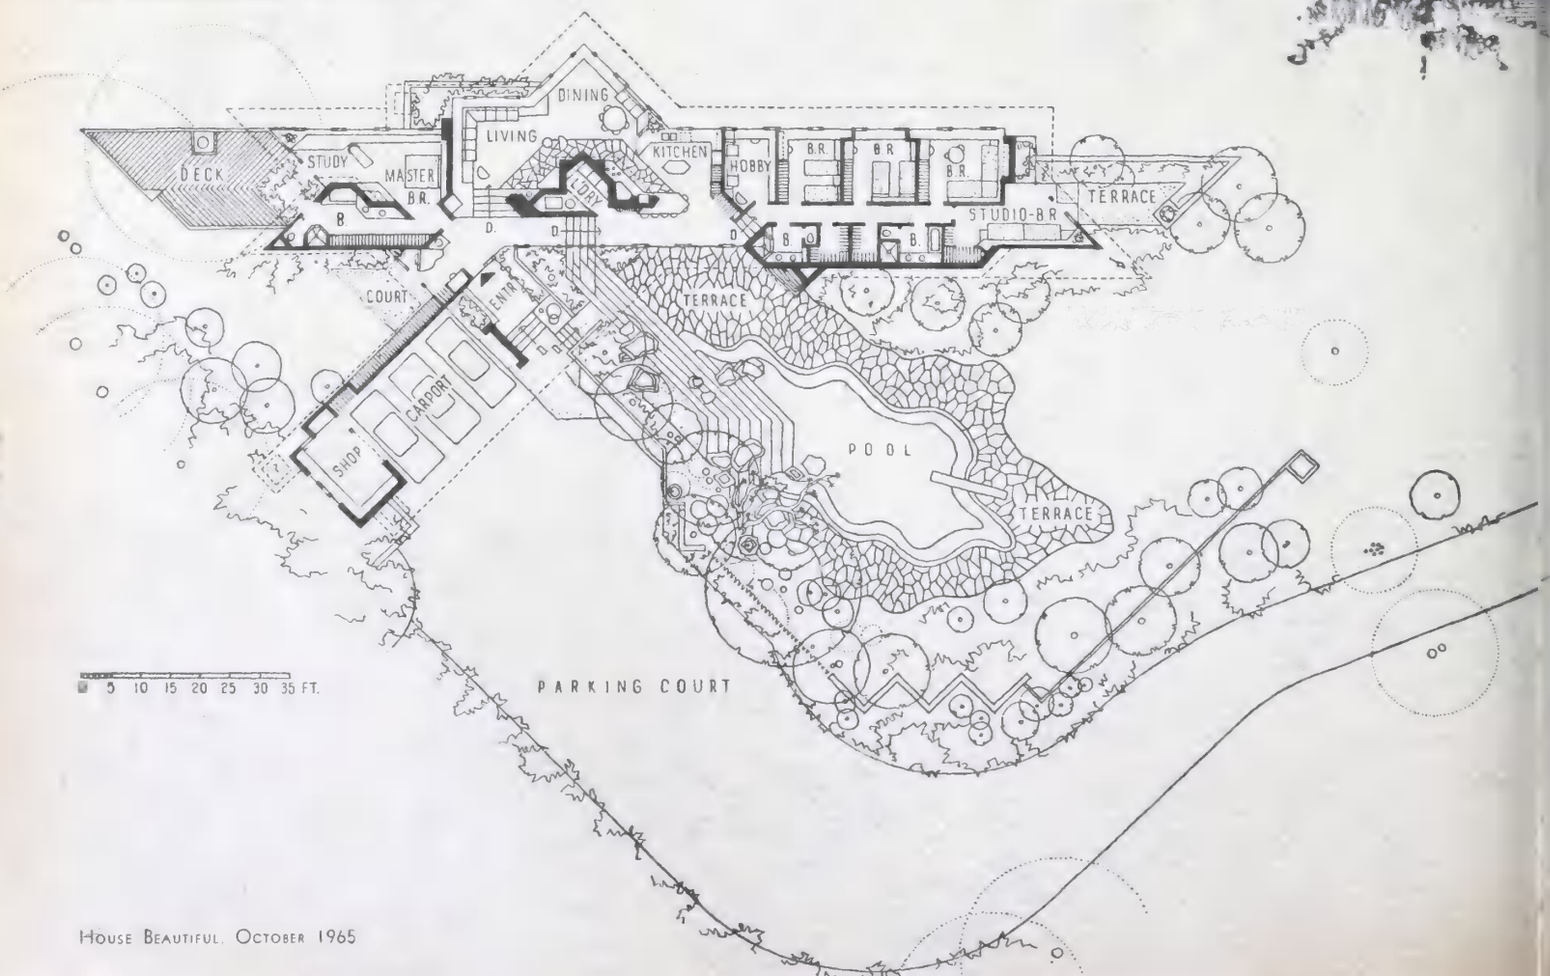
BASEMENT

The form of this strikingly dramatic house developed from the rigorous dictates of its site: a steep and narrow wooded plot that slopes sharply down to the edge of Seattle's Lake Washington.



Since the narrowness of the site necessitates the compact grouping of the floor plan into three separate levels, a tall, prowlike window "shaft" rising continuously from basement to third story will flood the interiors with ambient light and enable the principal areas of all three floors to command panoramic views of the lake and the rugged Cascade mountain range beyond. Ample outdoor living will be made possible—and especially inviting—by means of spacious cantilevered decks that soar out over the slope from the first-floor level.

The Ernest Henleys are both doctors—he is a physicist and she is a physician. They have two children in their early teens. The Henley family's informal pattern of Northwest living has suggested a traditional, yet romantic, solution of grouping family activities around the kitchen and living-area fireplaces. Although the floor plan is basically open—and it is really open in the three-dimensional sense, where the window prow pierces the intervening floor levels—there will be private spaces where privacy is required.

In keeping with the casual mode of living that seems as native to the Northwest as its own building materials, the interiors and exteriors of the house will be surfaced with natural Western cedar, and the fireplaces will be built of native stone.

Triangular variations from a basic theme of disciplined rectangles give this house a reflexive, free-flowing shape that will allow it to fit easily into the natural contours of the site.

OF SAN FRANCISCO

Hidden from view on its approach side, and nestled snugly into its commanding ridge-top, the house will look out over another forested ridge to the Pacific Ocean beyond.

Client-to-architect (in a 175-word description of what is surely the perfect description of a dream house): "We want our house to be gentle in spots, strong in spots. We want to have the sense of being on our own little island. We want our four children (a room for each with lots of shelves and built-ins) to feel when they wake up that they are living in the treetops. We want views from each room. Lots of windows. Large plants and window seats. We want intimate areas. Different levels. Sunshine. Sun patterns. Glass, with wood interruptions. We'd love a music center. Good lighting. Soft lighting. Definite place for reading. Places for paintings, objets d'art. A place for everything. The kitchen? Large enough to eat in. Center work table. Windows over work area. Hand-crafted look. Lots of storage but not smothered with cupboards. We want to feel glorious in the kitchen. The master bedroom: a real retreat. A bed-study-sitting-fireplace area, with its own porch, TV, dressing room. Shelves, drawers, closets. No furniture. P.S. Must have: loom in the living room, a big cantilevered deck over the ravine."

Architect's solution: On a ten-acre site on a ridge in the Soquel area, Santa Cruz, California—with a spectacular view across a second, tree-lined ridge to the Pacific Ocean—a large (3,800 square feet of interior space), finely detailed residence for Dr. and Mrs. Victor Ohta and family. All of the principal rooms will share sunny orientation to a magnificent ravine—filled with many live oaks and other specimens—and a creek.

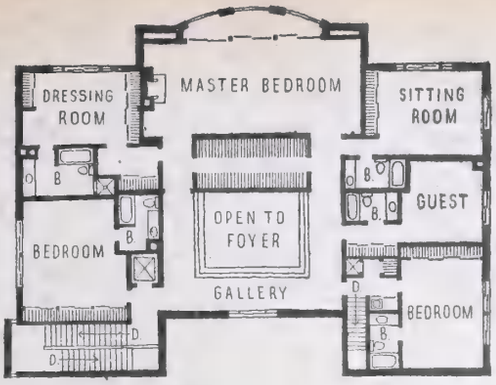
From the street, the hovering, vaulted porte-cochere and almost windowless façade give the house an air of monumental elegance that blends well with neighboring houses of an earlier vintage.



From the garden, the house will face its reflecting pool and southern exposure with tall, arched dignity. The exterior materials will be old brick, hammered limestone; bronze window sash.

MEZZANINE

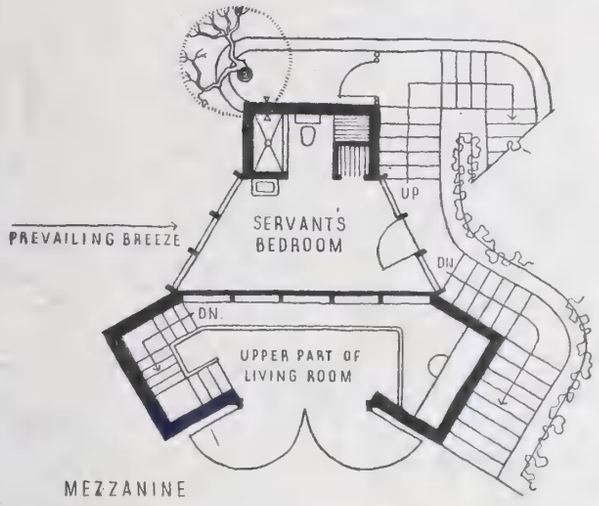
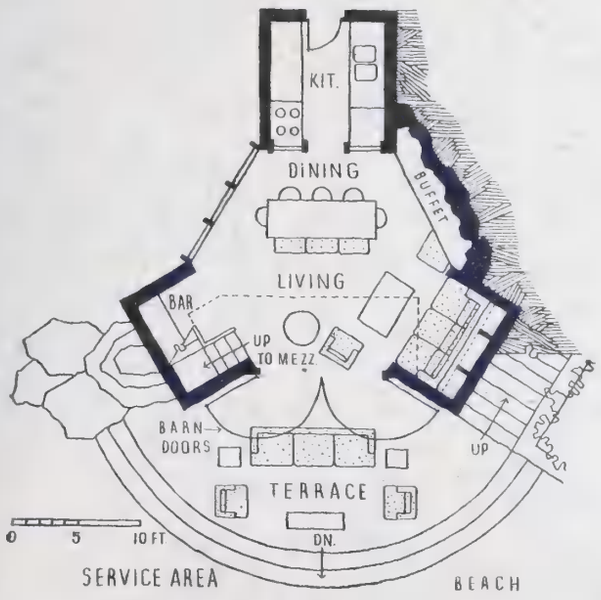
"With today's emphasis on suburban living, it is distinctly a refreshing experience to be asked to design a town house. A number of factors made this a particularly intriguing commission. The site, a 100-by-200-foot lot, virtually flat and treeless, is confined on three sides by eight-foot-high brick walls. Situated in a venerable private street, or place, featuring three-storied houses of an elegant vintage, the mood—if not the idiom—was indicated. Many of the surrounding houses are of the carriage-house period.



"Among other objectives, it was our responsibility to make this a compatible mid-twentieth-century residence, designed to accept and integrate the automobile. Rather than desecrate the rear of the property with driveways, turnabouts, and garages, it seemed reasonable to accommodate these facilities on the north, or street side of the house. A generous, skylit porte-cochere unites the garages and provides a protective, courtlike shelter for approaching guests.



"Since this is essentially to be a winter house, all major living rooms face south, overlooking a small, disciplined water garden that will provide a setting for sculpture. As this residence will house a major art collection, high ceilings and good lighting were important considerations. Mezzanine attics will be provided between floors to allow convenient access to works of art currently in storage. The skylit entrance hall will be flanked on three sides by a balcony where illuminated, canted parapets can be used for storage of portfolios and the display of prints and drawings."

Stairway carved in cliff face will lead to suspension bridges that give access to the various room levels, and will widen occasionally to become terraces for sitting, sunning, and outdoor showers. The planting spaces along stairs will burgeon with papaya, mango, hibiscus, and bougainvillaea.

WILLIAM K. FRIZZELL

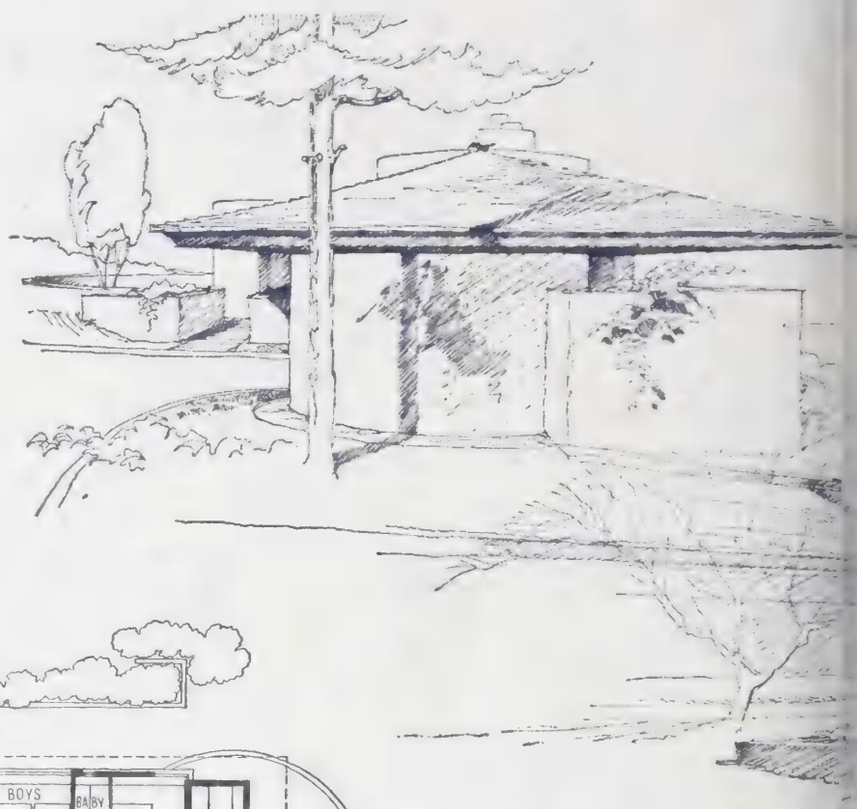
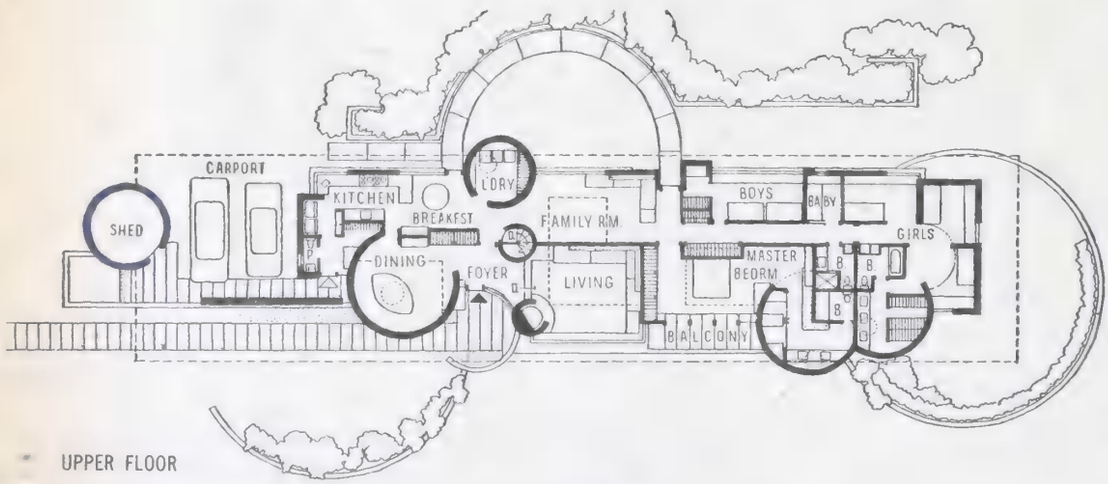
plans a personal skyscraper for the West Indies



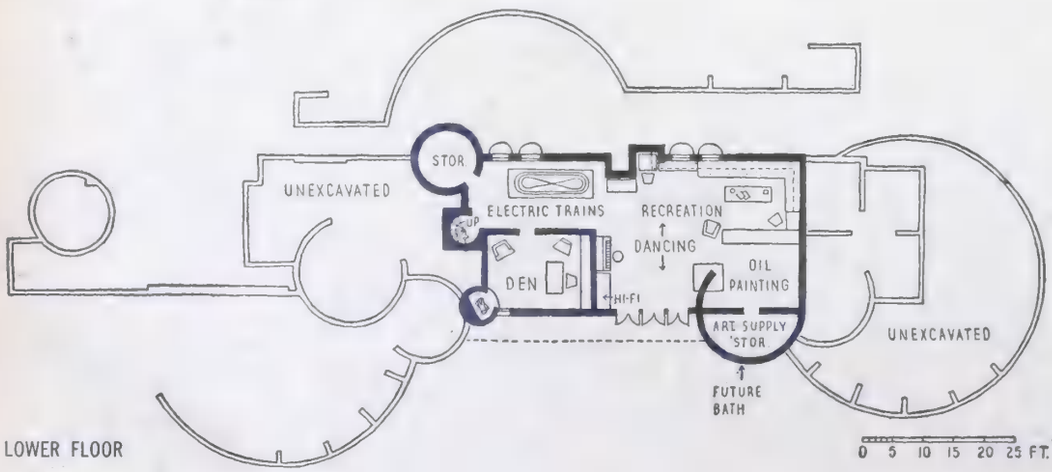
"This house was conceived for my family as an escape from the city. It is to be built on the island of Grenada, West Indies, on a point of land teeming with peacocks, goats, and hummingbirds, where a 100-foot-high cliff rises from a crescent beach that is protected by an underwater coral reef.



"The house may be constructed in stages. Six-sided rooms are to be arranged one above the other to form a tower. Closets, baths, and built-in furniture are to be contained in U-shape piers that support the floors. The area of each level is less than 340 square feet. Concrete surfaces will be grooved horizontally to make construction joints invisible and to provide ledges for vines and mosses that thrive in the warm, moist climate. At each pier, two openings will be fitted with wood jalousies to control privacy and the unvarying trade winds, while the third opening—framing a fine view of the harbor, the town of St. George's, and the jungled mountains beyond—will be screened.

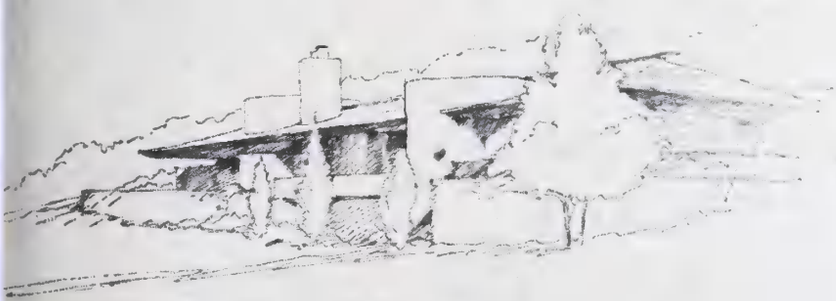
"Access to the rooms will be by landscaped steps and paths climbing the face of the cliff. Suspension bridges of chains and slats will connect step landings with the house so that each bedroom will seem to be at ground level.

"Since there will be little indoor entertaining, only a small living room is planned, with a tiny dining area tucked beneath a book-lined balcony-study. Wooden barn-type doors, 16 feet high, open onto the terrace and beach. All materials will be chosen for ease of maintenance. Floors will be concrete, covered with circular straw rugs from Dominica. Each room level will have its own garden hose and a drain for cleaning with running water."



UPPER FLOOR

The graceful interplay of angular and curved geometry transforms the floor plans into graceful patterns of abstraction, as well as harmonious, highly functional living spaces.



LOWER FLOOR

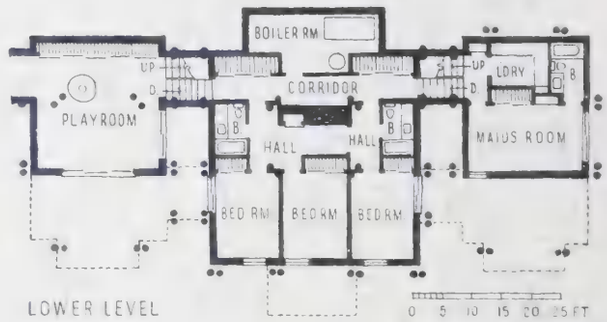
MALCOLM WELLS
OF NEW JERSEY
designs a graceful family house in Cherry Hill

The low, sweeping horizontal eave line of the roof, pierced by occasional gently curving wall masses, will make this house one with the soft, rolling landscape of New Jersey.

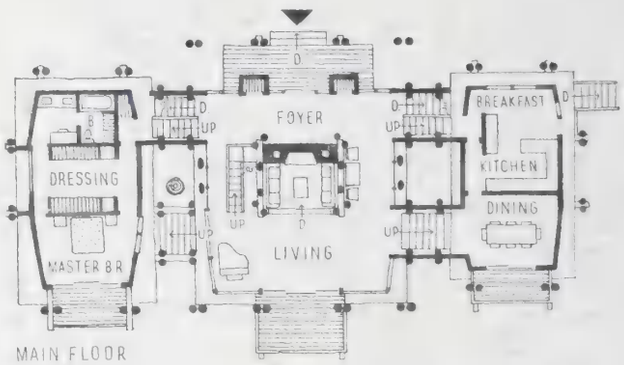
Each weekend during the months that this house has been under construction, a stream of cars has found the hidden lane that leads to the site. At first, the turreted, castlelike walls seemed to startle the curious, but as the character of the building has emerged and its purpose becomes clear—to complement, rather than dominate the site—their comments are gradually changing from skeptical criticism to enthusiastic acceptance.

In this crowded corner of southern New Jersey, untouched land is almost gone. The Clifford Ellis family had the good fortune to find one of the last open properties, and they were determined to keep it that way. Except for a bit of formal lawn in the circular areas surrounding the house, the entire site will be left as an unspoiled, natural haven for the wild life so frantic for cover in this tree-felling, lawn-mowing generation.

The Ellis family is a large one; a father, a mother, and six children. For indoor family recreation, the entire lower floor has been set aside. This will be made possible by the use of electric heat, and by placing the air conditioners up in the trusses so that no valuable floor space will be lost. The result: space for a den, a painting room, storage, and a whopping big playroom. The girls will share a modified dormitory; rooms within a room as a compromise between privacy and economy. For the parents, a large bedroom and a balcony that overlook a rolling, pastoral view.

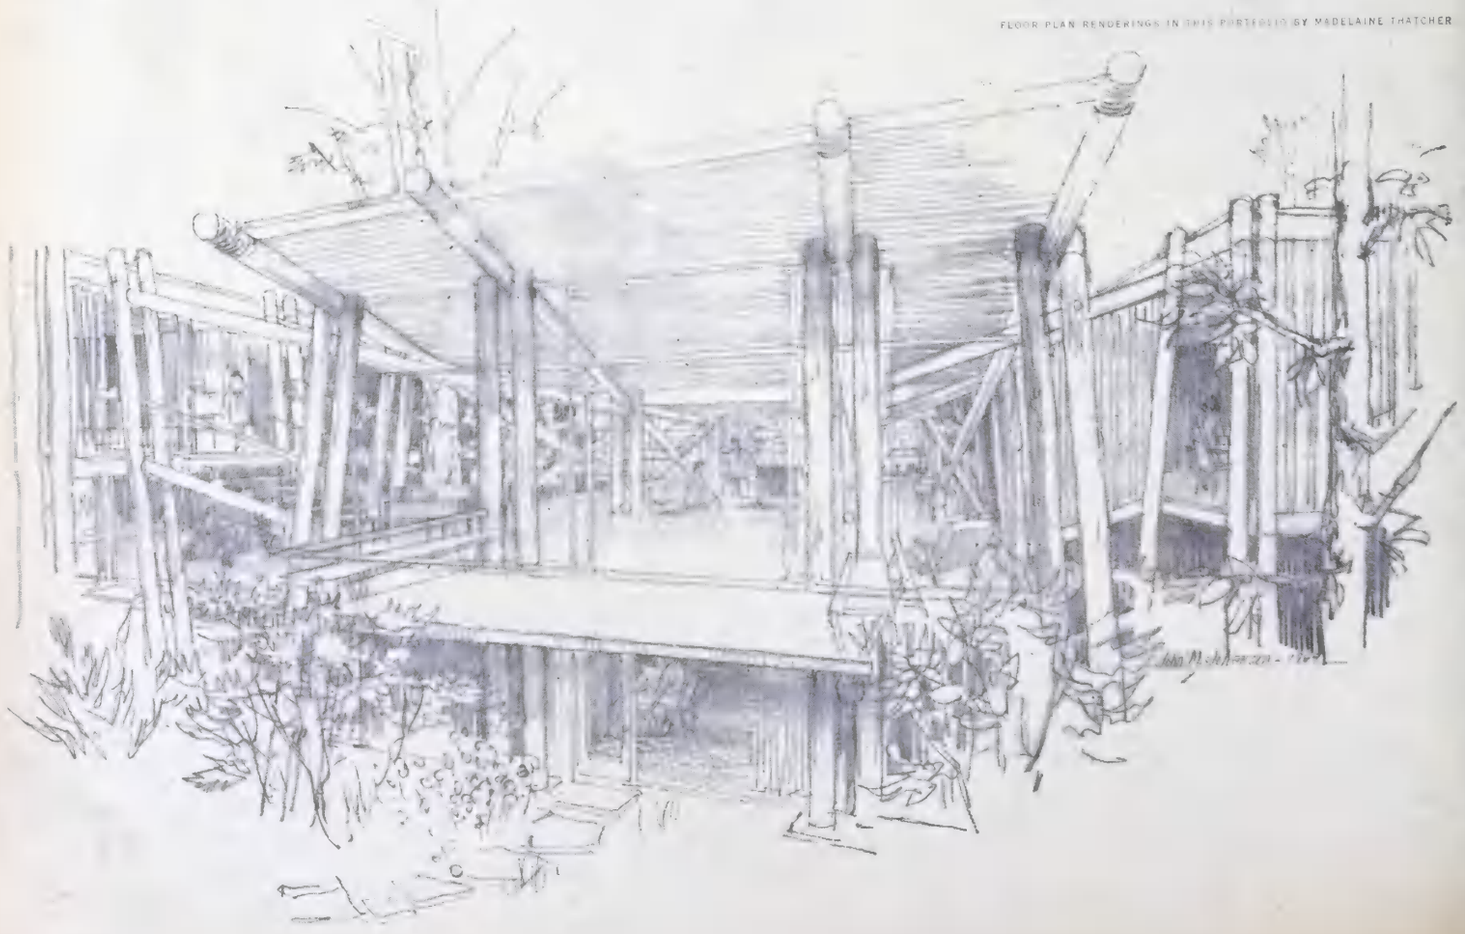


In spite of its calculated design unity, this will be a house of many moods and many aspects; light and dark; curvilinear and rectangular—all existing within one geometric harmony.



JOHN M. JOHANSEN

OF NEW CANAAN



creates a house of poles for Greenwich, Connecticut

The unique "treehouse" character of this home was suggested by its unusually rustic setting—a steep slope embanking a rushing stream and covered with trees and rock outcroppings. Underlining the woody nature of the surroundings, telephone poles will be used as basic structural material, creating a powerful, forestlike framework. The house is arranged on several levels that outline areas that accommodate the particular needs of parents, three children, and a servant. These levels are connected by flights of stairs and covered by several roofs. Timbers braced against stone buttresses support the stair treads and carry the broad sloping roofs, leaving the window and sliding glass door areas as nonstructural screen walls. The poles are unprocessed Douglas fir, which will age and mellow naturally. The roofs and pole ends will be sheathed with copper and allowed to erode to a light green color.

Ralph Anderson, a Seattle native, graduated from the University of Washington in 1951 and almost immediately started practice on his own. As an undergraduate, he had designed, built and sold houses during summers to finance his education, and his work is still largely residential.

Aaron G. Green has established a reputation on his own, as well as an associate on many Frank Lloyd Wright projects. He attended Alabama State, the Chicago Academy of Fine Arts, Cooper Union, and studied under Mr. Wright at Taliesen. He opened his San Francisco architectural office in 1951.

William Bernoudy studied architecture under Frank Lloyd Wright. He opened practice in St. Louis in 1947 and has since built houses from Maine to California. One of the current projects of his firm (Bernoudy, Mutrux and Bauer) is designing a symphony pavilion for Washington University.

William Kenneth Frizzell taught architecture at the University of Arkansas after graduating from Princeton in 1950. Before opening his own office, he was associated with several prominent architectural firms, including that of Edward D. Stone. He now practices chiefly in New York and Florida.

Malcolm Wells never went to architectural school, but was registered as an architect in 1953 on the basis of experience. He has had his own office since 1955, and has done residential, industrial, and religious projects. His special interest is the conservation of greenery in the cityscape.

John M. Johansen organized his own architectural firm in 1948. Harvard-educated, he has lectured there and at many other large universities. Creator of the U.S. Embassy in Dublin, Ireland, he currently is doing two libraries, two theaters, and redeveloping a full city block in Baltimore.

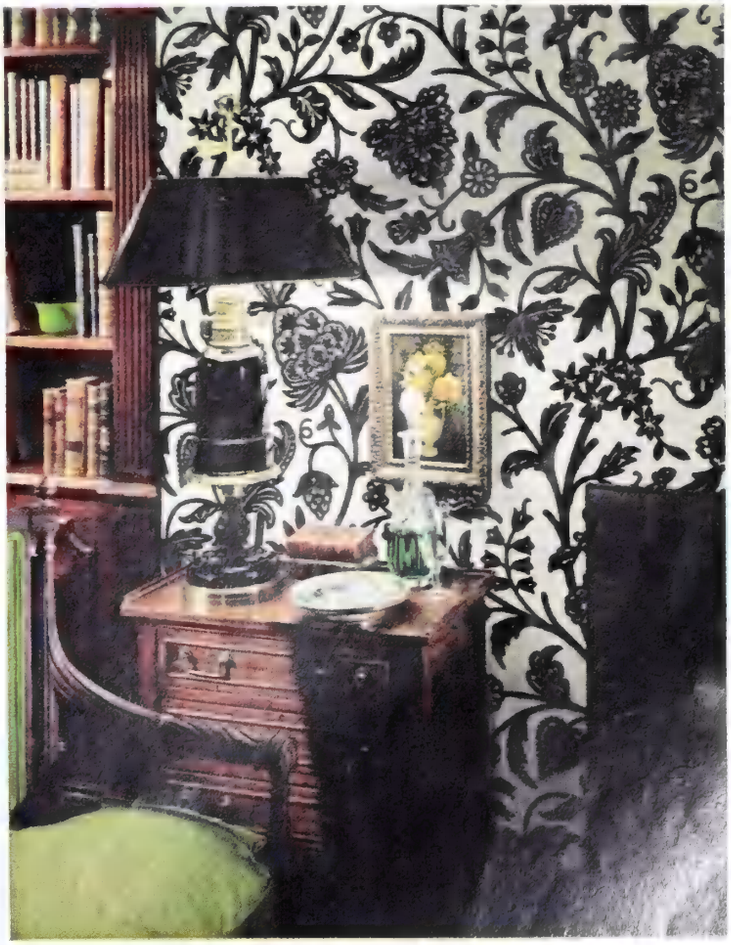
WONDERFUL WALLPAPERS



Astounding, and never more so than now, the marvelous effects well-chosen wallpaper can achieve. It can set a fresh color plan, a period, a mood, faster than any other purchase. It can act as a surrogate architect, playing down the unwelcome beam, the extra door: it can magnify a small room, bring intimate charm to a large one. Papering just one wall with distinguished design is like placing a priceless screen or a fine picture where it will compel the eye. Increasingly, bath and dressing-room units are being papered—fearlessly, for finishes are now impervious to steam and splash. Not to be skipped: the fringe benefits of lining an armoire, the drawers of a desk or chest, with a pretty paper.

"Devonshire Garden" wallpaper, opposite, by Ronkonkoma, gives the high-ceilinged living room of a dignified old town house a look of its own earlier times in a fanciful floral, which is crisp enough to go in a contemporary room. Subtly mottled and textured, like the end papers sometimes used in fine bookbinding, the Scalamandré wallpaper, below left, establishes an immediate feeling of quiet richness and pleases the eye with serene, nondemanding allover pattern. "Barbara Crewel," black on white, a flocked, stylized version of an heirloom motif, puts wonderful pattern on a single wall, preferably in a room that is otherwise peacefully unpatterned. Both interiors on this page, at Bloomingdale's.

A DECORATOR'S DISGUISES

Units that fit contemporary rooms can be eyesores in 18th-century boiserie or other period settings. Here are Joseph Braswell's designs to make these indispensable aids all but invisible—without hampering their performance

By EPSIE KINARD

Caned panel, with large-scale design and hinged for opening (opposite), conceals heating or cooling unit installed below a window. Blinds of laminated fabric and wallpaper are matched in design to lacquered caning, thus uniting for this disguise three different elements that read the same to the eye.

Frieze, built to take central heating or air-conditioning grilles into its design, employs half rounds of bamboo-like moldings. They create cornice and pilasters that frame glass shelves for coral display, set adjacent to mirrored wall. Thus, grilles become an integral part of the frieze's total decorative scheme.

Shutter doors with overhead cornice mask awkward window with poor view and an air conditioner installed below it. Shutters' "knife edge" louvers are rigid slats of painted wood, 1″ by 2″. Spaced three inches apart in a radiant design, they allow for a free flow of air and for a good filtering of light.

CRAFT OBJECTS AT HOME

Shown at the Museum, a coherent table-top arrangement of diverse objects old and new—including turn-of-the-century art nouveau Tiffany glass and, above right, a lately made ceramic vase and bowl by Paul Soldner—as they might be used in a room of today. Right, new glass forms by Harvey Littleton, a woven hanging by Lenore Tawney, similarly included in an eclectic living room. All were lent by Joseph Heil, New York City.

An angled bay window, a pungently painted wall, and niches above and at the right are backgrounds for the Southwest Indian craftsmanship in the collection that belongs to Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Girard of Santa Fe, New Mexico. An appropriate plus of living local color in the arrangement is the spiky cactus plant in bloom.

In a room rich in fine sculpture and paintings, a calm stoneware canister, below, by Cynthia Bringle, is given a place of importance at the center of the coffee table, juxtaposed with the fine art of sculpture in both clay and metal. These are from the collection of Mr. and Mrs. Winthrop Rockefeller in Morrilton, Arkansas.

Coast to coast, collectors are enriching their houses—and patios and gardens—with objects created by artist-craftsmen expressing highly individual talents in the spirit of these times. Yesterday's collectors were inclined to seclude their treasures, lock them up, put them under glass; now they are given the run of the house, some appearing alongside great sculpture, some next to the kitchenware. Locations having become so various and important, The Museum of Contemporary Crafts, in New York, called its latest exhibition "Collector: Object/-Environment," and, with the aid of photo murals, showed how such items are used in the homes of collectors. The photographs here and on the following three pages represent interesting interior designs that incorporate the work of practitioners of the nonconforming arts.

Instead of interspersing his handcrafted objets de vertu among his books, Edward Wormley, designer of furniture and interiors, has given them a special shelf of raw cork. Above, and continued on the opposite page, the shelf holds a long row of the plates, jars, bowls, and figurines in his collection of pottery, glass, and alabaster pieces. Concealed lighting gives this shelf the display value of a shadow box, providing the maximum visibility for each of the objects shown in this luminous assemblage.

Casserole of stoneware, above, by Richard M. Lincoln, placed with its cover beside it to make, as a precious vase might, part of a composition of rounds. From Mr. and Mrs. Winthrop Rockefeller's collection, Morrilton, Arkansas.

Delicate and durable, Euclidean yet as completely contemporary as high-rise scaffolding, the screen-sculpture, 45″ by 68″, right, by Harry Bertoia, in brazed steel. From Mr. and Mrs. Roy Neuberger's collection in New York, N.Y.

In Mr. Wormley's collection, above: ceramics by Stig Lindberg of Sweden: Venini glass, Etruscan sculpture, Moroccan bowls, ceramics by Gertrud and Otto Natzler of California. The plastic panel, left, by Freda Koblick, who makes an art medium of acrylic. Home of Mr. and Mrs. Burke Dowling Adams, Atlanta, Ga.

"Sea Lion," the wool tapestry above, was designed by Mark Adams in black on mustard-gold with a scarlet hem, and woven in France by the Aubusson weavers. Photographed in the living room of the collectors, Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Owings, Big Sur, California.

THE RETURN OF

THE POTTED PALM

By TOBY BERG

Mrs. Berg is affiliated with The Greenhouse in New York City

Airy, graceful, like living fountains of fresh, cool green, the palms are back on the social scene. Calling up the belle époque, when their rich color and glossy leaves graced every drawing room and conservatory, they have an elegance of form and a stateliness of growth that commands and pleasures the eye and may even substitute for tall furniture in rooms that need a look of verticality but can't afford the space.

They are back and warmly welcomed, perhaps because they are nostalgic reminders of Victorian luxury, but almost certainly because they have proved to be monarchs among house plants—surprisingly hardy, adaptable to indoor life, and generally untemperamental. Besides, this family of frond and leaf offers remarkable variety of shape and size. Each merely awaits your choice to add its lush beauty to your rooms. You will find a selected list described and pictured, along with notes on their care, on the next two pages.

Miniature date palm, Phoenix roebelenii.

Best palms to grow in the house

Parlor palm, Chamaedorea elegans (Neanthe bella)

A tree-palm in miniature. Slow-growing and attractive when small. Graceful fronds on thin stems. Young plants will flower and eventually berry. Available in 2½" pots to 12" pots, or tubs—to 4½′ tall. From 50 cents to $45.

Bamboo palm, Chamaedorea erumpens

Elegant bamboolike stems grow thickly and develop a rich, lush look. Leaves are broad, long, and papery in texture. Prices from $10 to $75, depending on size and number of stems in a pot.

Chamaedorea seifritzii

Slender, canelike stems with broad-spreading fronds. Individual leaflets are long and narrow. Very hardy and slow growing. Available from 3½′ to 6′. From $12 to $40.

Paradise palm, Howea (Kentia) forsteriana

One of the most hardy and handsome palms. Stems are slender, and the dark green fronds which grow larger at the top of the plant create a spreading fanlike shape. In sizes from 2¼" pots to 14" tubs. Prices are from 75 cents to $100.

Chinese fan palm, Livistona chinensis)

The stem is thick, the ribbed leaves large and fan-shape. Each leaf is cut into individual ribbed sections, giving it a particularly airy appearance. Available in sizes from 1½′ to 3½′, from $7 to $25.

Bamboo palm, Chamaedorea erumpe

Parlor palm, Chamaedorea elegans (Neanthe bella).

DRAWINGS BY BARBARA WOLFF

Lady palm, Rhapis excelsa (flabelliformis)

Bamboolike canes topped with fan-shape clusters of ribbed leaves. Stems are matted with coarse fiber. This is a strong, durable plant, but very slow-growing and therefore expensive. It is often difficult to obtain, except in large plants—from 4′ to 6′—at prices from $75 to $150.

Chamaedorea seifritzii.

Miniature date palm, (Phoenix roebelenii

The stem is heavy and fibrous. Older plants form tall trunks and have a large round crown of feathery fronds. Available from 18″ plants to 8′ trees. Prices from $5 to $175.

Care of Palms

Although palms are easy to care for, there are a few specific requirements to be observed:

1. They require moderately good natural or artificial light, but not sunlight. A north window is excellent.
2. They should be kept reasonably moist but not soaked. Add water when the soil feels almost, but not altogether, dry. Water thoroughly —until it seeps through the pot into the gravel or saucer in which the pot must be kept. Do not let plants sit in water or the roots will rot and the plants will die.
3. Feed palms with organic fertilizer—such as fish emulsion—according to directions on the package. Feed them every two or three weeks.
4. Keep foliage free of dust. Wipe leaves with a soft cloth or paper towel. Do not use commercial leaf glosses. These are like a seal of varnish—and the kiss of death.
5. Trim off all yellow or brown leaves with sharp scissors. Do not allow dead leaves and debris to collect in the soil. ■

WONDERFUL WALLPAPERS

"Germain" wallpaper, right, made by the Warner Company in a blithe design of lifelike umbels and leaves, ready to enliven, more durably than pots of real geraniums would, any room, in country or town house.

"Hollyhocks," panels by Albert Van Luit, shoots of garden gaiety, planted to dramatize a series of sliding doors that might otherwise have been left as a monotonous stretch of blankness. A single panel could be effectively used on, for instance, one wall of a small foyer.

Pink-striped wallpaper, above, by Scalamandré, as precise and elegant as an 18th-century dandy's favorite waistcoat pattern, in a living room by Decorator Kathryn Crawford. It could go in a boudoir or breakfast room.

"Sheer Delight," above, screen-printed wallpaper by Schumacher, patterned in creamy flowers mingled with darker ones of the subtle, lavender-cast blue that belongs to the iris. To be used certainly in a room dressed in the lightest sky blues or greens in the vital tones of a fleur-de-lis stem.

"Polka-Flower" pattern, above, as used by Decorator Kathryn Crawford in two materials: wallpaper, from Louis W. Bowen; fabric, from Kent-Bragaline. They make a continuous one-mood impression.

What's new about wallpaper? It's enough to fill a book

- It's available factory trimmed and pasted, for faster, easier matching and hanging.

It was this that the Adam brothers did in attempting to capture the essence of what they considered classic design. In the early Nineteenth Century, when Napoleon was at his zenith, it was this sort of archeology in which Charles Percier and Pierre-Leonard Fontaine indulged in their "bible of the Empire style," which was published in 1812 (Recueil de Décorations Intérieures). Their archeology was not all it might have been (they called their designs based on Pompeii "Etruscan"), but their renderings and their taste were impeccable. Perhaps the flair for the exotic reached its apogee in the vast variations of Oriental themes which we call by the convenient basket term "Chinoiserie," and which delighted equally the French, the English, the Portuguese, and, indeed, the colonial Americans.

The Nineteenth Century was a decorator's field day. It started with a burst of fantasy when John Nash took over from Henry Holland, whose Adamlike style the Prince of Wales found too restrained, and implanted at the pavilion at Brighton an array of Chinoiserie and imitation palms and crystal chandeliers supported by dragons that must have made even the most sophisticated courtiers catch their breath. On its heels revivals of old styles came with such rapidity, especially in America, that they fairly tumbled over one another—everything from Greek Revival to Gothic Revival to Egyptian to châteaux of the French Renaissance and half-timbered Tudor country houses. Toward the end of the century, Charles Lock Eastlake, a disciple of William Morris, the prophet of the crafts movement, launched the era of the "artistic craze" with a little book called Hints on Household Taste. ("Behold," said Harper's Bazaar, "the kingdom of the tasteful is at hand.") Dutch tiles and Japanese teapots, cattails and peacock feathers, palm-leaf fans and "sincere" tables put together with dowels (nails and screws were considered insincere) vied for the housewife's affections. Louis Comfort Tiffany, the creator (by accident) of the famous iridescent "Favrile" glass, turned interiors into Middle Eastern temples of mystery in the name of clearing out Victorian clutter. Edith Wharton, with the architect, Ogden Codman, Jr., published a book in 1897 called The Decoration of Houses in the belief that "a reform in house decoration, if not necessary, is at least desirable." They claimed that it was the first book on "house decoration as a branch of architecture," though some of the eighteenth-century architects—like the Adam brothers, whose house books were widely used—might not have been pleased by this claim to originality. But in any event and in spite of all efforts at reform, the Nineteenth Century was an age of decorating chaos. Upholsterers only confounded the confusion.

There was one other important change in the way people lived that made the emergence of the interior decorator inevitable. It came when the outsides of dwellings no longer had anything to do with the insides. It came, in other words, with the introduction of the apartment house. All the architect could do was to design the exterior envelope and the interior distribution of space. Each tenant was on his own, and there was nothing the architect could do to protect him, guide him, cajole him.

Enter the decorator in full cry with swatches flying! Enter Elsie!

Enter the decorator in full cry—Syrie Maugham, the instigator of the all-white room (in George Platt's day white had been considered, to use Downing's word for it, "vulgar"), who decorated a complete "eighteenth-century" house on the fourth floor of Wanamaker's New York store. Ruby Ross Goodenough Wood was its moving spirit and director, and working with her were Nancy McClelland, a college graduate (and Phi Bete), Rose Cummings, and others now grown famous.

But this is merely a glimpse at decorating before the decorators came, not a history of the profession that has come a long way in the last fifty years. One rarely hears talk of "inferior designers" or "interior desecrators," as one once did when the field was full of amateurs posing as professionals. There are now two large national organizations of decorators with regional and local chapters and national conventions and all the other trappings of professional associations. Furthermore, they are likely to call themselves designers rather than decorators, for we live in an era that is intensely design-conscious and there seem to be overtones of slight frivolity about "decorating." George Platt, I suspect, would have approved this serious attitude. But I am not so sure about Lady Mendl, who liked to stand on her head. ■

Facts You Should Know About Chocolate and Chocolate Cookery

The cacao bean, from which both chocolate and cocoa are derived, is botanically known as Theobroma cacao. The spelling of cocoa was apparently a typographical error, having originated, according to The Oxford Dictionary, in Dr. Johnson's Dictionary in that form.

"Nibs," the meat of the cacao bean, contains more than 50 percent cocoa fat, from which the chocolate liquor—the base of all chocolate products—is extracted. Of the many varieties of chocolate and cocoa on the market, those of interest to the cook in the home are these:

Unsweetened or baking chocolate is actually bitter chocolate, which is the way it is designated in England and European countries. You may also find it referred to abroad as "chocolate liquor." It is packaged in this country in half pounds, usually in individual one-ounce squares.

No-melt chocolate, also bitter or unsweetened, and comparatively new on our market, is packaged in one-ounce envelopes, eight to a package. Broadly speaking, it can be used interchangeably (weight for weight) with unsweetened ounce squares which, of course, must be melted.

> One square (one-ounce size) unsweetened chocolate is the equivalent of one envelope (one-ounce size) no-melt chocolate. One ounce semi-sweet chocolate pieces is the equivalent of one ounce any sweet cooking chocolate or one square (one-ounce size) semi-sweet chocolate.

Semi-Sweet chocolate is packaged in pieces, six and twelve ounces to a package (one and 2 cups respectively), as well as in half pounds in individual one-ounce squares. Either may be used in recipes calling for semi-sweet chocolate. In England this type of chocolate is known as plain chocolate.

Sweet chocolate, generally available in bars in varying weights, is referred to in recipes as sweet cooking chocolate, although it is frequently eaten as candy.

Milk chocolate, a Swiss invention, incidentally, has, as the name indicates, milk added to it. It usually comes in bar form, in varying sizes, sometimes in bud forms, with nuts added. It is generally considered an eating chocolate, although it may be used as an ingredient.

Cocoa. There are three types: breakfast cocoa, with at least 22 percent cocoa butter; cocoa, which can have a range from 10 percent to 22 percent of cocoa butter; and cocoa with less than 10 percent cocoa butter. Obviously, the higher the cocoa-butter content, the more flavorful the finished dish.

Chocolate syrup, a combination of chocolate or cocoa flavoring, depending on the manufacturer's formula. Generally used as a sauce over ice cream, mixed with milk as a drink, or to flavor ice cream sodas.

How to Melt Chocolate

The chocolate should be placed in the top of a small double boiler or other suitable container over hot, not boiling, water. If boiling water is used, there's a good chance that steam will rise and condense. Even if so much as a drop of water gets into melting chocolate, it will tighten the chocolate and make it impossible to use. As you must have observed, water and fat don't mix, and chocolate is fat—hence this caution.

How to Salvage "Tightened" Chocolate

If, by chance, a few drops of water get into the melting chocolate, add one to two tablespoons of vegetable shortening (not butter, which contains moisture) and stir until chocolate has reliquefied.

liquid such as water, spirits, coffee, fruit juice, etc.—in short, whatever the recipe calls for—is added to the melted chocolate, it will not "tighten," as is the case with a few drops.

When Chocolate "Blooms"

The "bloom," the professional term for chocolate that has turned grayish, does not affect the quality of the chocolate if it is to be melted. It does, however, affect the eating quality because under high temperatures, around 90 degrees, the cocoa butter rises to the surface and on cooling remains on the surface, making the chocolate "crumbly."

About Refrigerating Chocolate Dishes

Unless the recipe calls for it or the temperature is catastrophic, it is preferable not to refrigerate chocolate dishes. If necessary, always cover securely with Saran or foil. In any event, to taste its best the dish should be brought to room temperature before serving.

How to Grate Chocolate

First of all, the chocolate must be firm. The three ways are: 1) with a mouli grater; 2) with a regular hand grater—stand-up type, or flat; 3) in the electric blender.

How to Shave Chocolate for Garnish

Take squares of firm chocolate and shave it with a potato peeler.

Meaning of Mocha in Cookery

Technically, mocha is a variety of coffee from Mocha in the Yemen district in Arabia. In cookery it has come to mean a combination of coffee and chocolate due, we assume, to some inspired cook who once combined the two and named the combination Mocha. It is especially delicious because coffee accents the flavor of chocolate. ■

Milk Chocolate Frozen Mousse

1 milk chocolate bar with almonds (8½-ounce size)
¼ cup water
2 eggs, well beaten
½ pint heavy cream, whipped

Combine the chocolate and water in top of large double boiler and melt over hot, not boiling, water. When melted, stir until smooth. Take off the heat and beat in the eggs quickly and thoroughly. Put back over hot water and cook, stirring constantly, about 2 minutes. Cool.

Stir chocolate mixture into whipped cream. Pour into a 2-cup (1 pint) refrigerator tray and place in freezing compartment of your refrigerator until firm but not hard. This will take several hours. Twenty minutes before serving, take from freezer and place in refrigerator. To serve, spoon into individual serving dishes. Serves about 6.

Craig Claiborne's Chocolate Cheesecake

1½ cups very fine zwieback crumbs
¾ cup sugar
⅓ cup melted butter
8 ounces sweet cooking chocolate or 1½ packages (6-ounce size—1½ cups) chocolate pieces
2 packages (8-ounce size) and 1 package (3-ounce size) cream cheese, softened
¼ teaspoon salt
1½ teaspoons vanilla
4 eggs, separated
2 cups heavy cream
½ cup flour
Shaved chocolate (optional)

Grease the bottom and sides of an 8- or 9-inch spring form pan. Coat the sides of the pan well with about ¼ cup of the crumbs. Combine remaining crumbs with 2 tablespoons sugar, then mix in the butter. Press the mixture over the bottom of the pan, patting it down firmly.

Melt the chocolate over hot, not boiling, water. Stir until smooth, cool slightly.

Combine softened cheese with salt, vanilla, half the remaining sugar, and 4 egg yolks. Beat well with an electric beater. Fold in melted chocolate.

Beat the egg whites in a very large bowl with a dash of salt until they stand in peaks. Beat in remaining sugar, a small amount at a time.

Beat 1 cup heavy cream until stiff. Pour cream over egg whites, add the cheese-chocolate mixture, and sprinkle flour over the top. Fold all ingredients together gently but thoroughly.

Pour into prepared pan and bake 1 hour and 15 minutes in a preheated 325°F. oven. Do not open oven door for 1 hour. At the end of the baking time, turn off the heat and leave cheesecake in the oven with the door closed for three to four hours.

Note: The top will probably crack, but this is par for the course.

Chill in the refrigerator. Remove the spring form, cover top of cake with the remaining cream, whipped, and garnish with chocolate shavings. Serves 12 to 14.

This cheesecake freezes perfectly. To serve, thaw and cover top with freshly whipped cream, just before serving.

Chocolate and Rum Eggnog in a Pastry Shell

1 baked 8-inch pie shell
1 envelope unflavored gelatin
½ cup cold water
2 squares (1-ounce size) unsweetened chocolate or 2 envelopes (1-ounce size) no-melt chocolate
3 egg yolks
¾ cup sugar
2 tablespoons dark rum
1 cup heavy cream

Soften the gelatin in a saucepan with the water. Add the chocolate (whichever type you are using). Place directly over low heat and stir constantly until mixture is well blended and gelatin has dissolved.

Beat the egg yolks until very thick, then beat in sugar gradually. Stir in the chocolate mixture and rum. Cool.

Beat the cream until thick, then fold in with the chocolate. Chill in refrigerator until mixture just begins to take a shape. Then spoon into baked pie shell. Refrigerate, covered, several hours or until firm.

To serve, garnish with rosettes of whipped cream around the perimeter of the pie.

Black Pepper Chocolate Cookies

1½ teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
1½ cups sifted all-purpose flour
¾ cup cocoa
¾ cup (1½ sticks) butter, softened
½ teaspoon freshly ground pepper
¾ teaspoon ground cinnamon
¼ teaspoon ground cloves
1½ teaspoons vanilla
1 cup sugar
1 egg

Grease a cookie sheet. Then sift baking powder, salt, flour, and cocoa together. Mix butter, spices, and vanilla together with your hands thoroughly. Work in the sugar gradually. Beat in the egg briskly and, finally, stir in the flour mixture.

. Roll dough into balls about 1 inch in diameter. Place on cookie sheet 1½″ apart. Flatten with a spatula to a thickness of about ¼″.

Bake in a preheated 375°F. oven for 12 minutes.

Remove from cookie sheet and cool on rack. Serve plain or finish with Chocolate Glaze, page 254.

Sauces

Quick Chocolate Sauce

Combine 16 ounces (1 pound) any sweet cooking chocolate or three 6-ounce packages (3 cups) semi-sweet chocolate pieces with 2 cups water. Stir over hot water until thoroughly combined. Serve hot over ice cream.

Can be stored in a jar, covered, and refrigerated. To heat, simply place jar in pan of hot water until sauce has melted and is warm.

Chocolate Cream Sauce

3 squares (1-ounce size) unsweetened chocolate or 3 envelopes (1-ounce size) no-melt unsweetened chocolate
½ cup sugar
Dash salt
⅛ teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon vanilla
½ cup heavy cream

Melt chocolate squares over hot, not boiling, water. Take off the heat and cool.

Mix sugar with ½ cup water, bring to a boil and cook for 5 minutes. Cool to room temperature. Stir in melted chocolate or no-melt chocolate thoroughly. Add salt, cinnamon, vanilla, and cream. Serve over ice cream. Makes 1½ cups.

If sauce proves to be too thick, stir in a little extra cream.

Mocha Sauce

2 packages (6-ounce size—2 cups) semi-sweet chocolate pieces or 12 squares (1-ounce size) semi-sweet chocolate
2 squares (1-ounce size) unsweetened chocolate

Quick Chocolate Glaze

Melt 8 to 10 ounces any sweet cooking chocolate or milk chocolate over hot, not boiling, water. While still warm, spread over the top of a fresh cake, such as angel, or any simple cake, with a broad spatula. Cool before cutting.

Sweet Cream and Cocoa Frosting

Stir together 1½ cups heavy cream, ¼ cup sugar, 2 tablespoons cocoa, and ½ teaspoon vanilla in a bowl. Do not beat. Refrigerate for 2 hours or longer. Then beat until mixture is thick and stands in peaks when you hold up the beater.

Sufficient to frost between the layers of a 3-layer cake, sides, and top.

Frost cake about an hour before serving, because frosting tends to darken on standing. Refrigerate until ready to serve.

Chocolate Rum Nuggets

6 ounces sweet cooking chocolate or one 6-ounce package (1 cup) semi-sweet chocolate pieces
1 cup (one 8-ounce can) commercial almond paste
1 cup sifted confectioners' sugar
2 tablespoons dark rum
1 tablespoon softened butter
1½ tablespoons cinnamon
½ cup cocoa

Grate the chocolate or blend in an electric blender.

Break up the almond paste in small pieces in a generous bowl. Add the chocolate, sugar, rum, and butter. Work the mixture together with your hands until well blended. Form into small balls—about the size of a Bing cherry.

Mix the cinnamon and cocoa together in a bowl. Roll the balls around in the cocoa mixture until well coated. Place on a cake rack to dry. Then store in an airtight container. Makes about 36.

Rich Hot Chocolate

4 tablespoons breakfast cocoa
2 tablespoons sugar
4 cups milk
Heavy cream, whipped

Mix cocoa, sugar, and enough milk to make a paste in a saucepan. Gradually add remaining milk, stirring constantly. Bring to a boil over low heat, then simmer, a gentle bubble, for 5 minutes.

Serve in cups with a dollop of whipped cream on top. Serves 4.

Mousse au Chocolat Grand Marnier

⅔ cup semi-sweet chocolate pieces or 4 squares (1-ounce size) semi-sweet chocolate
4 egg yolks, well beaten
2 tablespoons softened butter
3 tablespoons Grand Marnier or juice of 1 large orange, strained
4 tablespoons chopped candied orange peel
4 egg whites
Dash salt

Melt the chocolate over hot, not boiling, water. When soft, combine thoroughly with the well-beaten egg yolks and the softened butter. Stir in the Grand Marnier or orange juice and the orange peel.

Beat egg whites with a dash of salt until they stand in peaks, then beat about one-third into the chocolate mixture. Fold in remaining whites carefully. Pour into crystal serving bowl or 6 small pots and refrigerate, covered, until firm.

Gâteau au Chocolat

4 squares (1-ounce size) unsweetened chocolate
6 tablespoons softened butter
2 tablespoons flour
½ cup sugar
3 eggs, separated
Grated rind 1 large orange

Butter a 6-inch cake pan (spring form, if you own one) generously. Melt chocolate over hot, not boiling, water. Stir in butter, flour, sugar, well-beaten egg yolks, and orange rind. Beat in about one-third of the stiffly beaten egg whites, then fold in remaining whites with care. Pour into the prepared pan. Run a spatula through the batter and give the pan a good bang on the table to get rid of air holes.

Bake in a preheated 350°F. oven for 35 minutes. At this point the cake will seem insufficiently baked, but it gets firm after cooling. When cold, remove from pan and place on cake stand.

To frost: Melt ½ cup semi-sweet chocolate pieces or 3 squares (1-ounce size) semi-sweet chocolate with 3 tablespoons sugar and 2 to 3 tablespoons orange juice. When melted, stir in 2 tablespoons softened butter until frosting is smooth and grains of sugar have disappeared. Cool until it begins to thicken. Pour over top of cake and smooth it around the sides with a small spatula.

Garnish with French candied violets, rose petals, mint leaves, or a shower of chopped pistachio nuts.

Serve in very thin slices.

Gâteau Suisse

1 large (1 pound) potato
5 squares (1-ounce size) unsweetened chocolate or 5 envelopes (1-ounce size) no-melt unsweetened chocolate
¾ cup butter
1½ cups sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 teaspoon powdered instant coffee
2 egg yolks

Boil potato in its jacket until tender when tested with a small, sharp knife. Butter a 1-quart oblong, metal loaf pan very generously—metal because it is so much easier to release the cake from metal than from earthenware. If you are using squares of chocolate, melt over hot, not boiling, water.

Work butter with your hands or an electric beater until creamy, then work in the sugar gradually. Add vanilla, instant coffee, and egg yolks. Beat very hard at high speed with an electric beater. Stir in whichever type of chocolate you are using. Work the peeled, hot potato through a sieve or potato ricer. Add to the chocolate mixture. Beat again with the electric beater until smooth. Spoon into prepared mold and refrigerate, covered, until firm—at least 3 hours.

To serve, carefully run a knife around the edge of the pan, right to the bottom. Then place bottom of pan in hot water until it loosens. Turn out on a serving platter and score the top with the tines of a folk. Refrigerate again until firm. This extraordinarily rich cake (it's closer to fudge than cake) should be served in very thin slices and, as you will discover, needs no further adornment.

1 teaspoon vanilla
½ teaspoon almond extract
½ teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon ground anise

Grease an 8-inch square cake pan and line with wax paper. Beat egg yolks with a rotary or electric beater until very thick. Add sugar gradually, beating constantly and vigorously until mixture is creamy. Stir in all remaining ingredients, except egg whites.

Beat egg whites with a dash of salt until they stand in peaks when you hold up the beater. Fold batter into whites gently but thoroughly.

Pour into prepared pan and bake 25 minutes in a preheated 350° F. oven or until cake pulls away from the sides of the pan. Cool 5 minutes, turn out of pan, and peel off wax paper.

Spread half the filling on the cooled cake and bring the sides together.

Mocha Triangles for a Party

½ teaspoon baking powder
1 cup sifted all-purpose flour
½ cup (1 stick) butter
1 cup sugar
3 eggs, separated
1 tablespoon milk
Grated rind 1 lemon

Grease an 8-by-8-inch square pan generously, then coat with flour, dumping out any excess.

Sift baking powder and flour together. Set aside.

Work or cream butter with your hands or an electric beater. Gradually work in the sugar until mixture is light and fluffy.

Beat egg yolks until very thick, then combine with the butter mixture. Stir in the flour gradually, then the milk, and finally the lemon rind.

Beat egg whites with a dash of salt until they stand in peaks. Then fold into the batter thoroughly. Pour into a prepared pan and bake in a preheated 325° F. oven for 35 minutes or until a toothpick inserted in the center comes out dry. Cool briefly, then turn out on a cake rack.

When cold, cover with foil and allow to stand overnight. That makes it easier to cut. Cut cake in 25 squares, then cut the squares into triangles. Frost with:

Mocha Butter

2 6-ounce packages (2 cups) semi-sweet chocolate pieces or 12 squares (1-ounce size) semi-sweet chocolate
1 cup (2 sticks) softened butter
2 egg yolks, beaten
1 teaspoon vanilla
4 teaspoons dark rum or Cognac
2 teaspoons instant powdered coffee
2 cans (4-ounce size) toasted, slivered almonds

Melt chocolate over hot, not boiling, water. Cream butter until fluffy, with your hands or an electric beater. Stir in chocolate, beaten yolks, vanilla, rum or Cognac, and powdered coffee. Mix thoroughly. Refrigerate until as firm as softened butter.

Place the almonds in a 300° F. oven for about 15 minutes to toast them a bit more. Cool, chop rather fine, place in a large bowl.

To frost triangles:

Spear each one with a fork, and butter all sides with the Mocha Butter, using a small spatula. Roll in the chopped nuts. Place on cake rack and refrigerate until firm. Makes 50.

Easy alternative: Make only half the Mocha Butter and spread over entire cake, coating the top and sides generously with nuts. ■

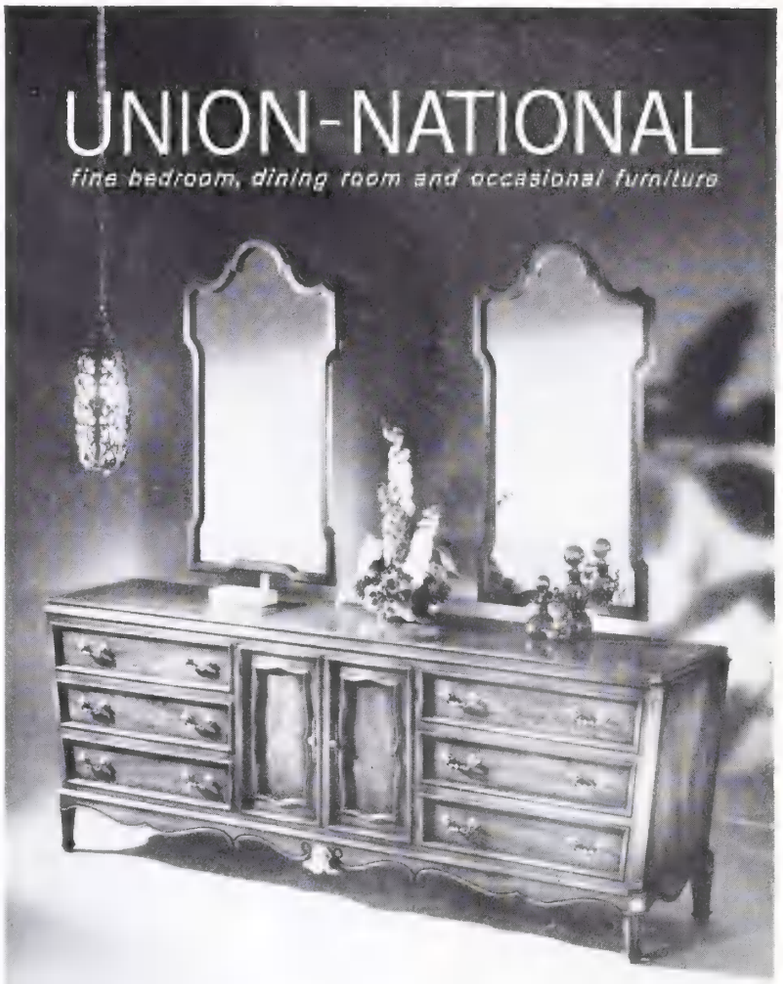
Having been practically rebuilt after World War II, it now serves as a sort of model of advanced city planning. For more about this, visit the Bouwcentrum, where there are displays and data on modern architecture. It's practically a futuristic experience to dine 392 feet above the harbour in the glass-walled restaurant of Rotterdam's towering landmark, the Europamast. And remember that this port, the largest in the world, is so remarkably avant-garde in its maritime operations that people take cruises around its waters just to observe it.

THE city is a repository of old, old masters (Hieronymus Bosch, Rubens, Rembrandt, Steen) and not-so-old masters like Van Gogh, shown in the Boymans-Van Beuningen Museum, but is equally distinguished for its very, very modern sculpture which adorns its new parks and public places, one of these masterpieces being the poignant 40-foot bronze war memorial by Zadkine, "Destroyed City." You could get your first taste of the flowery side of spring here, in the sidewalk cafés, along the tree-arbored canals, in the garden-park zoo of Blijdorp, which is designed so that its creatures can live virtually free and uncaged. And shopping in the Lijnbaan promenade is never lovelier than in spring when its outdoor sculpture is surrounded by blossoms and colorful birds. As the Danes do, the Dutch restrict this major shopping street to pedestrians, a piece of common sense many other traffic-heavy places could copy.



Distances are rarely great in this neat, compact little country, and no great journeying is required to take you from Rotterdam through the picturesque Dutch landscape and the villages with their singing chime towers, to the town of Delft, where you can see the famous blue-and-white china being made and, in the Lambert Van Meerten Museum, a famous collection of early tiles and china. A reminder that Holland is rich ground for antique hunters, the Art and Antique Dealers Fair is held each year in Delft, June 24 to July 14.

Whereas Delft is on the way to the Hague, similarly within easy visiting distance of Rotterdam en route to Amsterdam is the cheese-making town of Gouda, where the colorful cheese auction market is held every Thursday from April through September. Holland, whose dairy lands produce the cows who produce the cream which produces such cheeses as Gouda and Edam, is a tiny heaven on earth for any cheese-loving traveler, but Gouda has also to recommend it an old-world atmosphere and architecture which are a layering of nearly six centuries. The 15th-century Sin Janskerk (Church of Saint John) is a glowing jewel of stained-glass windows, and the old Gouda industry of making long clay pipes for the rest of Holland has resulted in a museum collection of tobacco pipes worth seeing. (Also worth noting if you're lucky enough to be in the vicinity of a Dutch country wedding is the pretty custom of trimming the bridegroom's pipe with flowers.)

The word Gouda is one we'd been mispronouncing for years, and it's only one of the many mysteries of the Dutch language. It is pronounced something like "howdah"—and "something like" is always the best you can expect your own Dutch pronunciation to be unless you're a native. However, most Dutch people are fluent in English as well as German and French, so that travelers have relatively no language problems.

GETTING back to the subject of flowers, it's no exaggeration to say that the whole west coast is in spring bloom from the Hague north to Den Helder. From Leiden, capital of the commercial bulb-growing district, to Haarlem, everything's coming up daffodils and tulips and hyacinths in a strip of country twenty miles wide and forty miles long. And beside the blossoming bulb fields—cultivated, of course, for the bulbs, the floral display being just a lovely extra added attraction until mid-May when the heads are nipped off the plants—there are the burgeoning gardens of the citizenry, the flower-decked public streets, and even sometimes nosegays in taxis or private cars. And you must remember that cut flowers—commercially grown in fields and greenhouses—flourish in Holland all summer long. Interestingly enough, since the sea is never far away in Holland, the cultivated, garden world is never far from long stretches of sandy beach. On their own flower-viewing excursions, the Dutch occasionally dart west off the highway and take a breather on the sunny sands.

The Hague, or Den Haag, is the seat of parliament and the home of the Dutch royal family, although Amsterdam is the capital city. One senses an urbane, cosmopolitan atmosphere here. The Peace Palace, built in 1913 with Carnegie funds, now houses the International Court of Justice, and is handsomely furnished with fine objects donated by the original members of the League of Nations.

Scheveningen, a seaside resort of great éclat, frequented by the diplomatic smart set, is nearby. Besides fine bathing and fine hotels, it has a general air of chic that would put to rest forever anyone's notion that the Dutch are stolid, conscientious, early-to-bed, early-to-rise burghers. Its Kursaal is the setting for many fine musical performances. Along with cities like Amsterdam, Rotterdam, and Utrecht, Scheveningen and the Hague participate in the annual Holland Festival, which features the best of Dutch and International entertainment from mid-June to mid-July.

NORMALLY, Amsterdam is where you arrive in Holland if you fly from the U. S. A. It all seems a little Alice-in-Wonderland at the Schiphol Airport because you think you see ships sailing by it above eye level, but don't worry. That's exactly what you are seeing because, like so much of the whole country, the airport is below sea level. Dykes, pumps, windmills, and a fantastic program of dredging, draining, reclaiming, and fertilizing have made and kept the country safe from the surrounding sea. If the Dutch landscape and achievements indicate that they are richly endowed, it is because these people endowed themselves by dint of hard work.

From the airport it's a 15-minute drive into the city (45 minutes to The Hague, one hour to Rotterdam, all based on the strictly enforced 30-miles-an-hour law). In-transit travelers, not lucky enough to be staying over in Holland, can at least take a tour of Amsterdam during flight stopovers—a nice Dutch gesture of hospitality.

At first, most visitors find Amsterdam a confusing but thoroughly charming city. Composed of 90 islands, circled and criss-crossed by 60 canals, it is a marvelous mix of eras. Item: 16th- and 17th-century princely mansions; the marvelous Rijksmuseum with the greatest collection of old Dutch masters in the world; an equally important museum of contemporary art called the Stedelijk Museum; neon Coca Cola signs; the house where Rembrandt lived, which includes a priceless cache of his etchings; the Royal Palace built in the 17th-century "Golden Age" of Dutch influence, once considered the eighth wonder of the world and now occupied one week a year; and at 263 Prinsengracht the heartbreaking house where Anne Frank was concealed from the Nazis. It is a museum of her touching little mementoes, open to the public and especially hospitable to groups of young people.

Amsterdam has the reputation of being a gay, fun-loving, swinging kind of town, with a great variety of restaurants, including the worthy Dutch institution, the broodjeswinkel, or sandwich shop, where the contents-on-a-bun out-Hero the Hero. You can dine here in any language, but why you should want to when the Dutch cuisine and its exotic Indonesian adopted rijstafel and nasi goreng are so good, we wouldn't know.

To get down to serious flower-viewing, there are two exhibitions you must not miss. Between Leiden and Haarlem, near the bulb-growing center of Lisse, is the Keukenhof, 60 acres of woodland, lake and lawn, planted with bulbs in their millions—grape hyacinths, daffodils, tulips, jonquils, hyacinths, in every color and variety, a continuous succession of blossoming beauty, from the time the park opens on March 31 until it closes in mid-May. Admission fee of two guilders (56 cents) for adults, and one guilder (28 cents) for children.

NEXT on the floral circuit is Linnaeushof near Haarlem in Bennebroek. Not as ambitious a display but rather more generous in that it opens with the blazing pageant of the bulb flowers, starting on April 1st, and then is open daily to October 1st displaying other flowers as the season marches on. Dahlias are in order for August, and all spring and summer there is a delightful mechanically motivated parade of flowered floats, telling fairy tale

The real bulb buff will be sure to make his way to Leiden and the old University garden, the Hortus Botanicus, where the first Dutch experimenter with bulbs, Carolus Clusius, for the first time planted tulips in the mid-Sixteenth Century.

Another botanist's mecca is the Hortus Bulborum in Limmen, an experimental and research garden, where there are over 1,000 varieties of bulbs, of both modern and antique flowers such as were grown as long ago as the 17th Century.

Holland, almost all year round, is on a schedule of flower shows, parades, and pageants that celebrate her horticultural achievements, including a number of fruit parades in the fall. Throughout the year there are regular daily flower auctions, the one in Aalsmeer near Amsterdam being particularly delightful. Some may require that you pay an entrance fee, but it's very little for the fascinating pastime of watching the dealers bid for, say, early white lilacs, cyclamen, roses, freesias.

The adept tourist association keeps careful programs of such events, which are far too many to list here. But wherever you go in Holland, in or out of the spring season, you will not be far away from the fragrance and color and fun of this flowery world.

The same ANVV, with remarkable devotion to duty, keeps its Holland offices open far into the night to aid and abet the lone, lost tourist. From them you can also get literature briefing you on any phase of Dutch life that interests you, from the way the windmills "speak" to each other (the position of their arms or their floral trimming tells if the miller is celebrating a happy occasion, a sad one, or is closed down for the afternoon), to the best areas for boating. They will also see to it, if you wish, that you are entertained in a Dutch home, so that you'll become better acquainted with Netherlands life.

If you can hardly wait till spring to start your visit, the city of Amsterdam, from October 17 to March 1, is giving every visitor coming from North America ten gifts including a lunch, dinner, museum and concert tickets, and a glass-top canal ride, if he starts his European visit in Amsterdam. And KLM Royal Dutch Airlines throws in gratis hotel lodgings if you travel on one of their $5- or $10-a-day tours. For more: KLM Royal Dutch Airlines, 609 Fifth Ave., New York.

Regrettably in our August listing of U.S. city restaurants which we consider especially noteworthy, the address of Maxim's in Chicago was erroneously given owing to the fact that that city has two restaurants of similar name. The proper name and address of our selection and the restaurant we described is: Maxim's de Paris, 1300 N. Astor Street, Chicago, Ill.

A forecast of spring

Anyone who has never been tempted by the sight of a bin of tulips in the fall windows of a seed shop or nursery must have a sales resistance of steel. If you've never given in, we beg of you change your gardening pattern this year and enjoy the fun and the easiest laissez-faire kind of gardening ever invented with—when spring comes round again, and sometimes even when the snow is still on the ground—such rewards as you wouldn't dare anticipate.

But if you have already discovered the joys of a tulip garden, or the thrill of seeing the first daffodil in your own front yard, or sniffing at the sweetness of a prime white hyacinth, don't stop at those bulbs, lovely as they are. The bulbs of Holland are so well known that they are the gardener's first choice. But since the tulip has over the years been so closely associated with that lovely little lowland country on what used to be the Zuider-Zee, there's a notion in the mind of some neophyte gardeners that tulip bulbs are the only ones that Holland can produce. The fact is, Dutch bulb production, in species and specimens, colors and conditions, is so extravagantly varied that a short rundown of available bulbs is in order.

All can be planted in temperate northern areas from September 15 until freezing time. In New Jersey we have planted them as late as a November Election Day. In the south they may be planted as much as two months later.

You can choose them, like the casting director of a play, planting them so that they will burst upon the garden scene, successively spotlighted from early March on through the middle of June.

Earliest are the little bulbs, the sweet white Snowdrop (Galanthus) and the Winter Aconite (Eranthis), both due to bow in early March.

Crocuses come next, along with the blue Siberian Squill (Scilla sibirica) and the Iris Reticulata, usually blossoming in mid-March. Their paths may be crossed by the appearance of Glory-of-the-Snow (Chionodoxa) and Puschkinia libanotica, which are due to pop up around March 15 and bloom through April 10.

Now come the tulips, of the species Kaufmanniana and Fosteriana, which will flower in the month of April, keeping company with the Grape Hyacinth (Muscari) and trumpet daffodils and the Single and Double Early tulips as well as hyacinths and medium daffodils, all of which may come and go in the meantime until April 30. This coterie, with all its richness of color and contrasting shapes, suggests spectacular color-scheming and practically a solid month of pristine brightness against the young green of grass and garden shrubs.

As April turns into May, the Darwin Hybrid tulips put in their appearance along with the scarlet-etched Poet's Narcissus, and as May carries on the borders are taken over by the tulips—Parrots.

he Cottages, the Lily-flowered, Double Lates, Darwins, and Breeders, with an assist from the Spanish Squill (Scilla campanulata). The whole spring bulb procession is concluded by the Dutch Iris, whose due date to wave its blossoming flags is from June 1 to 10. All told, you will have had, if you follow this prescription, hree months of continuous pringtime all your own—a lovely hing to wait for, watch develop, nd to enjoy.

In commenting on the successful development of the bulb industry in Holland, the tourist industry in one of its pamphlets describing the glory of the bulb fields in spring hands out a helpful hint to bulb gardeners. The first bulbs planted in Holland took so well to the sandy nature of the soil in the Haarlem-Leiden area that the young industry thrived. The message is that the best soil for bulb growing should have a certain degree of sandiness, but the growers themselves say that it should neither be very heavily sandy nor extremely light. If either such condition exists, they suggest that compost or peat be added. Clayey soil is not for bulbs.

In preparing the bulb bed, it may be less effort to completely take off the top six inches of soil and then set the bulbs in place, after loosening the soil below.

Large bulbs like tulips and hyacinths and daffodils should be planted six inches deep and six inches apart. The small bulbs with which we are not nearly well enough acquainted are set three inches deep, three inches apart. Veteran gardeners point out that bulbs planted deeper than this—as much as nine inches for large and five for small bulbs—may be longer in coming to bloom, but have a longer life year after year, if they are simply left in the ground.

Bulbs may be set into holes that have been dug in the soil by a trowel. When the top soil has been firmed over them, no matter what method is used in planting, they should be well watered.

It's a good idea, especially if your climate is one that is subject to sharp changes in temperature during the winter, to cover the bulb beds with peat or evergreen branches, in order to protect them from root damage. The coverings should be applied only after the first frost, and when the weather warms up you should take regular peeks under the coverings. When the green shoots show, remove the mulch.

Tulips do better in locations that do not subject them to direct sun light, and they will also flower earlier in a southerly planting position.

Bulbs will produce longer if, when you cut the flowers in the spring, you snip only one leaf with a flower, and be sure to leave the green foliage untouched until it has completely faded. ■

These were converted that very afternoon into some 40 thick, brand-new volumes of the Peters edition, encompassing the complete piano compositions of Bach, Mozart, Beethoven, Schubert, Schumann, Brahms, and Liszt. I am happy to report that these volumes have followed me through all my European and American changes of residence and are at present safely ensconced on the bookshelves of my home in Brookline, Massachusetts. In a lifetime of bargain hunting, I have never again hit that kind of musical jackpot.

For a while my 40 volumes kept me busy and happy, but soon I began to study conducting, and this naturally meant that orchestral scores had to be acquired. The small study scores which are known as "miniatures" were therefore next on my list of acquisitions. Orchestral scores, however, no matter how miniature, are quite expensive, and the days of the Berlin miracle were gone never to return, but by going without meat every second day, I was able to acquire quite a collection.

Coming to this country after finishing my European studies, I had the great good luck to be admitted to the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia, where I studied conducting with Fritz Reiner, a marvelous teacher who insisted that I become completely versed in the field of opera because, according to him, "If you can conduct opera, you can conduct anything." To make certain that I learned the business from the ground up, he had me coach the singers of the Institute, an occupation that required a fluent pianistic mastery of practically all standard works of the operatic literature. That meant, of course, that without a moment's delay dozens of piano-vocal scores had to be purchased and practiced day and night. Among my students was a charming soprano whom I courted for many months with regular gifts of Bellini, Donizetti, and Rossini opera scores. When we finally became husband and wife, I not only acquired a wonderful companion and mother of our two children, but also automatically recaptured a very handsome collection of Italian operas (evil tongues maintained that I married Margaret just to get ba my scores).

Most piano-vocal scores ha always been readily availabl but orchestral scores of oper presented a more difficult pro lem. The trouble was that ma of the scores I needed, or thoug I needed, were not for sale at a price. To protect themselves fro piracy, many publishers nev sold the orchestral material, b rented it out to the opera hous that were producing the wor in question. At the time I h no thought of producing oper —I just wanted to study them and so in the early 1930's I ma several visits to the Library Congress in Washington becau that was the only place in t United States where you cou get to see the orchestral scor of Richard Strauss's Elektra Der Rosenkavalier. It took sever days, but by using an elabora system of shorthand symbols a colored pencils, I transferred t information contained in the fo bidden scores into my own pian vocal scores, which then becan treasured possessions.

My problems really began snowball when I turned to ope production and became involv with staging, scenery, costume and lighting. A book is a marv lously compact container knowledge, but when one is need of an instant reference brary for all facets of music a theater, the question of housi these compact little packages not easily answered.

Fortunately, the four corne of our living room have built- bookcases, and there was roo for two large mahogany cabine to flank the fireplace. My wife prized collection of china had be moved to the pantry, but th made room for several hundr volumes dealing with scener lighting, costumes, the history the stage, acting, and pant mime. The library proper co tains the biographies, the pian vocal scores, and the wonderf collection of plays I acquired one fell swoop at an auction. whole wall of the second-floor o fice was fitted out with ceilin high shelves which now house t Mozart, Verdi, and Wagner lite ature, including all known M zart stamps—even those issued the Belgian Congo.

of all types of literature has resulted from two important developments: the technique of photo-offsetting and the proliferation of paperbacks. Complete editions of most musical masterworks have been reprinted, and thousands of book titles that were impossible to find only ten or 15 years ago can now be bought inexpensively in many a corner drugstore.

It is in the field of my specialty, the operatic theater, where the contrast between the past and the present is particularly startling. Today's student can hardly imagine how difficult it used to be in the '30's and '40's to get hold of the original plays that had served as the sources of important Italian operas. To name just a few examples, Rigoletto, La Traviata, and Tosca derive from French plays, while Il Trovatore, La Forza del Destino, and Simon Boccanegra are fashioned after the romantic dramas of Spanish authors. Without a careful study of this dramatic source material, it is impossible to deal intelligently with the famous operas of Verdi and Puccini.

When I began my career as an operatic stage director, I had the very devil of a time locating these plays, even though I was able to read them in the original language. Searching for them produced the shivery delights of a treasure hunt. One never knew what bibliophilic gem one might unearth in the dank cellar of an obscure second-hand store. It created that atmosphere of adventure and serendipity that transforms a sober seeker of knowledge into a passionate collector. I remember leafing idly through a set of 65 volumes containing 300 worthless French plays and suddenly coming upon Les Contes d'Hoffmann by Jules Barbier and Michael Carré! The dealer, who wanted to get rid of the entire set, naturally refused to part with one single volume. Twenty-five dollars, however, was not too high a price for a rarity of such magnitude. I could not force myself to throw away the other 64 volumes, but we have a large house, and an extra library is better than a second guest room. My wife does not think so, but since the only alternative was to put them in the dining room, she finally consented, on condition that I dust them myself.

Because of the almost total absence of English translations of these operatic background plays, I was forced to make special English versions for the singers and stage directors I was training in Boston and Tanglewood. The paperback revolution has just about put an end to this distressing situation. The other day I paid 59 cents for a new paperbound booklet of the original Spanish texts of El Trovador by Gutierres, Don Alvaro by Duque de Rivas (the source of La Forza del Destino), and Don Juan Tenorio by Zorilla. I must say it was thrilling to realize that these plays, which at one time had cost me months of diligent book-hunting and many hard-earned dollars, were now to be had practically for the asking in hundreds of big and little bookshops throughout the country.

In the field of translations, however, a great deal still remains to be done. Rivas's Don Alvaro can be read in the original, but not in English, and this is equally true of Sardou's Tosca. And yet, for all I know (and this is the exciting part of the story), both of these plays may be gracing the shelves of drugstores by the time this article appears in print. Most encouraging, also, is the very high quality of many of these new English versions. I am speaking not only of such monumental stylistic accomplishments as the epoch-making, four-volume disquisition on Pushkin's Eugene Onegin by Vladimir Nabokov or Jacques Barzun's scintillating rendering of Beaumarchais's The Marriage of Figaro (for which I am proud to take a tiny bit of credit, since it was I who pestered Mr. Barzun into translating this immortal classic). The less ambitious paperback volumes of Mozart's and Verdi's librettos (the one by Robert Pack and Marjorie Leleash; the other by William Weaver) are also immensely useful and incomparably more accurate and literate than the horrors that used to be peddled under the name of "The Authentic Librettos" but which should properly have been labeled "The Ultimate Abominations."

While the avalanche of old and new titles engulfing us today is the most welcome proof of our vaunted "cultural explosion," it does tend to confuse the neophyte who cannot readily separate the chaff from the grain. We cannot hope to eliminate pedestrian offerings, and the "man who has everything" will by necessity be doomed to harbor also the second-rate.

I, for instance, am inordinately

proud of my collection of Mozartiana, but I do not delude myself as to the quality of certain of its ingredients. There is no question that at least one-third of my 250 books on Mozart are feeble rehashes of earlier and worthier models. The young music lover, however, who is just beginning to assemble an operatic library should be encouraged to acquire first of all the really solid and inspiring items. If he heeds my advice, he will begin by tracking down the best single book on opera—said to be out of print but worth a search—the remarkable three-in-one volume by Ernest Newman entitled Stories of the Great Operas and Their Composers, published by Garden City Books. It contains complete analyses of the stories and the music of 30 famous works and twelve splendidly written biographies of the most important creators of opera. A two-volume paperback, Great Operas, also by Newman, is published by Vintage, $1.45 each. Next on the list could come The Essence of Opera, edited and annotated by Ulrich Weisstein, published by Free Press of Glencoe, Inc., at $6.50, a collection of excerpts from the writings of more than 60 authors, all of whom have noteworthy things to say about the lyric drama. When it comes to Mozart and Verdi, there is almost too much to choose from, but my own favorites are: Mozart: His Character, His Work by Alfred Einstein, published by Oxford University Press, Inc., $10.00 ($2.65 paperback); Giuseppe Verdi—His Life and Works by Francis Toye, published by Vintage Books, $1.45 paperback; and Orpheus at Eighty by Vincent Sheean, published by Random House, Inc., $5.00. Richard Wagner should, of course, be represented by Ernest Newman: by his Wagner as Man and Artist, published by Vintage Books, $1.65 paperback or, still better, his four-volume The Life of Richard Wagner, published by Alfred A. Knopf, Inc., at $7.50 each, $25.00 for the set, which is possibly the most brilliant of all existing biographies of musicians. The newest and a fine biography of Puccini by Mosco Carner is published by Alfred A. Knopf, Inc., $7.50. George Marek's Puccini features a careful plot analysis of all the works of this popular master. Unfortunately, this too is out of print but worth a search. A Working Friendship—The Correspondence Between Richard Strauss and Hugo von Hoffmannsthal, published by Random House, Inc., $10.00, offers an indispensable insight into the workings of this remarkable partnership. Add to these another volume of Ernest Newman entitled More Stories of Famous Operas, published by Alfred A. Knopf, Inc., $8.95 (containing descriptions of 29 works not included in the earlier collection) and the two booklets of libretto translations mentioned earlier, and you have what could be described as "the twelve basic books for the inquisitive opera lover."

THE book-lover will undoubtedly wish to own recordings. Those who are already bitten by this bug are obviously beyond the reach of advice, no matter how well-meaning. Those still albumless and interested in complete recordings of famous operas may want to know my favorites. It is not easy to make such a list, because by the time this article appears, even better discs may be available. Besides, like most musicians of my age, I am devoted to many recordings which are no longer on the market. However, for the benefit of the new collector I am willing to reveal my secret preferences among recent (whenever possible, stereophonic) albums. Identified by recording company and conductor, they are: Carmen (Angel-Prêtre), La Traviata (Victor-Previtali), La Bohème (Angel-Schippers), The Magic Flute (London-Böhm), Aida (Victor-Solti), The Flying Dutchman (Victor-Dorati), Faust (Angel-Cluytens), Tosca (Victor-Leinsdorf), Der Rosenkavalier (Angel-von Karajan), The Barber of Seville (Angel-Galliera), Don Giovanni (Angel-Giulini or London-Krips), Die Meistersinger (Victor-Keilberth).

Acquiring these twelve operas, perhaps in the same order, should lay a solid foundation for anyone's operatic record library. At this point permanent addiction is guaranteed, but "misery loves company," and I don't see why my wife should be the only sufferer. And, after all, Margaret has a collection of English poetry that she keeps hidden in her clothes closet, over the shoe box. ■

The site includes several lovely areas for walks and picnics, and the house was designed to take full advantage of these by stepping gently down from the crest of the entrance ridge. Adjacent properties are large and densely wooded, assuring the Ohtas of almost complete privacy from their neighbors. A pool-fireplace and Japanese garden will be sheltered between the house and an extensive garden wall of stone and redwood.

The hovering stone masonry of the central chimney will incorporate the kitchen range, oven, and barbecue as well as the living-room fireplace. All stone will be imported from Arizona's Kaibab plateau and will be a warm, tan color.

The roof overhangs are generous and will be pierced in some places to cast moving sun patterns on the floors and walls. The roof itself will be an exciting combination of red cedar shingle slopes and gravelled flat surfaces.

Radiant heated floors, where exposed, are to be flagstone and colored concrete—elsewhere they will be carpeted wall to wall. Plaster ceilings—and soffits for indirect lighting—will flow continuously from space to space, complementing the redwood paneling and rugged masonry.

The building will be designed with utmost attention to built-in furnishings and appointments. Mr. Green's office will design and oversee the landscaping and will supervise the selection of carpets and fabrics.

Project for the future: to mirror the sky at the bottom of the ravine by damming the creek. ■

Put the Picture in its Proper Frame

It was during the late 15th Century that specially trained craftsmen in Florence and Venice produced the earliest examples of picture frames specifically designed as esthetic, self-expressive features. Paintings, having moved from the walls of cloisters and churches to individual canvases, became portable art to be hung surrounded by delineating frames. Wherever fine painting flourished, framing followed suit in Italy, Spain, and Flanders. In France, too, the framemaker's craft came into its own, developing with the more graceful, refined beauty characteristic of the decorative art of that country.

A prime characteristic of the majority of modern frames is the absence of heavy, traditional forms. The contemporary esthetic aim is the simple canvas, the edges of which are finished with thin moldings. The frame today has so dwindled that it draws immediate attention to the pure shape and size of the painting field as well as to the images upon it. This current taste illustrates the intimate relationship which the painting and its frame have had throughout the history of art: the frame always sensitively complements the painted field which it surrounds and may relate to the painting in any number of ways.

Tasteful framing

"Art is limitation; the essence of every picture is the frame." With these words Gilbert Keith Chesterton summarized his opinion about a frequently questioned relationship. Whether or not we agree, tasteful framing is essential to any pictorial image and the right frame can indeed enhance an artist's expression. In a sense, the picture "lives" in its frame, and with it the viewer is led to the full enjoyment of the work. Georges Seurat, the French post-impressionist, considered an appropriate frame so important that he often made his own, using his characteristic pointillist technique for both picture and frame and relating the colors of the two in a very complex way. "La Grande Jatte" in the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York City exemplifies this framing technique.

The first question to ask when you are selecting a frame is, "What am I framing?" The answer has to do with what framemakers call the spirit of a work of art. This spirit is often related to the school or era of the painting, and is especially essential to understand today, because "period" framing is one of the current trends. The basic principle of this technique is that the history of art is the best guide for frame selection: paintings baroque in feeling require a baroque frame; paintings that are simple, linear, and contemporary in design require clean, unobtrusive, modern frames.

If blending or harmonizing frames with your works of art is less desirable to you than contrasting them, whether in spirit and feeling or in color and texture, then by all means contrast. A frame is improper only if it overpowers artistic expression, competes with a picture, distracts the viewer from the drawn image, or actively clashes with it. Guide yourself by the fact that whether contrasted or matched with a work of art, a frame is acceptable and effective if it is not inordinately creative.

A word of caution, too, about using color with your frame selection. People are likely to pick out one color from the picture and repeat it throughout the frame. The result often is that the viewer cannot decide what to look at, because the frame vies with the art work for his attention. You cannot tell whether a frame will be right for a given work of art until you come face-to-face with it. Some works of art seem to frame themselves, while others can be completed only by trial and error. One of the curious things about selecting frames is that the works of art you like best often prove the hardest to frame.

The frame as décor

A distressing trend in art today is the self-conscious, over-studied approach to buying and framing pictures. Just as there is nothing more tragic than buying an inferior work of art simply because it matches the rug or sofa pillows, so there is nothing more absurd than misframing a fine work of art merely to match the coffee table. Visualize the "Mona Lisa" imprisoned in Danish modern, and you will understand why you should never select frames merely to ornament a room. The frame should enhance the picture by making it a pleasing focal point of the room, not debase it by making the picture a mere wall decoration. The picture and its frame should stand on their own merits or they do not deserve to be hung.

You can find a framemaker or someone qualified to select frames, but you will buy with double assurance if you have your own knowledge of proper and economical framing. Shop comparatively. Some stores have just a few standard frames; others have a larger and more varied selection. Shops differ, too, both in the quality and the price range of their offerings. One thing should be constant: the price quoted to you should include four things—the molding, the matting, the glass, and the proper fitting of these three components. As he figures the final frame price for you, the framer should list the cost of each of these individually.

A framer with a fine reputation is usually well known and recommended by art dealers, who may themselves frequent the firm they recommend. A good framemaker is dependable, has the respect of his fellow art dealers, and is always cautious in the handling of art work. He must see that the edges of a drawing or a print are never cut or trimmed, for this ultimately reduces their resale value. He should use a pure wheat paste or library paste on the hinges holding the work of art to the mat—never modern glue, which can eventually rot and discolor the paper. He should never hinge all four corners of a print, for only if it hangs free can it accommodate the shrinking or swelling of the mat on which it is mounted. He should also back the framed picture with good rag content backboards, and not with woodpulp backs. These, used many years ago, contain chemicals which can discolor the paper on which the art work is executed. Finally, check to see how well he has fitted and joined the corners of the frame. This is an excellent test for a competent framer.

An exceptional framemaker can offer a variety of solutions for your particular framing problems in accord with your budget and taste. See what the prices of all his frames are, his least as well as his most expensive. A work of art by any artist can be as eye-catching in a $20 frame as in one costing $100.

A trip to your favorite museum or art gallery is a good way to develop an eye for the best types of frames for different types of art. Museums change their exhibits almost every month, and new frames often accompany each exhibition. In addition to their own collection, museums sometimes display works of art lent to them by private collectors, who may buy more elaborate or costly frames and whose selections offer additional possibilities for study. Before deciding upon your own frames, try to determine why various selections were made and what alternatives might have been desirable.

Types of frames

During the 16th Century, the Italian master Titian designed and manufactured his own frames. Today few artists do so, but that is in one way at least an advantage, for the prices of Titian's frames were as high as those of the compositions within them. Fortunately for our finances, framemaking is today a very competitive business, and selections and prices are widely varied.

Frames are constructed on bases of wood, brass, aluminum, plastic, and synthetic woods. In fact, 75 percent of those currently manufactured have some type of wood as their base, and are made in one of two ways—hand-carved or machine molded. The basic wooden frame is manufactured with a layer of gesso and sometimes a layer of red clay placed over the raw wooden stock. This clay acts as a protective layer. To it adheres the final finish, which may be gold, silver, or metal leaf, paint, or other desired finish.

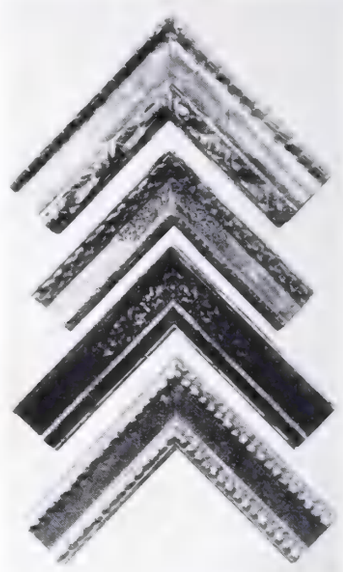
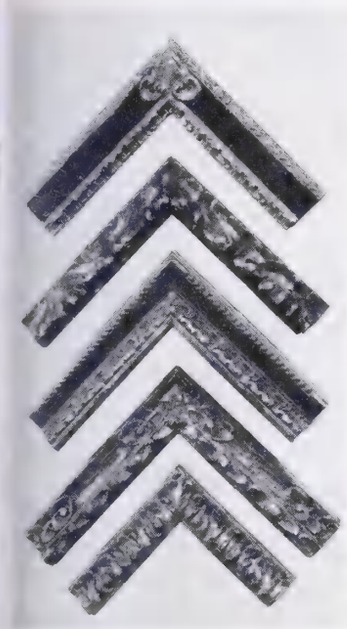
There are various types of frames on the market, but one of the oldest that framemakers faithfully reproduce today is the Gothic or medieval frame. It is in the tabernacle rather than the four-cornered style, shaped like the ornamental container used in the church for sacramental articles. It functions as an integral part of the work of art and perfectly complements icons, woodcuts, and similar works of the medieval period. Antique or Gothic frames cannot be found in every frame shop, and are generally made specifically to order. Prices for them begin at about $40 for a frame 12″ by 16″, including a board mat, glass, and fitting. (All subsequent frame prices are for 12″ by 16″ models, and all include board mat, glass, and fitting charges. Prices vary according to the amount of labor and gold required for the finish.)



Gothic frame

Italian Renaissance frames are more powerful than Gothic, heavier in feeling, often with very little decoration. They are sometimes painted with dark colors, and are especially well suited both to religious subjects and to surrealistic compositions for artists such as Salvador Dali and Yves Tanguy. The price of this type of frame can range from $15 or $25 up to several hundred, depending upon the elaborateness of its finish.



Closely related to the Italian Renaissance frame, the Spanish frame dates back to the late 16th Century. Its rough surface has a strong, bold chainlike appearance and is well matched with such 20th-century graphics as Picasso's early expressionist and cubist work, and examples by Rouault, Matisse, Chagall, Dali, and Braque. Because Spanish frames are hand-carved, their prices can start at about $45 to $50. But there are machine-reproduced examples that cost about half as much.

Dutch frames are austere in appearance. They originated in Northern Europe, where frame styles traditionally lack ornamental surface relief, and they are most successful with works enhanced by a simple statement: still lifes, such genre paintings as those of Jan Vermeer, the subjects of such "primitives" as the French Henri Rousseau and the American Grandma Moses, and the work of the 18th- and 19th-century American artists in general.

Italian Renaissance

If your budget is limited and you would like a tasteful frame for any medium of art, the popular and always successful stripping or band frames are best. They are clean, linear, and undefined in pattern, and are moderately priced. Made of wood, generally mahogany, their front edges are often painted with gold trim or metallic silver. They go especially well with the spirit of abstract pictures by such contemporaries as Jackson Pollock, and with modern black and white, because they never conflict with busy painted forms. They are also complementary to modern geometrically conceived works, such as the mathematically proportioned Mondriaan and Gris compositions, and the works of op artists like Vasarely and Anuszkiewicz. Art galleries often use plain band or stripping frames for hanging entire exhibitions, though sometimes less expensive Tenite or plastic moldings are even more desirable. The frames effectively enhance modern prints and drawings. They, like the band frames, can be acquired for as little as $20 to $30 and can range from there to $40 or $50. The price depends upon the size and finish along the edges, which can be gold, silver, or metallic Tenite.

Other popular frames are the French Louis XIII, XIV, XV, and XVI models. Louis XIII frames are straight panels, usually with carved floral decoration somewhere within their design. Louis XIV frames have ornate corners delicately carved within the panels. These frames are probably the best solutions for modern paintings if you want something in good taste but slightly more elaborate than the band or stripping frame. All work well with examples of the impressionist, postimpressionist, and Fauve schools of the late 19th and early 20th Century, including such well-known names as Pissarro, Renoir, Matisse, Signac, Dufy, Derain, and others. Louis XVI models are especially outstanding with American and English landscapes and scenes of the 19th Century. The French frames are, however, period frames, and you may consequently have difficulty finding original examples. But contemporary framemakers make artful facsimiles, usually priced at a minimum of $30 to $40.

A recent innovation is the shadow-spaced frame. This is usually a narrow wooden (stripped) frame with a space of approximately half an inch between the frame and the painting itself. Rather than enclosing the picture, it allows a breathing space for bold rhythms and rich colors, such as those found in many contemporary paintings.

Glass

Glass is used in picture frames to protect works of art, especially drawings, watercolors, pastels, gouaches, and graphics. Several types are available, of which grades A and B American Picture Glass are probably the best. They are of fine quality and, unlike others, do not discolor over a long period of time. Grade B is not as pure as Grade A, but both are satisfactory for picture framing. Unbreakable glasses are also available, but they are generally very expensive. The best of these is thin Plexiglas or Lucite acrylic plastic. It is generally twice the cost of grades A and B American Picture Glass.

In recent years there has been a trend toward framing art works with nonreflective glass. Because this glass has an etched surface, it will refract light and yield a nonglossy, varnished finish. Unfortunately this effect can tend to dim and distort the true qualities of some works of art. It requires that the work of art be flush with the glass, and so it is undesirable over drawings and pastels if the rubbing of the glass against their surfaces would harm them.

Mats

Mats were not used extensively prior to the 19th Century. Today we consider them an integral part of the total frame composition and use them to enclose a work of art within a frame. A general rule about the size of mats is that narrow ones should be used with wide frames; wide ones with narrow frames.

You can use a mat to enclose or to provide a background for a picture. If your work of art is damaged along the outer edges by an indelible stain or a tear, you can "mat out" these undesirable conditions by having the mat measured and cut to cover them. When you are thinking of buying a work of art, always consider the area a mat could or should cover. Generally, you will want the signature to be visible, as well as at least one inch around the entire composition. With graphics, this method should permit you to see the plate or stone mark.

Mats are available in almost all colors. They can be cardboard, silk, linen, or other fabric, but the most popular, least expensive is cardboard. Museums generally use cream-colored cardboard mats, which are standard and neutral. Regardless of color or fabric, a good mat should have an inner edge that is carefully cut and finished. This edge or bevel forms a frame within the frame. One of the most interesting additional accents for framing a work of art is the colored bevel. A cream-colored mat might, for example, have a narrow, eighth-inch black bevel to set off the composition within and further define its outer boundary.

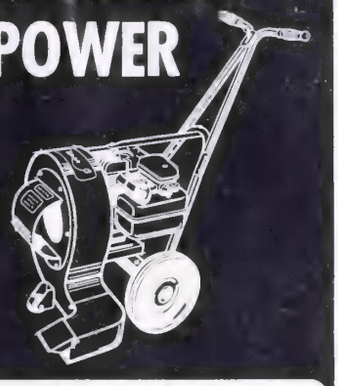
A period work of art is often framed with a French, or Empire mat, which has not only beveled edges but also drawn lines surrounding the mat opening. Between these lines there are often washes of color, or gold or silver lines, which serve to further accent and define the mat. Because the lines are usually drawn by hand, French mats can be slightly more expensive than plain, one-color cardboard. They are, however, excellent complements to Old Master drawings, 19th-century French prints, English watercolors, and sporting and floral prints.

Occasionally works of art are executed on both sides of a piece of paper, often by artists who cannot afford to waste paper. Some collectors choose to display only the picture they like best. It is possible, however, to exhibit both. You can use a two-sided or double mat in a frame that is glass on both sides. Such mats and frames are usually placed on small stands on coffee tables as conversation pieces.

Free-floating, introduced within the last decade, is a method of matting by which an entire picture is placed in front of an uncut mat. This arrangement is ideal if the paper upon which the drawing is rendered has decorative edges, or if the content of the composition is such that matting functions more appropriately as background than as container for the picture.

An additional suggestion for matting a work of art, and the most recent device employed by framemakers, includes placing the work between two pieces of glass, enclosing it with a frame, and using the color of your wall as the mat. This novel device, like free-floating, permits you to retain all the interesting textures, colors, and contours of the papers upon which the works of art are made.

Inserts



Inserts resemble mats, but are used only with oil paintings. They are linen or fabric areas that are now employed to set off a composition from its enclosing frame when a painting has a heavy texture calling for "room to breathe" before the all encompassing frame is affixed.

Caring for art treasures

Like all delicate objects, works of art require special and careful treatment. A fundamental and important rule is to avoid excessive

Shape up now for luxuriant shade next summer

Summer dryness, sudden storms, insects and disease can seriously damage your trees. Now's the time for trained Davey experts to prune away branches that are split, broken or lost to summer dieback. Dead branches are prime breeding places for disease.

Also, heavy, weakened old limbs should be cabled and braced against winter winds and crushing ice storms. Their loss would deprive your trees of their natural shapeliness—and deprive you of their rich shade.

Insure luxuriant spring beauty of your trees with vital Davey deep-root feeding. Our experts will use long-famous inorganic Davey Tree Food for normal soils, or the new Organic Tree Food developed by Davey to rejuvenate worn-out and clay soils. And be sure to give your lawn its fall feeding—with Davey-Green Lawn Food. Keeps lawns greener longer!

touching and handling of the surface of an art work. When damage occurs, it is usually difficult—if not impossible—to fix. Proper framing and hanging are, of course, the best ways to prevent any immediate damage. Nevertheless, even if you cannot always frame your prints, drawings, or oils immediately, you should know the essentials of protecting and cleaning them.

The first imperative rule in handling drawings and prints is not to place them between the thumb and forefinger with any pressure. This will leave an indented mark that is virtually impossible to remove. Instead, try to lift them gently from underneath. Never use adhesive plastic tapes to mend a torn or damaged print or drawing; after a period of time, the chemicals in this tape turn yellow and stain the paper of an art work.

The cleaning of prints and drawings, like their repair, should be left to professionals. Art galleries, drawing shops, or local museums can refer you to the most reputable restorer in your community. He can steam-clean prints and drawings marked by water stains or other similar spots. His fee is usually reasonable, beginning as low as $10 or $15, and varying with the size, age, and condition of the paper, and with the total amount of work necessary. A restorer can also bleach paper with various chemicals and apply a fixative to drawings so that charcoal will adhere permanently.

Never attempt to restore or repair damaged oil paintings; as with prints and drawings, such work should be given to qualified experts. But you yourself can clean surface dirt from oils, using a clean, smooth cotton cloth or a soft toothbrush (which some art dealers prefer), a mixture of lukewarm water, and a mild soap. Use straight, short strokes of the cloth or brush, and as little water as possible. Do a small section at a time and clean the cloth or brush repeatedly in clean warm water, continuing the procedure as long as seems necessary. If you are a novice at this cleaning process, remember that it can involve a risk. You might begin with some trial strokes in the corner of the painting and then progress carefully toward the middle of it.

To protect unframed drawings and prints, you may follow museum procedure. Curators use a thin paper hinge and wheat paste to attach an art work to a mat board, and place on top of this another board, in which an opening the size of the work has been cut. By using the two mat boards a margin higher than the face of the drawing or print, you can shield the surface of your art work from rubbing and prevent bending or similar mishandling. A piece of plastic paper between the boards affords further protection. A word of caution, however, about the kind of paper: soft tissue paper is popularly used, but sometimes this paper is crudely made, and its impurities can spot and yellow other papers with which it has contact. You can best see this occurring in old books where tissue paper is used to separate an etching or engraving from the printed page. The best procedure is to frame your prints, drawings, and pastels, and to protect them with glass as soon as possible. If you must temporarily mount them, use strong mat boards and transparent plastic-coated paper.

Works of art on canvas or paper can also be adversely affected by extreme degrees of humidity and light. When the relative humidity is at 100 percent, the air contains its maximum amount of moisture. Ideal conditions for exposing works of art exist when the relative humidity is between 40 and 60 percent. Make sure that your works of art are not subjected to an overheated and overdry room or a steamy bathroom where concentrations of moisture are likely to occur. The ultimate effects can be devastating. If possible, provide some measure of controlled air-conditioning, which is an ideal safeguard for delicate objects of art and the one favored by museums.

Natural light can over a period of time destroy and dull the surfaces of finished art work. Paintings, drawings, and especially pastels and watercolors should be kept out of direct sunlight. In as little time as a few weeks, strongly colored watercolors can become markedly faded and dulled by such exposure. ■

Culligan soft water makes a girl feel like a lady, and vice versa

Elegant. Radiantly refreshed. Groomed to slip into a party dress. You see, soft water is unique. It is filtered and completely free of hardness impurities. It works with mild soap to create luxurious, gently-caressing sudsy bubbles that help give your skin and complexion the smooth fresh look of health and beauty. There is no gummy curd or greasy film to stick to the skin. (Hard water curd causes that sticky ring around the bathtub.) A Culligan appliance will provide an unlimited supply of filtered soft water from every faucet in your home—automatically. For washing clothes, dishes, cars, and pets as well as people. So call and say "Hey Culligan Man!" (One last word: "soft water makes a boy feel like a man. And vice versa.")

Great gift idea. Take you, for instance, wouldn't you like to get a Tensor for Christmas?

There are good reasons why so many people want a "homely little lamp" for Christmas.

The best reason of all is that bright light was never this handy before...the equivalent of a 200-watt conventional desk lamp, right on the spot where you need it, in places where you simply couldn't conveniently get bright light before.

Tensor stands cozily by your bedside to direct light on your book, not in your spouse's eyes. Comes in close for desk work, for sewing without squinting, for manicuring, making up, hobbying. Stands in the smallest spot, bends every which way to be where you need it—for

Take Tensor anywhere, all around the house, and all over the map (it folds to pocket-size for traveling...and what motel ever had a proper reading light?)

You'll find that Tensor is homely for a reason. For instance, that's a square, honest base because it houses a square, honest transformer. (It also gives the lamp a very steady stance.) The original Tensor transformer inside is a minor engineering

A DEMONSTRATION OF THE CLUB'S UNIQUE BOOK-DIVIDEND SYSTEM

THE PURPOSE of this suggested trial membership is to demonstrate, by your own actual experience, four things highly important for every reading family. First, that membership in the Book-of-the-Month Club is a certain way to keep from missing the new books you fully intend to read; second, that you will pay on the average 20% less for those books you want than you otherwise would; third, that you will have a wide choice —more than 200 books a year; and fourth, that under the Club's new Book-Dividend system, you can acquire useful and beautiful volumes—as well as fine high-priced library sets—for trifling sums.

✶ HOW CAN IT BE DONE? The Club's Book-Dividend system is comparable to the traditional profit-sharing system of cooperatives. A portion of the amount members pay for the books they buy is accumulated and invested in entire editions of valuable books and sets through special contractual arrangements with the publishers. These are the Club's Book-Dividends.

✶ YOU HAVE A WIDE CHOICE OF BOOK-DIVIDENDS ▪ The system is simple. After the experimental membership, if you continue, with every Club Selection or Alternate you buy you receive one Book-Dividend Certificate. This Certificate is then exchangeable upon payment of a nominal sum, usually $1.00 or $1.50—occasionally more for an unusually expensive volume—for one of the Book-Dividends. More than a hundred different volumes are at present available, Towle made this sterling silver spoon yesterday.

(No extra charge for the 167 years of craftsmanship.)

ACTUALLY, the Towle silver tradition is over two hundred and seventy-five years old. It was born in Newburyport, Massachusetts, and Towle continues in the same place today. You rarely find tradition like that anymore.

That's why there's something extra in today's Towle sterling. You can see it. You can feel it. You can sense it. For, like its ancestors, every Towle piece is meant to be admired...and used. Use your Towle sterling for fancy dinners. Or family suppers. Put it in your dishwasher. Towle sterling is as practical as it is beautiful. (Use it regularly and it requires very little polishing.)

Take a good look at Towle before you buy. Study its varied elegance. Pick up a piece. Balance it. Examine its perfect design, its grace, its grandeur that could come only from the oldest silvermaking tradition in America; it dates from 1690.

But you'd better hurry. You've already missed 275 years of great silver.

Collecting original graphics

By JEFFREY H. LORIA

An "original" work of art is one which comes directly from the hand of the artist. There are two varieties of the original—the single, one-of-a-kind original and the multiple original. Oils, pastels, temperas, drawings, watercolors, and gouaches are single one-of-a-kinds. The graphics—etchings, engravings, aquatints, drypoints, woodcuts, lithographs, and similar media—are multiple originals. To create an original oil painting, the artist himself conceives the image and completes the work upon his canvas. In the graphic arts, the artist also creates his personal image, but works it upon stones, metal plates, or blocks of wood. From these a limited number of works are produced, each involving unique technical procedures and skills. Both forms of the original have been collected and prized for many centuries. Rembrandt's etchings were as widely collected by his contemporaries as were his oils. Picasso's lithographs are now as eagerly sought after as his paintings and drawings.

In some instances in the past, artists excelled in one particular medium, or even in one form of the graphic arts, and did not work in any other. Honoré Daumier, the 19th-century French satirist, was almost exclusively a lithographer. Contemporary artists, on the other hand, often explore diverse media and may even explore several techniques in a single work. We use the term "painter-printmaker" for an artist who works with both single and multiple originals.

Graphic art was first produced early in the 15th Century. Because graphics are multiple originals, they have been more extensively distributed and easily secured than one-of-a-kinds. Even today, graphic prints are the most widely collected forms of original art. They are readily available at prices from ten to thousands of dollars. The categories are as follows:

The print

The beginning collector may misunderstand the term "print." Be careful not to confuse its two popular uses: "print" as referring to original graphic art, and "print" as designating photographic reproductions. Prints that are lithographs, etchings, engravings, woodcuts, aquatints, and drypoints differ from photographic prints. In the former techniques, the artist himself does all of the work on the stone, the plate, or the woodblock. Since the entire execution comes directly from his hand, the work is unique and wholly original. Conversely, the artist has nothing to do with, and often does not approve of, photographically reproduced prints.

The "rare" print

As a collector of fine prints, you should have in mind the meaning of the word "rare." Generally, an art dealer using this qualifier in conversation means that there exist only about twenty or so examples of the etching or lithograph to which he is referring. For some artists, however, "rare" may signify an even lower number of examples. With Degas, for instance, it usually means that only two or three "impressions" exist. Artists often make impressions for themselves without intending to distribute them publicly. Sometimes, though, these prints find their way into the market; they, too, are "rare" prints, whether signed or unsigned.

Etching

Etching, one of the most popular forms of graphic art, originated in Northern Europe during the early 16th Century. Essentially, the process requires that the

YAMAHA

Why do some children hate learning to play, and others enjoy it?

Yamaha knows why.

"Sit just so! Keep the hands in this position! Curve your fingers like this!" Run the scales over and over. And so on and on through eons of drudgery. This is the old-fashioned piano teaching you may remember (with pain). It eliminates enjoyment.

But a good modern teacher brings out the joy of actually playing. Little melodies leap out from the children's touch right away. They may even transpose a simple tune into another key within a few minutes.

They get the feel and thrill of actual music first. It's not impossibly adult. They can do it! Then, gradually, later, they start reading music and learn technique. In short, a good teacher leads the child to pleasure. Progress can be literally amazing.

And recommendation of a modern, enthusiastic teacher is one of the things you can expect when you visit a Yamaha piano dealer.

What else can you expect? A thrilling demonstration of one of the world's finest pianos – Yamaha.

An instrument to inspire your child with its sound. Rare richness and clarity of tone. (Children respond far better to real quality.)

Many models to choose from, all of unusual craftsmanship. Beauty that complements your home. An exclusive Yamaha Service Bond that assures continuing peak performance. And prices that are startling in their modesty. This is Yamaha.

Both you and your children will enjoy it when you begin the Yamaha way. Begin now with an informative visit with your friendly Yamaha dealer.

plate with a coat of wax, and draw directly onto the plate by cutting through the wax with an etching needle. He then submerges or dips the plate into an acid bath. The acid "bites" or eats into the metal along the line drawn with the etching needle, and causes furrows or grooves to appear in the metal. Successive "bitings" in an acid bath determine the thinness or thickness of the "bitten" line. Artists usually have to submerge the plate more than once to achieve the desired effects of light, shade, and accent.

After the acid baths, the artist removes the wax from the plate. Then he files the rim of the plate to a smooth finish, so as not to tear the paper during printing. To print, the artist covers the plate with ink, which runs into the etched furrows. He then wipes the surface clean and, using a simple hand press, affixes a dampened piece of paper to the plate. In this way, the drawing on the plate is transferred to the paper. You will note that the transfer is in reverse; when you look at an etching or other form of printed graphic, you look at the reverse of the composition actually drawn on the plate.

Most etchings are black and white, but some artists work with colors, each of which requires an extra printing. In other words, if the two colors of an etching are red and blue, the artist first inks plate with red ink and prints it; he then cleans the surface, inks the section intended to be blue, and prints again in a similar fashion.

Contemporary etchings are most often rendered on old handmade Dutch, French, or Japanese paper. These papers, sometimes more than 100 years old, are generally very soft and pliable. Artists prefer old papers because they enhance the etching's richness, beauty, and warmth of tone. Also, old papers are devoid of the modern chemicals that can fade and discolor etchings, whether they are black and white or multicolored.

You can easily recognize original etchings by the rigid plate marks on the outermost edges of the paper. These appear as heightened and embossed edges surrounding the etching. If etchings are offered to you framed, be sure that this important characteristic is visible for your study. A facsimile of the plate mark is often produced photographically on reproductions. Two things will help you distinguish originals from facsimiles: first, feeling whether the plate mark is smooth and therefore photographed, or raised and therefore original; and second, noting whether the plate mark is visible from the reverse side of the paper, which is possible only on originals.

The characteristic etched line does not decrease or increase in successive graduated stages. Its end is square, abrupt, and untapered. Learn to understand its coarse texture and raised quality by gently running your fingertip over the etching. Always remember that the lines of the etcher's needle achieve all the effects of the composition, whether they are forms or figures or subtle tones of shadow.

Engraving

Engraving originated in the mid-15th Century. At that time the craftsmen of Northern Europe used to cut lines, forms, and designs on wood, metal, and gold. Now, in a similar way, the engraver draws a composition onto a metal plate by cutting lines or furrows with a burin, a small steel rod with a triangularly pointed end that is set at an oblique angle. This process is exceedingly slow, for the burin must scoop or cut deeply into the metal, not just scratch the surface, as with etchings on which the acid actually does the cutting.

Engravings are printed exactly like etchings. The artist inks the furrows of the cut lines. He then dampens a piece of paper with warm water, places it above the inked metal plate, and runs them both through a simple hand press. As with the etching, the image is in reverse, and you can see a rigid plate mark around the four edges of the engraving. The embossed edges are also visible fr the reverse side of the engravi

The cut of the burin produ sharp and crisp lines. Where etched lines end abruptly, graved lines taper gradually. Th is because the amount of pressu placed on the burin can cau the width of the line to vary. Ge erally, engraved lines are thi nest at the end. Moreover, the fi ished composition of an engravi is not usually as free-flowing that of the etching. A needle wax can produce a line instant with only light scratching, a glides across the surface of t metal at the will of the artist. T engraver, however, must d through the metal in a slowe more deliberate manner.

Artists very often use engra ing to complete areas of an etc ing already started. In fact, t two processes are constantly co bined, and it is often difficult f even the experts to see whi lines on a composition we etched, and which were engrave come granulated, covered with tiny holes. Then, inking the plate and painting from it, he creates a composition which combines the lines of the etching or engraving with the mottled tones of the aquatint. These tones vary according to the depths to which the different portions of the plate are bitten, and can reveal gradations from black to gray to white. The tones are characteristically opaque and often cause the aquatint area of the work to resemble a flat piece of hammered antique silver. Line creates the effects of etching and engraving; tone, shadow, and mass create those of the aquatint. These different media are, however, very often combined, and when we say "aquatint" we usually mean "aquatint over engraving or etching." The aquatint rarely appears alone. When placing it over another medium, an artist is said to be "combining techniques."

Francisco Goya, the 18th-century Spaniard, was the supreme master of the aquatint. He first made etchings and then added aquatints to them. A granulated surface resulted that gives the light and atmosphere of his aquatints a vibrant quality impossible to achieve with any other medium. Today printmakers are again turning to the aquatint as an adjunct to etching and engraving. Jacques Villon, the master 20th-century French cubist painter and printmaker, executed many aquatints, some of the best examples of which may be found in the permanent print collection of the Museum of Modern Art in New York City.

Drypoint

Drypoint, which resembles engraving and etching, was first executed in Germany in the late 15th Century. Whereas the etching is the product of the acid-bitten line, the drypoint is the result of the dry, scratched line. You can recognize the drypoint line by its rich, velvety feeling, by a softness which the etched acid-bitten line and the burin lines of the engraving cannot capture. Like the aquatint, the drypoint is often an adjunct to etching. You will find some compositions that combine all three techniques—the Once upon a time there lived a little boy in a big house in the country. And every night when he went to sleep he heard the robbers, who had their camp a half-mile from the house, trying to get into his room. They were after his silver dollar, which he kept in a drawer beside the bed. Every night he heard them coming closer and closer. He said to his mother: Mother, I need some soldiers to keep the robbers away from my silver dollar. And she said to the little boy: All right, you can have a blue army or a red army. As long as you make your bed every morning. The little boy thought he'd better have a red army, because he suspected the robbers would see them more easily in the dark. That night when he went to bed, there were soldiers all around him. On the sides, on the top, standing at attention, marching around the pillow, even lying at attention beside him in the sheets, if you can imagine that. And that night, and every night after, he tried to listen for the robbers, but he never heard them again. The robbers had to stay in their camp, because the little boy's army looked six and a half feet tall in their tall hats, in the dark. And sometimes, under the pale moon, they could see the little boy himself, on a great white pony, leading them into battle and calling Charge! in a voice like the greatest general in the world. And the little boy always checked his silver dollar in the morning to see if it was safe. And it was. And then he inspected his troops and made sure every one of them was standing as straight as a musket.

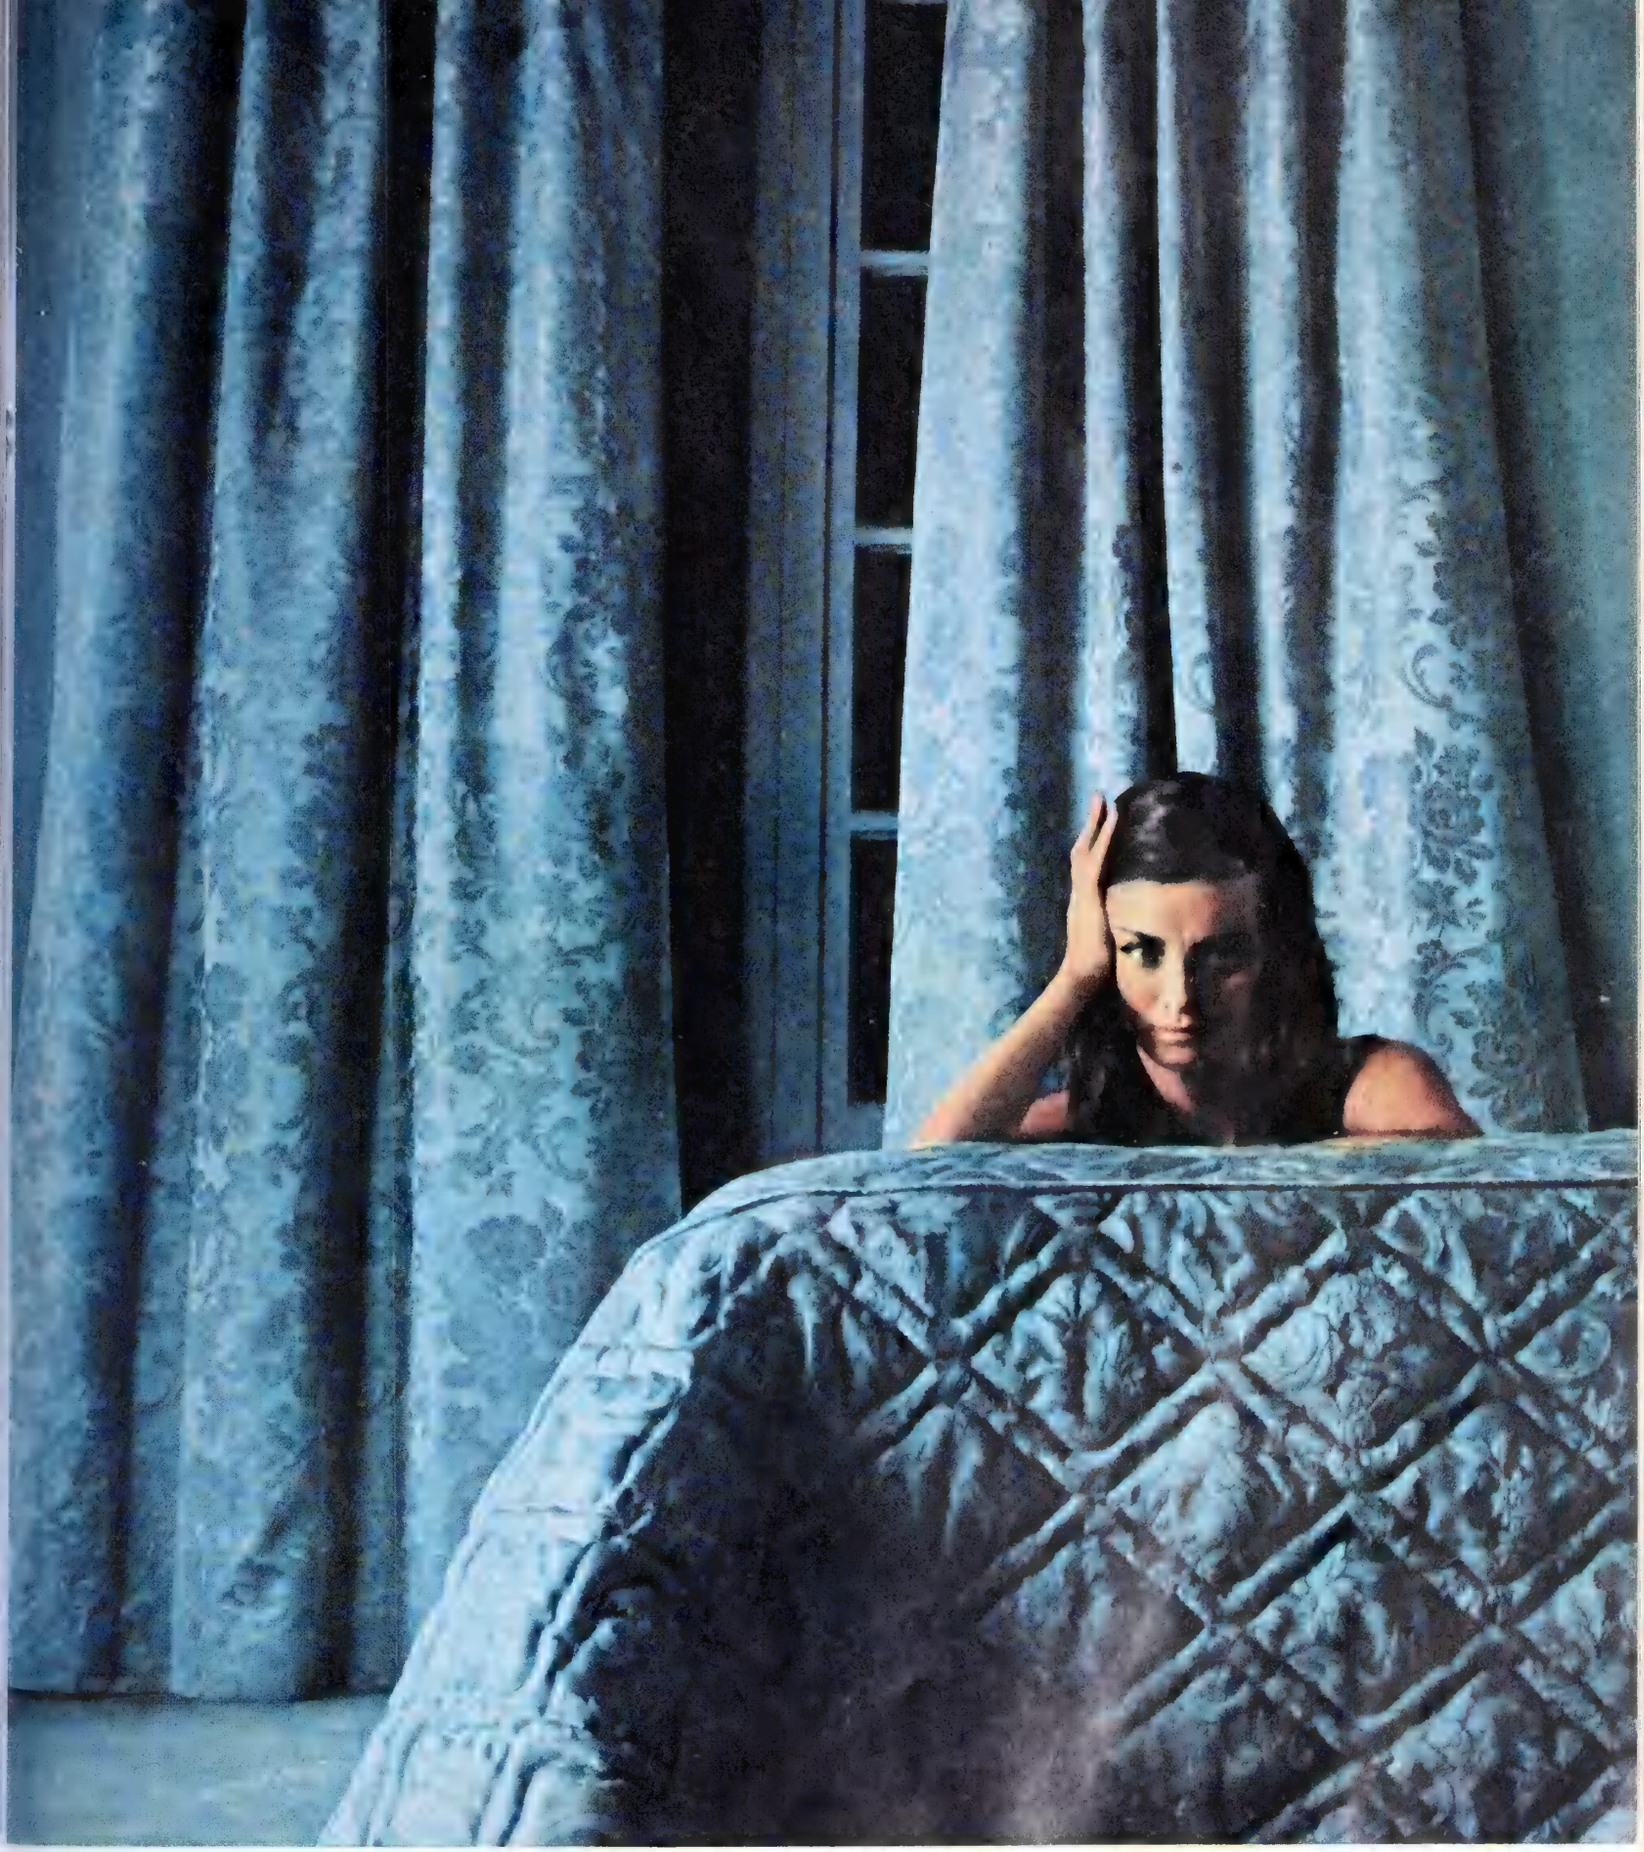
etching defined further by the drypoint and heightened by the aquatint.



To create a drypoint, the artist sketches directly onto a bare piece of metal. He uses a needle having a steel tip set with a diamond, ruby, or other hard precious stone. The needle scratches the surface of the metal and leaves an identifiable, irregular ridge on either side of every line. This ridged line is either saw-edged, razor-edged, or knife-edged, depending upon the direction of the drypoint and the pressure put on it. The printing of the drypoint is identical to that of etchings and engravings. The metal plate is printed in reverse on a simple hand press.

Woodcutting

The woodcut was the earliest graphic process. Its potentials were first exploited in China during the T'ang dynasty of the Eighth Century and in Europe during the early 15th Century by Albrecht Durer, the earliest European master to work with the woodcut. Following him were the "Little Masters"—Pencz, Beham, and Altdorfer, who portrayed religious scenes and vignettes from everyday life. The woodcut continued to be important for artists until the 19th Century, but at that time it was rivaled by the newly introduced daguerrotype. The color woodcuts produced in Japan and China during the latter part of the 19th Century greatly infl enced contemporary developme of the technique. During the 20 Century, along with the very sim lar and recently developed lin leum or linocut technique, th woodcut has again become major form of graphic art. Leo ard Baskin and Antonio Frasco are two chief contemporary e ponents of the woodcut. Hen Matisse and Pablo Picasso, asid from their work in lithograph have also furthered the techniqu of the linocut. Original woodcu differ markedly from lithograph etchings, and engravings. Th woodcut is a relief process; th others involve an intaglio metho which means that the drawn line are incised and engraved. Th woodcut is very simple to prin and requires only a hand rolle press. The woodcutter first draw directly onto the surface of th wood block, usually cherry woo seven-eighths of an inch thick. H uses burins, gouges, chisels, an other special tools to cut away th wood with the grain and put hi composition in relief on the block The design areas that are le in relief are called the "black" o positive areas; those areas aroun the design, which are cut away are the "white" or negative areas

After cutting, the artist ink the wood block with either blac or colored ink. If the woodcut i to have more than one color, h must make an additional bloc for each one. The pigments for colored woodcuts are ground in water and applied to the block like a paste.

Black and white woodcuts are most easily identified by the interplay of solid areas of blacks and whites. Woodcuts present form in silhouette. You can feel a variety of textures by touching them. These textures, from the grain of the wood, are an integral part of the artistic expression.

The hand-printed woodcut is most often rendered on white Japanese rice paper, which you can recognize by the watermark lines that are approximately three-quarters of an inch apart over the whole surface. This paper retains color pigments whose penetration you can see from the reverse side of the composition. The color is not only a surface effect but also part of the paper.

An additional way to recognize the color woodcut is by its color gradation, which is determined by the amount of pigment and water applied to the thin rice paper. Become familiar with this richness of color. Also, hold original color woodcuts to the light; doing this should enhance their color, an occurrence that is unique and exclusive. You should examine a woodcut in both artificial light and daylight, since it will look different in both. See it, too, in the position it will have when hung on your wall.

Lithography

The lithograph originated in Bavaria in 1798 with the unique discovery by Aloys Senefelder that grease and water do not mix. "Lithograph" comes from the Greek words lithos, stone, and graphein, to write. To execute a lithograph, the artist draws his composition directly onto a prepared slab of porous limestone with crayons that contain a resin or a wax. He then applies ink, which adheres only to the places covered with the crayon. To print, he usually works with a professional skilled in the complicated process of "pulling" or printing lithographs. The lithographer will clean the stone with acid and water prior to each "pull."

At the beginning of the 19th Century, the French masters Eugène Delacroix, Théodore Gericault, and Eugène Isabey began a great tradition of the "painter-lithographer." When photography was introduced in the mid-19th Century, however, lithography declined. It was revitalized by the impressionists in the 1870's and 1880's. Degas, Manet, Pissarro, and finally Toulouse-Lautrec in the 1890's brought about an unprecedented revival. Lithography developed appreciably in America in the early decades of the 20th Century, especially through the work of Joseph Pennell, Adolf Dehn, George Bellows, Raphael Soyer, Thomas Hart Benton, and Stow Wengenroth. The tremendous contemporary interest in collecting lithographs results largely from the work of the School of Paris from 1940 to the present. Braque, Picasso, Chagall, Leger, Rouault, Matisse, Moore, Giacometti, and others, along with American artists, have developed lithography into an art form that rivals oil paintings in appeal and popularity. The Tamarind Lithography Workshop in Los Angeles, California, under the direction of Mrs. June C. Wayne, has also been responsible in great measure for the recent resurgence of interest in American lithography.

If you see a lithograph stone in any museum and then see an original lithograph printed from it, you will find that the vividness and spontaneity of the drawing on the stone is always transferred to the print. This liveliness can never be achieved by photographic reproduction and is a distinguishing trait. You can also find the mark of the outer edge of the lithograph stone around the edge of the printed lithograph. It is not as distinguishable as the plate mark of an etching, but certainly its slightly suggested presence can help you discern the original. Contemporary lithographs are generally rendered on Arches paper or Rives paper—heavy papers having a textured grain. You can often distinguish their watermarks by holding the paper up to light. The printed words Arches or Rives will then be visible. During printing, the grain in all of the area pressed by the lithograph stone is flattened. You can always look for the juxtaposition of the flattened and the regularly grained paper. Look, too, for some slight relief or raising of color above the surface of the paper. This is fairly good evidence of an original.

You can usually distinguish lithographs by an inklike odor almost always present, even years after printing. Also, original lithographs have subtle and widely ranged tones and textures never captured in mechanical reproductions. No method can duplicate the deep blacks and intense, rich colors of hand-printed original lithographs.

Very often a graphic artist not only signs a work in the plate or stone but also adds his name in pen or pencil to the margins of finished prints. This extra signature often raises the price but never the artistic value of the work in question. Specially pencil-signed and numbered examples of a Picasso lithograph can cost as much as five or six times the amount of the same print also issued in a limited number but lacking the signature. For example, "Fleurs" is recorded in Mourlot's recent catalogue (No. 351) of Picasso's recorded works as being issued in 1961. These were one hundred examples — numbered and signed. They bring as much as $250 each. Mourlot also notes that an additional five hundred examples were issued, but they were not signed. These examples sell for $75 unframed in the market. But price boosts that result from these penciled signatures do not indicate any enhancement of artistic quality. A buyer who pays for a signature may be more interested in prestige or monetary values than esthetics. You yourself must judge whether you want to buy signatures or whether you are earnestly buying works of art. Do not deprive yourself of some of the really beautiful art works currently for sale merely because they are unsigned. A signature never decreases the value of a work of art, but if the artist sometimes does not think it that important, why should you?

Prices of graphics

The earliest known prices for graphics are those paid during the early 16th Century for a set of sixteen prints by Albrecht Durer from "The Little Passion." These sold for a sum equivalent today to 31 cents. In the present market, however, print prices are definitely on the rise, and have been for several years. This is true not only of the old masters like Durer and Rembrandt, who have become increasingly more difficult to find, but also of the 17th-, 18th-, and 19th-century etchers and engravers like Adriaen van Ostade, Jacques Callot, Robert Nanteuil, and Charles François Daubigny, and of the 20th-century American and European printmakers like John Taylor Arms, Raphael Soyer, Adolf Dehn, Georges Rouault, Pablo Picasso, Georges Braque, Marcel Vertes, the German Expressionists Max Pechstein, Edvard Munch, and others. The lithographs of Vertes, which brought $40 to $50 ten years ago, now command prices from $75 to more than $100 each, an increase in value of almost 100 percent. Contemporary black-and-white and colored graphics now range from $30 or $40 to hundreds and even thousands of dollars, depending as usual upon such things as the artist's popularity, his esthetic appeal, the condition of the art object, the demand for specific subject matter, and the size of the edition.

As the size of a graphic edition varies, so does the price of each print: the smaller the edition, the higher the price. This consideration is, of course, determined to some degree by the artist's production costs, which increase as the size of an edition decreases. Conversely, his costs per unit decrease as the size of his edition increases. A lithograph by the Spanish master Miró in an edition of 150 might cost $200 unframed. Were the edition limited to 50 examples, the same lithograph would probably cost $300 to $350 unframed.

Some collectors deliberately seek the early numbers of an edition, and also try to find examples printed on paper different from that of the first "pulled" edition. But graphics with low numbers are really no more valuable than the ones with high numbers, though the impression may vary in some slight way. This point refers, of course, to contemporary prints only: those of the old masters are not numbered by edition, but often occur in a few states.

People often ask how the prices of old prints are affected by their various states—trials or experiments executed prior to the artist's achieving satisfactory results. They are generally not clear or perfect impressions in which the ink has been evenly distributed, but are instead rather muddy and unclear, some of them undoubtedly unsuccessful attempts in the opinion of the artist. Yet, although two centuries ago collectors were not interested in buying early states, they will today pay high prices for these unique works simply because they are rarities and hence collector's items. Though it is not a very good idea to begin collecting with the absolute intention of seeking rare states, you should decide for yourself in a given instance whether you prefer to own an unusual but perhaps hard-to-decipher print or a clear, more brilliant, not so rare impression. ■

Decorator's Diary

One decorator's notes on new home-furnishing finds and ways to put them to work

"Help is needed," said June McGregor succinctly over the phone.

"Where?" I asked.

"Guest room."

"What's the trouble?"

"Mother McGregor."

I understood. Because the elder Mrs. McGregor is one of those witchy mothers-in-law who can make her daughters-in-law start behaving like frightened schoolgirls the moment the news is flagged that she is on her way to visit.

"It's dreadful," said June, in a good facsimile of a guilty whisper. "I haven't finished the guest room, and She's due to arrive two weeks from Friday. She'll want to know what I did with that crazy marble-top dresser she gave me and those two horsehair lady's chairs, and honestly I haven't even looked at them since the day they got here." I could sense she was biting her fingernails or chewing on the corner of her handkerchief.

Things, of course, are never as bad as they seem, including June's guest room, where she had at least painted the walls white and stained the parquet floors ebony. There were two thoroughly naked boxspring-and-mattress combinations, and two high-backed walnut-framed chairs out of some Victorian McGregor's front parlor, their black horsehair covering not so shot that a well-placed cushion or two wouldn't make it presentable. And then there was the formidable and wonderful black walnut dresser. It was a good seven feet high, thanks to its towering, tall center mirror, which was flanked on each side by sets of drawers, like a vanity table. And out of the mirror frame, like the multiple arms of a Hindu goddess, sprang tiny shelves and platterlike knickknack holders—all in all a piece of furniture to marvel at, and utterly right for a guest room, because its assorted drawers and platforms would certainly cope with every kind of duffle a visitor could possibly show up with.

"See?" said June. "And I haven't a solitary idea what to do in here except to load down the dresser with all that old Bristol glass I found in Mother's attic."

"Well," said I, "let's try it, anyway." And in no time at all we were scrubbing away at the dresser, polishing its curlicue carvings, and going to work like window trimmers, arranging blue glass perfume bottles and pin trays, vases, and jewelry cases on its marble surfaces.

I stood back and admired. No one ever attacked a color scheme this way before, but it worked.

"My child," I said, "now we must be off before closing time to the nearest department store. The ready-made bedspread department for us—to pick up two sets of black-and-white checked cotton bed covers, a couple of Bristol-blue bolsters, a cushion or two in brightest petunia pink, and some in that mossy green that's so smart and looks so great with Bristol blue. And en route we'll stop by the rug department and collect two rugs in moss green nylon shag—an eight-by-ten for the center of the room and a four-by-six for the window bay, where some day soon we'll put the chairs at each side of a little marble-top coffee table. Now, who says you can't decorate a room on short notice?"

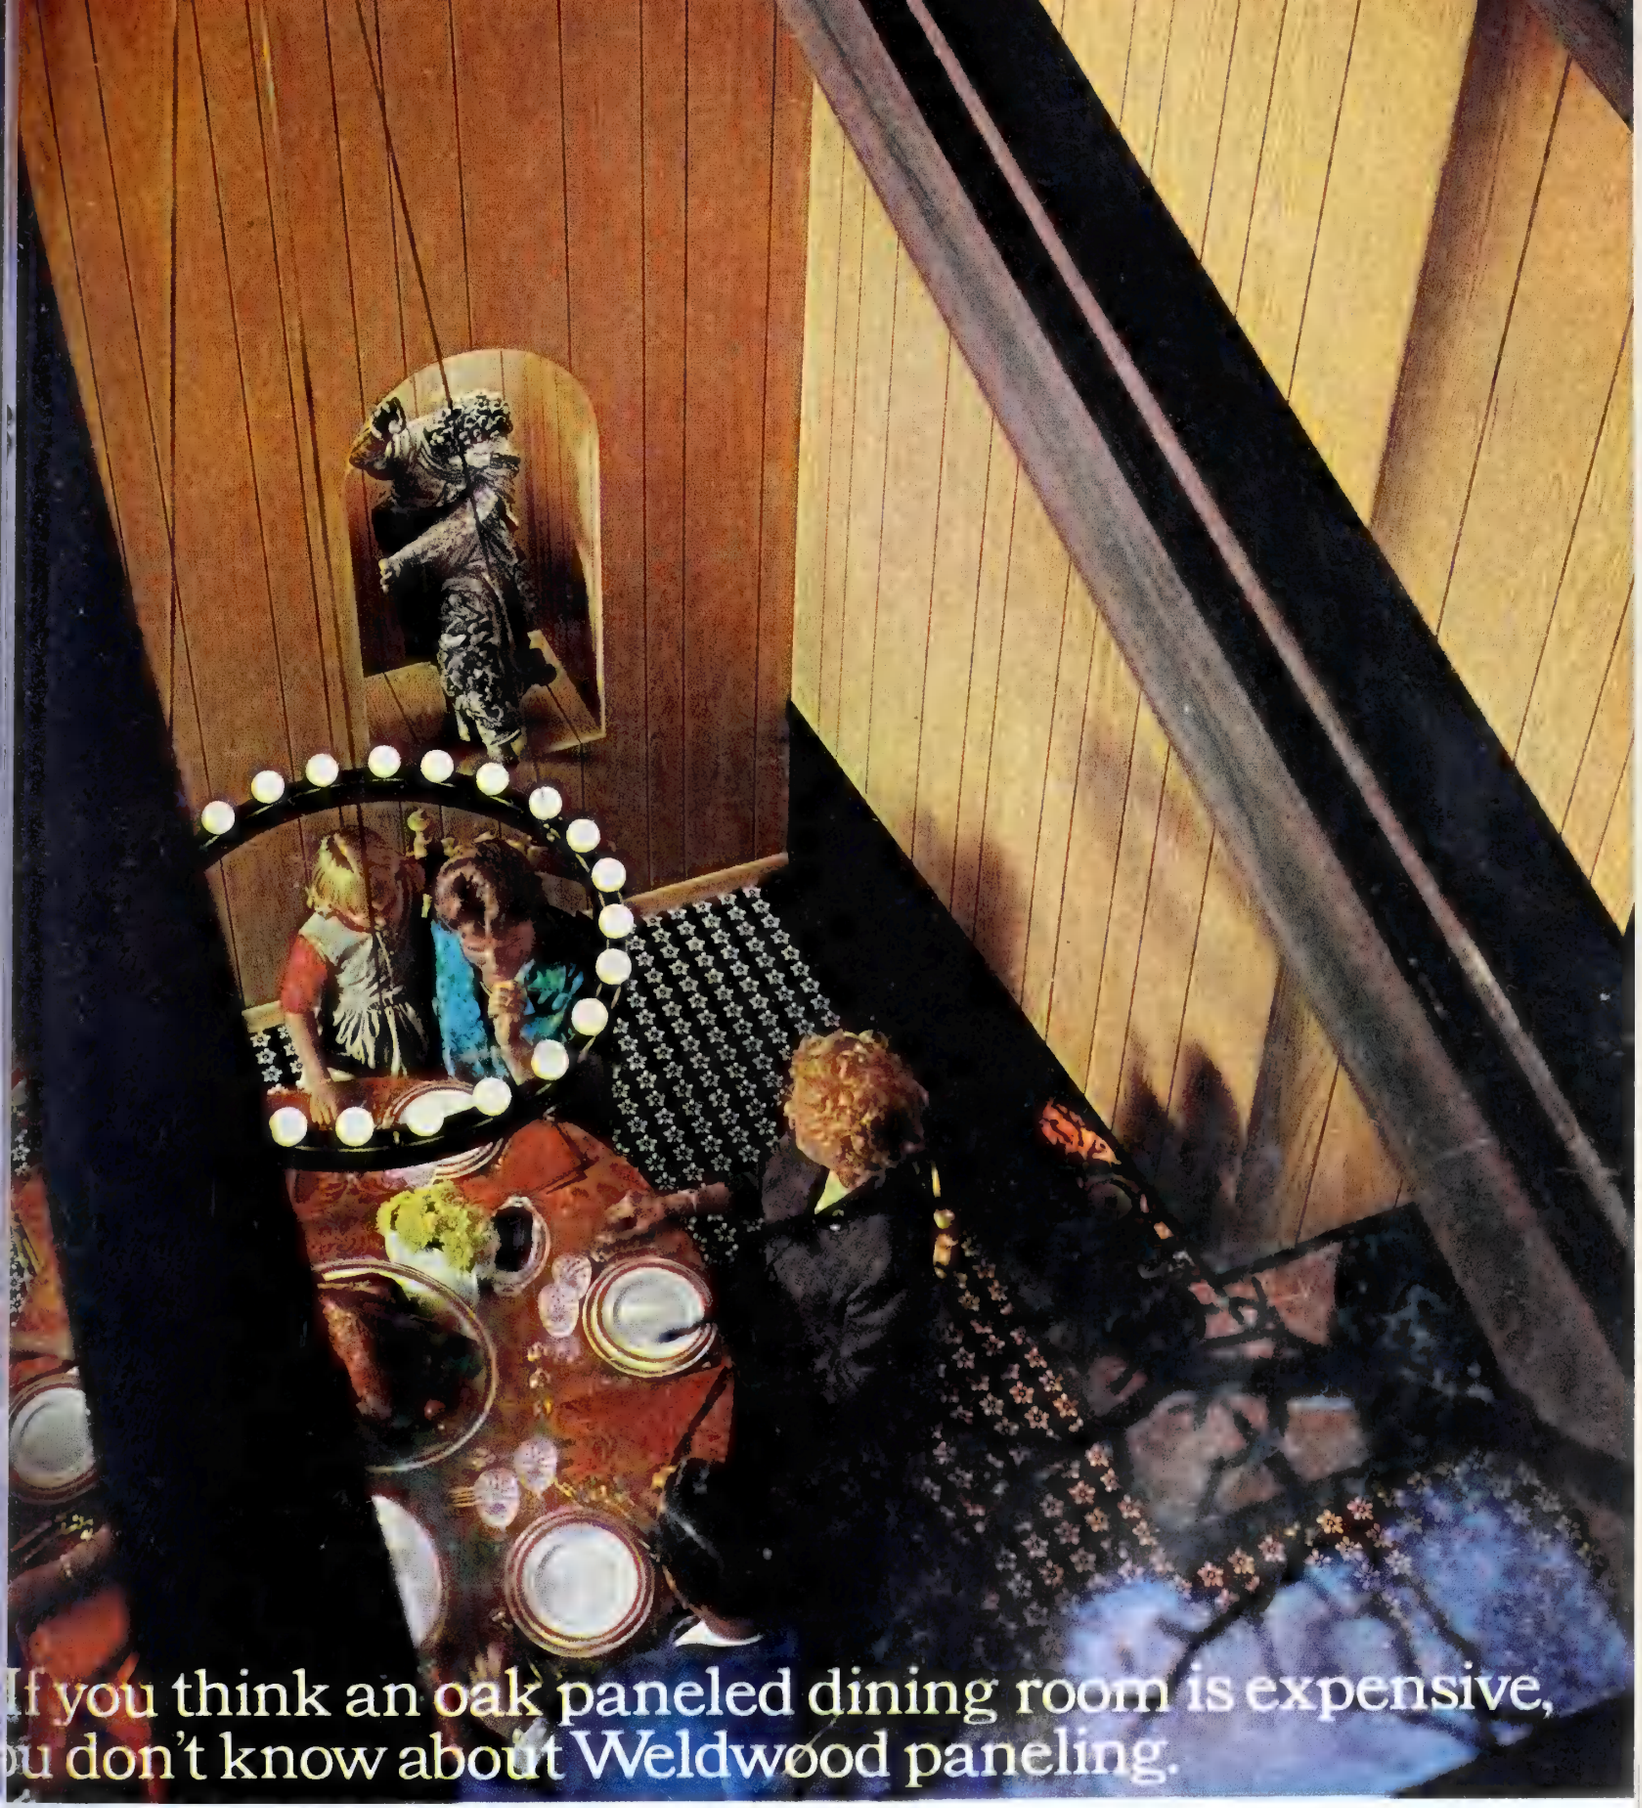
"I do," said June wryly. "You've completely forgotten the windows, and where Mother McGregor is concerned they're the room's most important part. In her own house, every window is swathed in layers of glass curtains, draperies, over-draperies, and window blinds because—it's her favorite topic—she can only sleep in a room that is midnight-dark. Unfortunately, these windows face east, as you will observe."



"You do me an injustice. I was coming to windows. You see, we're also going to stop by the window-shade department—"

Which we did, of course, and thereby hangs the great success of Mother McGregor's room, as this subtly shaded chamber is now called. For one look at June's blue Bristol glass and the Victorian Baroque of the dresser and chairs, and I knew at once that nothing could be quite as right in this room as the Joanna Western Mills' new Satin-Tone Exlite window shades. Their base is the finest cambric, but their finish has an elusive, shimmering stripe, a quiet iridescence that would make them almost qualify as op art. They come in Satin White, Peppermint Pink, Champagne Beige and Aquasheen, the blue that makes them just what this room ordered. To make them more desirable still, they thoroughly black out light, so they are marvelous in the rooms of babies and the dowager McGregors of this world. Best of all, they may be ordered with shaped hems—in any of seven styles—and trimmed as distinctively as a lampshade. I chose the shape called "Beverly Loop," because in form and black gimp patterning it seemed to echo the room's Victoriana. We hung the shades over the simplest white Dacron curtains, but as an added finish topped them with valances that match their borders.

I wish I could report that the charm of this room has changed Mother McGregor into a lovable old dear. It did not. But at least it has caused the good lady to go and treat her own bedroom windows likewise. And any day now lucky June may be the recipient of a load of curtains, draperies and over-draperies that have outlived their usefulness.—M.G. ■

Waiting for Waterford is such sweet sadness.

Enjoy the bittersweet beauty of the wait. Don't be melancholy because you have to count the weeks or months between the time you order Waterford Irish Crystal and the time it arrives. There is no such thing as instant Waterford. It takes 10 years to teach a man to pull a stem. Or blow a goblet. Waterford is born to live many lifetimes. Now on the table:

American Wines

By PHILIP WAGNER

When President Johnson suggested the use of American wines to our embassies and consulates, he was simply adding patriotism to what many Americans had long considered common sense. The development of respectably good wines in America, certainly good enough to serve on all but rare occasions, is overdue its proper recognition.

The odd thing is that more Americans have not yet discovered their native wines. To be sure, many have. This is especially true on the West Coast, where there exist a lore and a cult of the superior wines of California. But for many Americans the use of wines of any sort is still not familiar either in entertaining or in everyday dining. When wine does enter into the planning of entertainment, and especially if the occasion is "important," the choice is likely to be one of the well-known wines of Europe.

It is time this changed.

Wine producing in our country has long since come of age. Nine-tenths of the world's wine is ordinary (ordinary in the sense that bread and cheese and fried chicken and so many of the other good things of life are ordinary). This is as true of American wines as of any others. At the same time our best wines are up there close to the front row. Contrary to a general impression, they are not carbon copies of the wines of France and Germany. Why should they be? How can they be? A wine comes from a certain grape grown in a certain climate and a certain soil, fermented and brought to ripeness by a certain winemaker. There are bound to be differences, and they are what matter. The differences between our fine wines and those of Europe exist to be acknowledged and enjoyed.

For many years editor of the Baltimore Sun, Philip Wagner is now columnist, wine grower, and experimenter with new grape varieties.

So our wines require and will reward a bit of study. Once you understand certain basic facts about the wines, the "study" simply means tasting and more tasting, frequently and attentively and done preferably with good friends.

To begin with, American wines fall into two very distinct categories. This is not in itself unusual. Every European recognizes the distinction between the sun-drenched wines of the Mediterranean basin and the wines of the more northerly, temperate regions. So in this country we have the wines of "Mediterranean" California, and the wines east of the Rockies where the old-world grapes (that thrive in California) are difficult to grow. This difference runs through any intelligent discussion of American wines.

There is another distinction. In California the viticultural outline is pretty well settled—which grapes and which areas are best for what wine-producing purposes. East of the Rockies, wine producing is still in evolution, especially in the all-important matter of grape varieties.

The wines of California

In California, a further distinction is made, between the premium wines and the everyday or "standard" wines. The latter are very well-made wines, probably the best ordinaires in the world. They come mainly from high-production vineyards and are usually blends from many vineyards. In the making of them, nuance gives way to a standard. They are excellent value, wonderfully easy to drink, and ideal for day-to-day use in casual entertaining. Some are bottled at the winery (a form of insurance), but much is shipped in bulk from smaller wineries to be bottled under local brand names. They are marketed mostly under "generic," which is to say almost meaningless, names—burgundy, claret, or sauterne.

They may be bought in jugs or in the conventional fifths. Though the brand name is important to the buyer, this is not something requiring emphasis at table, so it makes sense to serve these generously in carafes or a glass pitcher. The reds are almost invariably better than the whites. Shop around until you find one to your taste and stick to it.

California's premium wines are another story. They are made of certain choice, shy-bearing grapes among which are Cabernet, Gamay, Merlot, and Pinot Noir for red wines (Zinfandel is a special case yielding premium wines in some areas and merely standard wines in others); and Chardonnay, White Pinot, Riesling, Sauvignon Blanc, Sémillon, and Traminer for white. A grape-variety name on the label almost always means a superior wine in the bottle.

The production of these so-called "varietal" wines is concentrated in limited areas. The most important are the Napa and Sonoma valleys north of San Francisco; an area around Livermore east of the Bay; another area south of the Bay in Santa Clara county and farther south around Hollister and Paicenes; a small but choice area in the Santa Cruz mountains between Bay and sea; and (a new area) on the benches bordering the Salinas valley. The vintage of these grapes is always too small, there is intense competition for uncommitted supplies, and the cost of the wines is correspondingly high.

The principal premium producers have reputations as secure in their way as those of the great Bordeaux chateaux: Almaden, Beaulieu, Charles Krug, Concannon, Cresta Blanca, Inglenook, Louis Martini, Paul Masson, and Wente. Others pushing them are Beringer, Buena Vista, Christian Brothers, Hanns Kornell, Korbel, Mirassou, the Novitiate of Los Gatos, Sebastiani, and Weibel. Some of these specialize in only one or two wines.

Then there are the members of the wine-producing peerage who produce in such small quantities that their wines are not broadly distributed. One of these is Martin Ray, on his mountaintop near Saratoga, whose Cabernet, Chardonnay, Pinot Noir, and Champagnes are hors concours and carry extravagant price tags; others are the Souverain Cellars, notable for a velvety Zinfandel among other things; Mayacamas and Stony Hill, for their Chardonnay; Hallcrest, for superior Cabernet and Riesling; and Ficklin Vineyard, for its altogether exceptional ports. All are worth seeking out, though hard to find beyond California.

One more word about brand names. For good commercial reasons the premium producers have "lines" that include wines of lesser quality. On the other hand some big producers of standard wines have their premium lines as well. This means more often than not that the premium producers go shopping for their cheaper wines, and that the bulk producers go shopping for their premium lines. There is a fair bit of switching about.

The wines of New York State

The contrast between California and other American wine-producing regions is as extreme as that between, say, the Rhineland and the Rhone Valley. The grapes are different, the climates and soils are different, and naturally the wines are different.

New York is the biggest wine-producing state after California. For better than a century there have been vineyards on the slopes overlooking some of the spectacular Finger Lakes in the central part of the state, and for all that time the district has been famous for its Champagnes. Though four-fifths of our American wines are from California, a good half of all our Champagnes are produced in New York, a testimony to their quality and popularity. The names of Gold Seal, Great Western, and Taylor are as close to being household words as any names in American wines, and the Champagnes they stand for are made from grapes quite different from those of California. They are American varieties and hybrids with such names as Delaware, Catawba, Elvira, Dutchess. The wines they produce are crisp, aromatic, and to be accepted for what they are—indigenous wines

Nobody ever tells you these things

From the kitchen of our food editor come helpful answers to some common but often puzzling questions in cookery

By HELEN McCULLY

Is there any quick way to remove fat from a pan of gravy? If you have a comparatively small amount of liquid (two cups or less), dump one or two trays of ice cubes into the pan. The fat will congeal around the ice, and you simply lift it out, leaving only the natural juices. Obviously, the juices need heating again before serving.

What type of knife should you use when frosting cakes? If it's a large cake, a fairly broad, medium length, flexible metal spatula—frosting the sides first, then the top. For small cakes, a palette knife such as artists use (available in any art store) because it's short, narrow, flexible, and just the right size.

What is sake and how is it pronounced? Sake, pronounced "sa-key," is a dry white wine brewed principally of rice and water. In Japan, where it is made and from which it is imported, it is served straight, warmed to about 100° F., actually lukewarm, before, with, or after meals.

How do you use sesame seeds? Quoting from that splendid book, An Herb and Spice Book, by Craig Claiborne: "They play an important role in pastry making, are an excellent addition to green salads and French dressings in general, and toasted and blended with butter they make a most palatable spread." Mr. Claiborne goes on to say: "Sesame seeds were introduced into the United States during the days of slave trading, but they did not achieve their extraordinary and deserved status in this country until a decade or so ago. One of the first uses of the seeds in America was as an ingredient in benne wafers." They were known to the African slaves as "benne seed," hence the name of the benne wafers, so familiar to Southerners.

Can you tell me the difference between a chateaubriand, a tournedo, and a filet mignon? All come from the filet of beef, known in the U.S. as the tenderloin. A chateaubriand (it can also be spelled with a "t" rather than a "d") is cut from the center or thick end of the tenderloin that is thickest at the butt end and tapers down to the tip. It is cut about 2 inches thick

Live in filthy slum in small bamboo house built over muddy water. Crowded. Unhealthy. No water. No sewage. Kitchen stove in outside shed. Two skimpy meals a day. No milk. Always hungry. Children in rags. Struggle to keep Esthela in school. Dreams of becoming a nurse. Parents sick with worry over children they cannot feed, clothe, educate. Help to Esthela means help to whole family.

55 BEECHWOOD AVE., BOGOTA, N.J.

There's more here than meets the eye.....
and what you can't see makes the big difference

Of course you can see the clean, sculptured lines and exciting colors of this Viko dining group. You can see how dramatic it would be in your dining room, or in that up-to-date living/dining area that is so much a part of the newest homes.

What can't you see?

First, the table. If we didn't tell you, you wouldn't realize that the warm, feather edged Permold top is actually a wonderful plastic that is stain and mar-resistant.

Second, the luxurious swivel chairs. Because of the entirely new Foamold process you can have chairs that combine beauty, comfort, and durability at half the price of what you would pay for anything comparable. This process gives you layers of lush urethane foam, molded over strong tubular steel frames. You can't see the cradling comfort. You have to sit in it to believe it. You can have these chairs in a covering of rugged, leather-like vinyl or, if you prefer, in a wide variety of tailored fabrics, Scotchgard® or Zepel®-treated for protection against stains. (In fact, when you see these chairs and sit in them you'll want them for every room in your home.)

All tables and chairs come with bases of either polished chrome or, as shown, in Vikowood-rugged tubular steel which is etched and finished to look like fine wood.

Third, the cost. Because of our exclusive process you can get these custom styled dining groups for about $199* or chairs alone for about $39*. And that's not all. There's a wide collection of living room furniture too with Foamold sofas available starting at about $159*.

Fill in the coupon on the right. See all the pieces in the Foamold group and you'll agree. It's the most dramatic idea in furniture in 25 years. Foamold by Viko.

Dear Dundee,
Thank you for the flowers. Roses have always been my favorites-but on towels these are special! Your new Persian roses are more than lovely. They're so soft they seem to bloom against my face. And the colors! My Persian roses are gold. But those shades of red, blueberry, olive green and pink-I'm tempted to redecorate my bath every day. And at only $2.25 a bath towel, I could! Dundee, you make beautiful towels but you're also my favorite florist! Love, Emilie

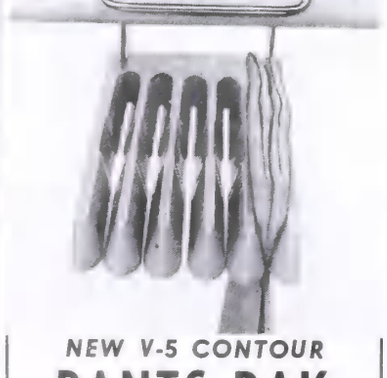
The Art of SCRIMSHAW

. . . developed on the rolling ships of old New Bedford has almost disappeared. Only a few men still follow in the footsteps of the seamen who painstakingly and with great delicacy engraved the ivory from the whales they caught.



Our work is done in this ancient tradition, on genuine ivory and entirely by hand.

The decoration on each piece we show is an old whaling ship. Links and mountings are heavily gold-plated. The ultimate gift for those you particularly wish to please.

GREAT FOR CHRISTMAS GIVING, TOO!

Nothing like experience. Cliff Barber, with 28 years of it right here at Harrington's, is in charge of curing and smoking.

Our business was started 92 years ago by a man with a great gift for smoking meats. We still use his original formula, never having found a way to improve it. Harrington Hams and Bacon cure, then smoke leisurely over corn cobs and maple wood. We don't use hickory. Never have. Our way tastes so much better!

Each year thousands visit our stores at Richmond and Stowe, Vermont is beautiful in every season. We do hope you will come and see us. We'll be delighted to show you how we cure and smoke.

In the meantime, why not use the Order Form at right just as though it were part of our catalog, which it is. We ship prepaid parcel post and guarantee perfect arrival and satisfaction or full refund without quibble. We give careful attention to all gift orders. Just enclose your list with your own cards, or tell us what to say on the attractive ones we furnish.

We can't wait for you to try our Old Fashioned Vermont Smoked Hams, Bacon, Pheasants, Turkeys and other tasty treasures! We know you'll be ordering often for yourself and friends!

Softly—as in a morning shower
or, an afternoon shampoo.
An evening bubble bath.
Softly—as in hard water made soft as rain by a water softener.
(And anyone who has ever been in the rain knows how soft that is.)
Installing a water softener is like having a pipeline to a rain cloud.

Soaps and shampoos behave in lush and lathery ways you've never seen.
Your skin is left soft, your hair glittering and manageable.
Even laundry and dishwashing soaps work better.
All things washed turn out like a rainbow that made good.
This evening, when the occasion is right, tell your husband you deserve a water softener.
The entire family does.

Then, remember the name Morton Pellets.
They come highly recommended, by leading equipment manufacturers, for recharging water softeners.
Morton Pellens do the same, plus prevent rust and iron problems.
Keep soft water on tap.
Keep Morton recharging products on hand.

Softly – as in a morning shower

When they pour, it's as soft as rain

Jordan's Virginia Ham

Aged Like Vintage Wine

Albert E. Jordan's Virginia hams have been a must at Christmas for over a century. They have a flavor that has excited the gourmet for even longer. They are prepared in the same painstaking manner our forefathers used over 300 years ago. Selected from only the finest porkers, cured in gentle seasonings and sugar, and smoked over mellow hickory fires. Then comes the aging, about one year, and off to our kitchens. There our chefs glaze them with sugar, molasses and wine, and bake them to a golden brown giving them the savory nut-like flavor enjoyed by gourmets everywhere. Why not order now for you and your friends? 9 to 15 lbs. average weight, $1.98 per lb., postpaid in U.S. Satisfaction guaranteed.

and should weigh a pound or so before trimming. A thinner cut from this section is called a filet (3 to 3½ inches in diameter). A tournedo, the cut just before the filet mignon, is smaller (about 2½ inches in diameter). To cook, it should be encircled with a strip of fat or blanched bacon and tied securely with string to keep it shapely. Filet mignons, cut from the tip end of the tenderloin, vary in size depending on the size of the tenderloin. They can be as small as 1½ inches in diameter. With the exception of the chateaubriands, all are cut about 1 inch thick and all are cooked the same way—either sautéed or broiled.

Is it true that capers are the seeds from nasturtiums? No. The confusion probably arises from the fact that capers resemble nasturtium seeds. Capers (they are always referred to in the plural) are the flower buds from a shrub, capparis spinosa, which grows along the Mediterranean, in the East Indies, and in the Orient. Capers, widely used in Mediterranean cookery, add a unique flavor to hot or cold sauces and are a great addition to many salads. Usually bottled in vinegar, they are sometimes available packed in salt.

What is an "air" cake? Any cake that depends entirely on eggs (the whole eggs or the whites) to make it rise. In short, cakes that do not call for a leavening agent such as baking powder or soda. Typical examples are angel cake, sponge cake, and the famous genoise of France.

Is the cranberry indigenous to North America? The cranberry in our markets is, but there is a type of cranberry—also known as mossberry—that grows in England, which is smaller and sweeter than our fruit. The Plymouth settlers called the cranberry "ibimi" (bitter berry), the name given the fruit by the local Indians. The origin of the word cranberry is obscure. There is some reason to believe they were first called "crane berries" because cranes living in the salt marsh bogs ate them. Still another story says the bud and stem (not the fruit) of the cranberry resemble the head and neck of a crane. They were also once known as "bounce berries" because their ripeness was tested, and still is, by their ability to bounce. Whatever, these beautiful marsh "rubies" are now in season in great abundance, fresh or frozen. Frozen berries will keep as long as a year in the freezer.

Can water chestnuts be preserved once the can is opened? Yes. They are packed in water, and should be kept covered with water and refrigerated to keep them firm and crisp.

What are the different types of rice and how are they used? Exclusive of wild rice, which is a grain and not a true rice, there is the regular milled white rice from which hulls, germ, outer bran layers, and most of the inner bran are removed in the milling process. It comes in three different lengths: long grain, medium grain, and short grain (sometimes called pearl). All can be used interchangeably in any recipe calling for white rice. However, the medium and short grain are less expensive than long grain and are generally used in puddings and soups, whereas the long grain would be used when rice plays an important role in the menu. Brown rice, the whole unpolished rice with only the outer, inedible, fibrous shell removed, requires more water and longer cooking time than white rice. Its rich, nutlike flavor makes it especially good as a vegetable, or as a stuffing. Parboiled rice is rice that has been cooked before milling by a special steam-pressure process. It, too, takes longer to cook than regular milled white rice but produces fluffy, plump grains. Precooked rice is completely cooked and is prepared by allowing it to stand in boiling water until heated through. These last two can, of course, be used where you would use regular milled white rice.

What is a socle? Actually, it means a plinth or plain block used to support a statue or vase. But in cookery it means a support on which to present food. It can be made of bread, molded potatoes, rice, or farina. Game birds, for example, are occasionally presented resting on a bread socle, carved into a shape and browned in the oven. It is really a display device for the elaborate showy buffet and is, in our opinion, something best left in the hands of the professional chef.

Are sweet potatoes and yams the same thing? Technically, no. The real yam, the Dioscorea, which can weigh as much as 100 pounds, is rarely seen in this country. Of the hundreds of varieties of sweet potatoes, the two we see in our markets are the soft orange-colored ones that are often mistakenly called "yams" (yam, from the Senegalese, means "eat"): and the firmer, lighter sweet potato known as "yellow Jersey." Both are members of the morning glory family.

Do the poppy seeds used in cooking come from the same plant that yields opium? Yes, but they do not have any opium content. The poppy seeds cannot form until after the plant has lost all its opium potential. What makes poppy seeds so interesting in cookery is the tiny droplet of sweet, faintly fragrant oil in each seed. Poppy-seed rolls are no doubt familiar to you, but you may not know how delicious they are sprinkled over noodles or rice, broiled fish, or cooked green beans. They can be an important ingredient in pastries and desserts. Small caution: Because of their oil content, poppy seeds are inclined to turn rancid after a certain length of time. We suggest you store them in the refrigerator. ■

Sampling the New Cookbooks

From the flood of new cookbooks appearing this fall, we have selected those of special interest and picked typical recipes for our cookbook sampler.

A highly imaginative and appealing cookbook has come out of the firehouses of San Francisco. Like the firemen of many American cities, the ones in the Bay City share the duty of preparing a daily meal in the firehouse, one man being chef for the day. The resulting cuisine is as varied as the chefs' nationalities, but there is one common denominator: All dishes have to meet the approval of many demanding men. Outstanding recipes have been compiled into San Francisco Firehouse Favorites, a joint effort by Tony Calvello, Bruce Harlow, Georgia Sackett, and Shirley Sarvis to be published in November (Bobbs Merrill, $8.50 until Dec. 31st; $10. thereafter). Reflecting the hearty appetites of the men, the book abounds in meat recipes, especially ones requiring a Dutch oven. We've chosen two.

One of the firemen, Rene Codis of Engine Company No. 40, known as "The Frenchman," has an especially imaginative way with food. Inspired by the Italian veal dish cima, he dreamed up another marvelous meat compound: pork roast stuffed with sweet Italian sausages (pork spiced with white wine, anise, sugar, garlic, etc.). He handles it as a regular pork roast—potatoes browned with it, applesauce served on the side.

The two requirements are: 1. a source of sweet spiced Italian sausages, and 2. a butcher who likes to experiment and to carry out special wishes.

A Remarkable Roast

Ask your butcher to bone a loin of pork, replace the bone with Italian anise sausages in casings, roll, and tie. Roast as a regular pork roast. (Roast a 3-pound roast for 2½ hours in a 325° oven.) Allow to stand for about 15 minutes before carving. Makes 6 servings.

Armenian Bill Penirian learned from his mother how to make these stuffed grape leaves. They take a while to make, but don't despair; the results are well worth the time. They are famous at Engine Company No. 23.

- 1 medium-sized onion, very finely chopped
- 1 egg, slightly beaten
- 1 teaspoon salt

- ¼ cup long grain white rice
- 2 tablespoons each very finely chopped green bell pepper and fresh parsley
- 1 quart jar grape leaves

- ½ teaspoon crumbled dried oregano
- 1 clove garlic, minced or mashed
- 1 tablespoon fresh lemon juice
- Yogurt

Mix thoroughly the chuck, onion, egg, salt, pepper, 2 tablespoons of the rice, bell pepper, and parsley. Cut stems off grape leaves if necessary, and rinse leaves well in cool water. Pinch off a walnut-size piece (or smaller, depending on the size of grape leaf; the meat should be enclosed in grape leaf) of the meat mixture. Form into a little log shape and place at base of grape leaf. Roll up, folding in ends of leaf to make a firm packet. Place in a kettle (about 3-quart size) with tight-fitting cover. Repeat, using all meat mixture and grape leaves, and stacking the little rolls close together and several layers deep in kettle. Add cold water to reach almost to top of rolls. Add tomato sauce, oregano, garlic, lemon juice, remaining rice, and any remaining grape leaves. Stir sauce slightly (don't disturb rolls). Cover, bring to boiling point, then simmer for 45 minutes or until rice is tender. To serve, spoon meat rolls in sauce onto plates, top with yogurt. Makes 8 servings.

The most international of the cookbooks appearing this fall is one simply called Cook Book by Stella Standard (Horizon Press, $9.95). But don't let the simplicity of the title mislead you. This gem of a cookbook has over 800 tested recipes, basic and elaborate, that are favorites both home and abroad. An added delight is the group of recipes from great American and European chefs. You'll find Cook Book a good addition to your library. Here are two recipes from it:

Sole Albert

Maxim's, Paris

- Firm, fresh sole
- Salt and freshly ground pepper
- Melted butter
- Fresh breadcrumbs
- 3 shallots, finely minced
- 3 tablespoons minced fresh herbs, parsley, chervil, tarragon
- 1 wine glass Noilly Prat dry vermouth
- 3 tablespoons sweet butter

Choose a fine sole, remove the skin and make a light incision along the bone. Season the fish with salt and pepper and dip it in melted butter. Sprinkle the side to be presented with fine fresh crumbs. Put the shallots and herbs on the bottom of a buttered baking pan and put the fish on the herbs, crumb side up. Add the vermouth. Put the fish in a 375° oven until the crumbs are browned. When it is done remove it to a serving dish and keep it warm. Put the baking pan over a brisk fire to reduce the sauce, and when it has attained a good body stir in the sweet butter. Spread some sauce on the sole and serve the rest in a sauce boat. One 1½-pound sole will serve 2.

Veal with Ham and Mozzarella

- 4 to 6 slices leg or fillet of veal
- 4 to 6 slices thin ham or prosciutto
- 4 to 6 slices Mozzarella
- 2 eggs, beaten
- ⅔ cup fine crumbs
- ⅓ cup Parmesan cheese
- Chopped parsley
- Olive oil and butter

Pound the veal slices very flat. On one half of each put a slice of ham and a slice of Mozzarella, fold over, and fasten with a toothpick. Dip the meat in beaten egg, then in crumbs mixed with the cheese and a little chopped parsley. Brown the meat on both sides in a mixture of oil and butter about 5 minutes, then cover and steam 2 minutes. Serve immediately, 1 to a person.

The Art of British Cooking by Theodora FitzGibbon (Doubleday, $4.95) combines the best traditional and modern recipes with sound culinary advice to disprove the notion that the British Isles are without a distinctive cuisine. The story behind the recipe is often given, as in the one we reprint below.

Coventry Godcakes

These cakes are sold around Coventry and Warwickshire for New Year's Day; they are also given to godchildren by their godparents for their birthdays. They vary in size from 6 to 18 inches.

1 cup flour
A pinch of salt
¾ cup water, approximately 1 cup butter or margarine
Mincemeat
1 egg white
Extra-fine sugar for garnishing

Combine the flour and salt and mix to a pliable paste with the water. It should be neither sticky nor dry. Turn it out onto a floured board and knead lightly until smooth, roll out to an oblong shape. Press out the butter until it is not quite half the size of the pastry, put it on top, and fold over the other half. Press the edges well together, roll out to the same thickness as before, then fold in thirds. Do this twice more, but the last time roll it out to about a ⅛″ thickness. Cut out 3-cornered pieces of pastry, place the mincemeat in the center, and place another piece of pastry on top, moistening the edges to make them stick. Press them well together, and make 1 or 2 cuts on the top, then bake in a very hot oven (425°) on a greased baking sheet for about 15 minutes. When cooked, glaze the top with the egg white, stiffly beaten, and dust with the sugar. Return to the oven for 3 minutes. Place on a rack until cold. Serves 6.

Banbury Cakes, and Eccles Cakes are now made in a similar way except that chopped peel, spice, and currants are used as a filling. Originally Eccles Cakes were made with black currants and chopped mint leaves, but now it is only dried currants.

For the Francophile and gourmet chef, a sumptuous travel-cookbook is now in bookstores. La Belle France by the editors of Réalités (Odyssey Press, $19.95) is, as its subtitle claims, a gourmet's guide to the French provinces. This over-sized book offers a hundred glorious color and black-and-white photographs with a commentary describing the character of the provinces. The recipes for the food specialties of regional France are definitely geared for the experienced cook. The two that follow are representative.

Salmis de Dinde à la Berrichonne
(Stewed Turkey in Red Wine Sauce)

1 young turkey
4 tbsp. (2 oz.) butter
1 carrot, sliced
1 onion, sliced
Bouquet garni
1 clove of garlic
1 tbsp. flour
2 cups red wine
1½ cups beef bouillon
Salt, pepper
¼ cup (2 oz.) cubed lean bacon
20 small mushrooms
2 tbsp. Cognac
Fried croûtons

Cut up a tender young turkey: cut the legs and wings into two pieces each, and split the breast in two. Brown the turkey scraps—neck, head, gizzards, and feet—in butter with the sliced carrot and onion. Add a bouquet garni and a clove of garlic. Sprinkle in the flour and cook to a golden color. Add three quarters of the red wine and the beef bouillon. Simmer for 1 hour. Season the turkey pieces with salt and pepper and brown in additional butter in an earthenware stewing pot. When they are nicely browned, remove to a heated platter. Use the same pot to sauté the cubes of lean bacon, which have been blanched, and the mushrooms. Remove to the platter. Pour ½ cup of red wine into the pot containing the turkey scraps, red wine, and beef bouillon. Heat and stir. Replace the browned turkey in the stewing pot. Add the bacon cubes and mushrooms. Strain the sauce and pour over the turkey. Ignite the Cognac and add to the pot. Cover and simmer for 1½ hours. Serve in a deep round dish with fried croûtons. Preparation: 30 mins. Cooking: 3 hrs. Serves 8-10.

Pommes de Terres des Nonnettes
(Cheese-coated Baked Potatoes)

6 medium-sized potatoes
1 beaten egg yolk
½ cup (4 oz.) grated Comté or Gruyère cheese
1 cup (4-6 oz.) fine dry breadcrumbs
Butter
Salt
Pepper

Scrub, peel, and dry the potatoes. Dip them in beaten egg yolk, then roll them in grated cheese and finally in dry breadcrumbs and place them side by side in a buttered baking dish. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and bake in a very hot (450°) oven until they are crisp and golden on the outside and soft and mealy within. Preparation: 20 mins. Cooking: 45 mins. approx. Serves 4.

A practical three-in-one volume, unpretentious in format but highly personal in style, is Mrs. Barbara Goodfellow's Make It Now—Bake It Later! (Pocket Books, $2.95 spiral bound; each volume separately, $1 paperbound). The author, a busy Navy wife, prepared the first volume of Make It Now—Bake It Later! with a dual purpose in mind: it would be a boon to busy housewives and its profits would benefit the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation, an organization to which Mrs. Goodfellow devotes many hours. That was in 1958. Since then, the original slim edition has been expanded twice to include more casserole-type and refrig-

PHOTOGRAPHED IN THE CHRISTIAN BROTHERS WINERY, NAPA VALLEY, CALIFORNIA.

Brother Timothy shows you the reasons that The Christian Brothers Cabernet Sauvignon and Sauvignon Blanc will bring special pleasure to your table.

Brother Timothy is in charge of The Christian Brothers' wine-making activities in California. He will tell you that truly fine wines can be made only from grapes of noble ancestry.

Here Brother Timothy explains the origins of two such wines, each noted for its unusually fine bouquet and flavor. Because of the rarity of the grapes, these wines can be made only in limited quantities. One, the Cabernet Sauvignon, is a red wine of great character. The other, the Sauvignon Blanc, is a delightful white wine with a most distinctive personality. Either can make your dinner a particularly pleasurable experience. Try them both, soon.

You'll find The Christian Brothers Cabernet Sauvignon and Sauvignon Blanc excellent examples of the outstanding table wines, dessert wines, sparkling wines, vermouths and brandy* that The Brothers have been making for so many years in California's genial soil and climate.

If you would like Brother Timothy to send you a FREE WINE SELECTOR, which tells you how to choose and enjoy wines, write to: The Christian Brothers, Department W, 1255 Post Street, San Francisco, California 94109.

erator recipes ideal for the new bride or working wife. Here is a typical recipe. Mrs. Goodfellow comments: "Hard on your dieting guests, but they'll never resist it!"

6 teasp. warm water
3 eggs, separated
3 tblsp. powdered sugar
½ cup chopped walnuts
1½ cups whipping cream
1 unfrosted angel cake (9½")

Melt chocolate bits in top of double boiler. Add water and stir to mix. When all is melted and mixed, remove from fire.

Beat egg yolks with powdered sugar and add to chocolate mixture slowly. Add chopped nuts. (Don't give up! This is usually hard to mix!)

Beat egg whites until stiff and fold into above mixture. Whip cream and fold it in.

Place frosting in refrigerator for 12 hours. Cut angel cake horizontally into 3 layers. Cover each layer with frosting—reassemble cake—frost top and sides and place in refrigerator for another 12 hours. Serves 12.

Helen Worth, originator of the famous Helen Worth Cooking School, has written a cookbook with an intriguing title. Cooking Without Recipes (Harper & Row, $5.95) will be out in mid-November and has 25 years of cooking experience behind it. Contrary to the title, there are over 300 recipes in the book, but the bulk of the text is devoted to explaining the reasons behind the recipe. About "Tomatoes Olga," Mrs. Worth remarks: "Tomatoes are considered a fruit in every country except the United States, where the Supreme Court dubbed them a vegetable in 1893. No matter what their category, they're supremely versatile, as evidenced in this recipe that illustrates broiling."

Tomatoes Olga

4 small firm tomatoes
1 hard-cooked egg, chopped fine
1 tablespoon green pepper, chopped fine
1 teaspoon instant minced onion
¼ cup thick mayonnaise

Halve tomatoes crosswise. Fold egg, green pepper, and onion into mayonnaise. Season to taste. Spread cut side of tomato with mixture and broil at moderate 350° F. about 10 minutes, or until lightly browned. If desired, bake at hot, 400° F., about 15 minutes. Makes 4 servings.

Note: Grated cheese is an alternate topping for these.

The toylike donkeys you see in Sardinia or Sicily, harnessed to a fiesta-feathered cart of patchwork color and pealing with silvery bells, are being bred now in this country for lucky children to ride, drive, and adore as pets. They are gentle, affectionate, and quite intelligent. There are 815 purebred, harness-broken miniatures registered with the Miniature Donkey Registry, 1108 Jackson St., Omaha, Neb., and some are for sale. Write to the Registry, and members with pets to sell will communicate with you. You can order any one of the following accessories from the Registry's president, Daniel Langfeld, Sr., for your pet: a harness, saddle, bridle, sulky-cart, or buckboard. In spite of the donkey's size—average height 32 inches, weight about 175 pounds—he can pull as many children as you can pile into a cart.

If you're looking for an exotic feathered pet—a Peking nightingale as musical as the Chinese Emperor's in the fairy tale, a mynah bird you can teach to talk like a professor, or a tiny bud-green parakeet you can train to perform like a circus clown—Mrs. Virginia Belmont of the Belmont Bird and Kennel Shop, 30 Rockefeller Plaza, N.Y.C. is your girl. She trills duets with her canaries, chats with Sinbad, a Senegalese parrot as brilliantly colored as a jewel, and makes a pet of every bird in her shop. She not only guarantees live, quick air deliveries, but stands behind every sale. Prices sent on request.

Friend and champion of the pedigreed cat, who wants to see an affinity between you and the pet you pick, is Milan Greer. Author and expert on the subject of choosing and caring for cats, he is the owner of the Fabulous Felines, a unique pet shop, 141 Lexington Ave., N.Y.C., which ships cats all over the world. If he thinks you and the cat you're considering—one-of-the-six-in-the-world-Archangels (cat of the Czars) or a golden Siamese kitten tumbling over its golden mother in a lying-in cage—will not hit it off, he will hesitate to sell. He interviews a prospect in person or by mail, will make delivery by air express within hours. With it are a 30-day written health guarantee, a tape recorded lecture on care, a kit with all necessary equipment. "Packages" of travel, little and large, from overnight stays to round-the-world tours, to hang on the tree or tuck into the stockings of people who love to be off and away

"Take back your mink—just give me the open road!" If this is the philosophy of anyone on your Christmas list, consider the ways in which you can present them with the promise of future travel as a Christmas gift. To dear friends heading for New York, you might provide one complete day of theater and fine food: for the youngsters in the family, the promise of a dude-ranch vacation in Arizona: for the family's senior citizens, a sunny Caribbean cruise—or a substantial leg up on it: for a ski buff, a golf bug, or an aficionado of skin diving, a broad choice of famous slopes, famous courses, or famous submarine lands.

For an extra-special somebody, providing you have the extra-special funds, there's that chinchilla coat of a travel investment, a three-month deluxe tour of the world. (Please turn to page 248)

These are examples of the hundreds of "package" arrangements that are already set up and available, concocted out of the cooperative efforts of airlines, steamship lines, bus lines, railroads, hotels, theaters, and even in some cases retail stores. Playing helper to your role of Santa Claus is your friendly local travel agent, who knows about such packages and can help you make your choices of them, or work with you in devising a scheme of your own.

How, in all practicality, do you present such a gift? Strangely enough, travel interests seem not to take advantage of the gift-certificate method of selling their wares, a system most great stores have found lucrative and their customers have found a convenient and efficient way to do their gift shopping.

Two gift services we know of let you prepay certain travel expenses and provide a certificate to give as a present to a friend. "The World on a String," brainchild of Bates Johnson, offers a series of gift certificates in denominations of $10, $15, $20, $25, and $100, with a 50-cent service charge for each. These then are redeemable against any charge the lucky recipient chooses at the Plaza Hotel in New York. Whatever the amount, it might be invested in or toward a grand-manner dinner in the Edwardian Room, a Polynesian evening at the new Trader Vic's, a whirl in the Persian Room, theater tickets, or room rent. These certificates are also honored as payment for merchandise at such fine New York specialty shops as Abercrombie and Fitch, Doubleday Book Shops, Georg Jensen, Ferragamo Shoe Salon, Rogers Peet, F.A.O. Schwarz, G. Schirmer Music Store, Plummer McCutcheon, Frank Bros.-Fenn Feinstein, and Maison Glass Gourmet Shop. They may be purchased at any Doubleday bookshop or by mail from Certificates, Inc., 230 Park Ave., New York 10017.

American Express's contribution to the gaiety of travelers and to the convenience of friends who want to wish them well is the service called "Be My Guest." The list of potential gifting is so long it can't be recited here, but it's a safe guess that if you wanted to give someone a night on the town in Bangkok, a bottle of Champagne in Dublin, a day's sight-seeing in a chauffeur-drive Rolls Royce in London, the ser ices of a baby sitter in St. Mori or whatever, you could make t arrangement with a minimum red tape by writing Be My Gue American Express Co., Box 70 Cooper Station, New York 1000 Whatever you choose to pleasu a traveling friend with will recorded on a certificate whi you may beribbon and bediz to present as a gift.

Aside from these things, thoug you're pretty much on your ow dreaming up clever ways to gi wrap a present of travel. Appr priate brochures can be rolled foil or gift paper, dressed wi bows and glitter, hung from tree, stuffed into the toe of a stoc ing. Tickets might be present in tiny toy suitcases, tied to a ba loon, attached to a toy boat, plan car, or train, and if there are tickets and no brochures involve write out your own message a trim as you see fit.

American Airlines, whose trav department seems to be especial bright about seeing the relatio ship between air travel and wh to do after you arrive whe you're going, has come up with rich assortment of suggested la itineraries for areas where th planes land, and you may b such packaged itineraries, co plete with hotel and ground tra portation or ground enterta ment. Their name for these "Holidays on Wings," and t assumption, of course, is that a one indulging in such a packa will have flown by American.

For instance, for visitors New York there are set up seve tasty theater-directed sojour —from one day to six days. The provide accommodation at su hotels as the Astor, Manhatta Summit, Americana, City Squi Drake, Warwick, Regency, Waldorf Astoria, with theater ti ets, meals, sight-seeing and nig clubbing included. Prices v vary according to the length time and cushiness of the ho room, but as an example a thr day, two-night weekend at t Waldorf, including a breakf and tickets for a matinee a evening performance of a Bro way show, runs about $50.

American also suggests a me orable one-day-in-New York, un the aegis of Entrée Unlimited.

THE GALA SEASON

Because this is the time of harvest and celebration, a harvest of affection and good will and hospitality, every picture has been taken as though company were coming. Behind this gala are the first views of new designs of beautiful chairs, couches, tables, and chests from American companies who are making superb pieces today. We have harvested the new patterns of sterling; curious and marvelous gifts from this country's museums; more gifts to embroider, carve, sew . . . presented while there is time enough. Finally, we have garnered wreaths for beautiful doors. Welcome ideas when your own gala season begins.

Of special note, too, the centerpieces designed for each occasion, catching in their spectrum of flashing color the choicest flowers, fruits, and greens. Sources for all silver, crystal, linens, and other accessories are given on page 330.

GIVE A GREAT PARTY

and no one can take it away

By FLORENCE PRITCHETT SMITH

Florence Pritchett Smith, brilliantly successful hostess, author of the forthcoming The Entertaining People, writes of hostesses and the parties they have given, parties that have the quality of unforgettable delight.

It was 3 A.M. Only the barest light came from the stubs of flickering candles. A waning moon hung in the sky. The pianist closed the piano, and the bass player carried off his big bass baby. The sound of the last car faded away in the distance. A lone waiter stacked used glasses. The party was over and done.

Had it been a success? Did everyone have a good time? The exhausted host and hostess sat quietly in a corner and wondered. All through the evening they had been on their feet seeing to their guests' pleasures, working as hard as two headwaiters in a busy night club. Obviously they had done a fine job because their guests lingered on and on.

Why had this been such a good party? They knew it had been. You can smell the sweet smell of a successful party the minute you enter the room. This was a WOW! a smash! a cracker-jack! a wingding! a ball! a swingeroo! It took off without a count-down. People danced as if they had just discovered their feet. Friends flirted as if they'd never seen each other before. Strangers met and stayed together. The guests laughed like children, lighthearted and lightheaded. The tired host and hostess knew they had done it, but didn't know why. They sat there, sipping one for the long road upstairs, discussing it, trying to break a magical evening down into a formula so that they could do it again.

Any sensitive guest could have told them the answer. They had given a party that created the two vital reactions a party must generate for givers and goers alike—anticipation and realization. Anticipation, the excitement of looking forward to something, and realization of pleasure both during and after it is over. Half the joy in many things in life is anticipation: the hoped-for follow-up is realization of that joy.

How had they managed it for so many people? By originating a party with a personal reason for being, held on a particular date that meant something to the hosts. This turned everyone's natural feeling for celebration into a much stronger one. It was not just another night. Individuality and a strong personal touch flavored the evening. A party given for no reason is as stale as a glass of flat wine. A party is a party is a party, but if it is given because the host and hostess are personally and emotionally involved, then it turns out to be a Party, capital P. Happiness is very catching.

This host and hostess were celebrating one of the most important days in their life, their son's birthday. Each year, to show how deeply happy they were, they shared this day with their friends. Each year people looked forward to it for months, put the day aside, and each year it was enjoyed more, as sentiment and nostalgia hung their beautiful robes on its back. They pulled out all the stops for this party, their party of the year. They arranged a magnificent scene for pleasure, delicious food and fine wines for midnight supper, music with a pulse-arousing beat, everything that makes a party go-go-go. This party had truly become a tradition.

Tradition must start somewhere. Why not with a party? Some of the most talked about yearly parties in this country have become custom for a certain group of people. The reasons why these celebrations are given are myriad.

One of the most famous on the East Coast was to celebrate a wedding anniversary. For years, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Shipman Payson gave a wildly beautiful costume party at their estate in Manhasset, New York. One year guests were advised to come as a song; in another, as a book; in another, as a play. Guests worked on costumes for months in advance, some even in advance of an invitation. Everyone fought to outdo each other with either wit or beauty, and the results were brilliant. People promenaded over velvety lawns from one patio to another, looking fully as exquisite as peacocks walking the lawns at an 18th-century fete.

On Christmas Eve in Palm Beach, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. McLean hold a Christmas-tree-trimming dinner party for those who will not have a tree. Parents with grown children, people without children, bachelors, and unmarried girls all gather around a bare tree, and, while they sip cocktails, hang ornaments until the tree is a thing of beauty. After dinner, friends who have been at home trimming trees for their children and assembling impossible toys drop by for a cup of Christmas cheer among palm trees and tinsel icicles. For many it is a very lonely night turned into a very lovely one.

The Christmas season in New York, when Fifth Avenue sparkles like a long-lighted satin ribbon and the spirit of Christmas imbues everyone with a feeling of love, is Mr. and Mrs. Edmund C. Lynch's favorite time to entertain their close friends with their children. It is a sweet party in a sweet season, with little girls in velvet dresses and patent-leather dancing shoes, and little boys in ruffled silk shirts with silver buckles on their shoes. Though the Lynches leave the next day for a skiing Christmas holiday, the apartment is decorated with a huge tree and Christmas flowers. It shines with traditional Christmas beauty. After the children gather around the tree and everyone sings Christmas carols, suddenly sleigh bells are heard in the hall. Down the staircase comes Santa Claus, blustering and laughing, and bearing presents for everyone. After this thrilling moment, when presents are unwrapped and tissue lies everywhere, the children are taken home, and the parents remain to dine at round tables dressed with red cloths, red napkins, and holly and red carnations. "Bill Harrington always plays the piano. I try to keep it exactly the same each year," Caroline Lynch commented. "I find that everyone looks forward to everything being the same as it was last year."

In New York on the day after Christmas, lots of social birds fly south to warm sands, or north to ski slopes. Many remain in the city suffering a big letdown. It is then that the theatrical producer and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Miller, come to their friends' rescue with a fantastic New Year's Eve party. The talk of New York for many years, it is loaded with stars of the stage and motion pictures and nonprofessional social stars.

Decorator Billy Baldwin transforms the Millers' apartment into an exquisite setting conducive to pleasure. Among a certain group, if you do not make the Millers' party, you quietly pretend that you were out of town. (Please turn to page 309)

In a hospitable city, a house

TO WELCOME THE PRESENT– TO INVITE THE FUTURE

The San Francisco town house of Mr. and Mrs. John McGuire was born in 1939 on the drafting boards of Gardner Dailey, but required little change when Joseph Esherick took over its remodeling to suit the needs of the McGuires and their two children. 1. By opening up the entry, putting a deck above it, and encasing the whole in glass, he produced the magical brightness that illumines the living-dining floor. 2. The glass-walled deck above the entry stairway is a charming indoor garden, seen on page 267. 3. Decorator Andrew Delfino designed the interiors for the McGuire collection of such rare chinoiserie as Ming rugs, mah-jongg stools, and 18th-century porcelains. The living room is also embellished by one of those matchless high-on-a-hill views that mean San Francisco. (Please turn the page)

Both John and Elinor McGuire are furniture designers, and so were thoroughly involved in their own remodeling project. They have planned this house to be their permanent abode, from now far into the future when Jeannie, eight, and Donny, fifteen, have homes of their own. They are unabashedly delighted at their accomplishment, at the compactness and flexibility of the house, at its blend of livable elegance and well-mannered casualness. 1. The mirrored dining room, hung with a glory of Waterford crystal, its windows dressed in opulent restraint with trimly pleated silk Roman blinds, bespeaks the catholic talents and tastes of the McGuires: John designed the octagonal, bevel-edged table of black Formosan bamboo; Elinor designed the antiqued white rattan and cane chairs. 2. Opposite the mirror, a door opens out to the winter garden, a sun- or moon-catching place burgeoning romantically with greenery. 3. The kitchen was a complete remodeling, designed by the owners themselves, with a wall-to-wall stainless sink, a full-fledged chopping block, and ticking-patterned vinyl wallcovering. (Please turn the page)

1. In the gallery connecting living room and dining room, the wall is paneled with twelve matching scenic scrolls by Sheun Shu, a Ming painter. The white lacquer table is 16th-century Chinese; the X-chair is 20th-century McGuire. 2. The view from the dining table to the espaliered magnolia on the winter-garden wall. Entertaining here can range from a formal sit-down dinner for eight to a roam-around buffet for a hundred. The 13½-foot-high ceilings on the living-dining floor seem to prevent a sense of crowdedness. 3. A charming teak-railed spiral takes you to the library-bedroom floor. 4. After a small dinner, a favorite place for coffee is the teak-paneled library-sitting room, which enjoys the same smashing view as the living room beneath it. The sofa is upholstered in jute damask, strangely compatible with a 17th-century Japanese screen. This room, by virtue of two beds that fold into the wall, can serve as a guest room. Most rooms on this floor are carpeted, while downstairs floors are walnut-stained parquet. 5. In the bathrooms, standard oval-shape washbasins were set on pedestals. (Please turn the page)

There is an aura of excellence about the McGuire house, not unexpectedly, because its design and furnishings represent a high level of esthetic judgment and a strict refusal to compromise with quality. The owners, who as furniture manufacturers have been largely responsible for giving contemporary rattan, bamboo, and wicker a stylish dignity, have long been acquainted with the Orient and its treasure trove. Many of their finds now ornament their daily life.

A crucial test of any house is how comfortably it can accommodate all members of the household with sleeping space. The top floor now furnishes all McGuires with bedrooms to their fancy. One day daughter's room may be a guest room, son's room an extension of the library. 1. Jeannie, equally preoccupied with dolls and dresses, the possessor of a certain chic at a tender age, is appropriately ensconced in a charmer of a room, papered, canopied, the bed completely upholstered in a print that echoes the embroidered blossoms on old Chinese silk. 2. Donny's bedroom-study next to the library gives him a view of Russian Hill and the Bay, a series of 16th-century Japanese falconry paintings, and a hinge-top school desk of his father's design. His folding bed is brass, Mexican, antique. 3. The master bedroom puts to use certain precious treasures of the elder McGuires—a steel French campaign bed, dressed in a silk damask that covers the window shades. Boxspring and headboard match the satiny, diamond-patterned leather floor. Regency bamboo chairs came from the Brighton Pavilion. The ivory-inlaid tabouret is a souvenir of Morocco.

THE ARTIST AT HOME

The achievements of three talented women who delight in giving ideas a decorative form and substance by handwork with brush or needle

China painting, pastime of Victorian ladies, is the fine art of Francigene Sheriden Young, whose contemporary porcelains rate one-man shows and are sought after by knowledgeable collectors. Exchanging her impressionistic palette knife for the precise two-haired brush used in china painting, she learned the required techniques from an octogenarian expert in Chicago. The subject was rosebuds, but the skill was fortunately transferable to the new and different designs that interest Mrs. Young. Now master of a multiple firing that gives remarkable depths of color, Mrs. Young sketches, inks, paints, designs in her home-studio, "Villa Vanilla," the name she gives to her pottery.

The examples, left, of Mrs. Young's work only hint at the range of her designs. Note at top the yellow Christmas plates for friends. She will continue yearly until each has a dozen.

SKETCH BY PAUL SHERMAN

Patchwork quilting is an expression of Mary Perkins Raymond Cates's strong color sense and her skill with a needle, taught her, in France, by her grandmother. An apt pupil, she uses minute overcast and feather stitching to join and anchor her patches. The materials for these are often supplied by friends, sometimes have a reminiscent value. Her husband, John M. Cates Jr., adviser on Latin America to the U. S. Mission at the United Nations, has seen vanished ties of his reappear in "Perky's" patchworks of art. He doesn't mind a bit.

The patchwork pieces in the panel, opposite, are made of quilted Siamese silk, a jewel-rich fabric Mrs. Cates uses for its luminous colors in her small-scale designs.

SKETCHES BY PAUL SHERMAN

An enthusiasm for needlepoint is something rather recent for Mary Elizabeth Allen of New York City, but, having discovered a latent flair for design, and having learned the management of yarns and needles, she is deep in the enjoyment of this decorative old craft. Her pleasure in it is apparent in the examples seen opposite, particularly, perhaps, in her stylized sunflower design, its bold yellows and green bright as a smile against the red background, and in the cushion square that looks as random as an Early American rug, yet is so exact.

Needlepoint by Mrs. Allen, far right: twin pillows in reversed colors; cushion top: framed flag design; bench top, octagon-patterned; cushion cover in rag-rug style.

FURNITURE IN TRANSLATION

PHOTOGRAPHS BY O. PHILIP ROEDEL

Something of the architectural elegance that marked the English manor houses of the early 18th Century is now reappearing in the "Grosvenor" collection of furniture created by Tomlinson. The examples presented on our cover and on these and the next two pages show how skillfully the massiveness of pieces designed for rooms of spacious grandeur has been translated into the lighter look and smaller scale in keeping with contemporary interiors. Faithfully translated, however, is the bloom of antiquity on the woods, the brasses, an "ages-old" effect achieved by newly developed techniques. This patina, along with historic motifs and details, sustains a rich traditional feeling, intensified by the brocades and monotone or strié velvets used for sofas and chairs in the collection. Especially appropriate with this furniture, antique accessories. All of those pictured with it, from Decorator Otto Zenke. Beautiful combinations of solidity and airiness, the well-proportioned sideboard and the tall, triply arched armchair in a dining room, opposite page. On this page, two console types: a slender open style, left, shallow enough for a small foyer; a storage console, right, its fluted shapeliness enhanced by a panel with an antique lavabo. (Please turn the page)

In the living room above, luxuriously upholstered pieces and a coffee table that illustrates, beautifully, the 18th-century influence apparent throughout the "Grosvenor" furniture collection. Another view of the dining room, left, with interest divided here between the strong curves of the dining table and chairs, the delicate verticals of the china cupboard and its slanted pediment. A second glance at the living-room corner that is seen in its true colors on the cover of this issue. The octagonal table, doubly useful as a storage unit and a lamp holder, has the mellow finish typical of "Grosvenor" pieces; the tall arched bookcase is unusual in its blue, tuned to the blue of the chairs' velvet. In the same room, an admirable gaming table, opposite page, with the 18th Century in its ancestry, is set up now and then for dinner à deux. Other links from the past: the antique rug; the interior shutters; the joy of greenery.

INTERPRETATIONS OF THE PAST IN SCALE WITH THE PRESENT

Scotch is Scotch

A complete report on what's happening to a favorite drink

By EMANUEL GREENBERG

Time was, and not so long ago, when Scotch was Scotch. It was singular, one-of-a-kind: It was imported in the bottle at 86.8 proof and commanded a premium price. It was a pungent, smoky, malty beverage with a discernible "peat reek." The taste was strange, foreign, an assault on the undeveloped palate. One "grew accustomed" to it gradually. Aficionados took their Scotch in highballs or with a splash of soda or water, rarely as predinner cocktails or in mixed drinks. It was considered to be an "in" drink and, in certain circles, a snob drink, popular only in the large urban centers of our East Coast. Scotch was the province of sophisticates. In British films or in American imitations, the gentry invariably asked for "Scotch and soda." Scotch was primarily known as a man's drink.

Today Scotch is drunk nationally, a staple in every restaurant, cocktail lounge, and many home bars. Its consumption has tripled in the last twelve years: one of every seven bottles of whiskey* now sold in the United States is Scotch. Has success spoiled Scotch whisky? No. But some changes have occurred along the way.

Prices now range widely, even as low as $5. Many brands now weigh in at an even 86 proof, quite a few are bottled at 80 proof, and one or two at a sneaky 80.6 proof. (At a fast glance, assuming you look at all, it could be read as "86".) Almost all the increased consumption, at least in the last few years, has been in what is called "bulk goods," whisky distilled and aged in Scotland, but imported in the barrel for bottling in the United States.

Another relatively recent manifestation is the cry of "light" emanating from all quarters. There are brands claiming to be "light, light," "extra light," and "light but with taste." (Presumably, other "light" brands are without taste.) There are even companion bottles to established brands—Black & White Extra Light and Vat 69 Gold—designed as "lighter" versions of the regular brand.

*In the United States the spelling is "whiskey," with an "e"; in Scotland it's "whisky," no "e."

A couple of imaginative compani are even attempting to capitalize the "light" band wagon by going cou terclockwise. They claim to be "ful or "authentic." (Nobody wants to be "heavy.") Indeed, there is a small b growing vogue for the Single Malts- 100-percent malt whiskies made mo or less to the original Scotch formul

Never before have Americans ha such an overwhelming variety of Scot whisky brands and types offered them as today. In New York State, f example, some 230 different labels a posted with the State Liquor Autho ity. In addition, one can find the Pr vate Label, or retailer's own brand, a great many liquor stores.

Light, authentic, single, bul shipped, proof, price, cocktails! Wh does it all mean to the Scotch drinke and especially to the host and hoste eager to please their guests? What serve? 'Tis a puzzlement. Let's see we can shed a little authentic light o the subject.

The prototypes of Scotch whiski are the malts, which impart the cha acteristic smoky taste distinctive Scotch. Native air, grain, tradition sherry casks, and especially the wate

ıve been advanced as reasons for the ıique flavor of the whisky. In actual ct, there are two basic procedures at account for the special taste: 1) ying of the malted or germinated rley over open peat fires, in direct ntact with the acrid smoke, and 2) stillation of small batches at low mperature by the pot-still method, hich permits the whisky to retain the olatile secondary constituents—the ters, oils, and higher alcohols that ntribute to, and enhance, flavor.

Except for the Singles, which are mparable to our straight whiskies, l Scotch whiskies are mixtures blends) of malts and Scotch grain hiskies. The cereals for grain whis- es are not dried in contact with noke. Moreover, they are distilled at tremely high proof. They are quite land, without any distinctive taste or oma—comparable to our neutral irits. In Scotland, grain whiskies e called "silent spirits."

The Scotch blender has been repre- nted as an artist, whereas he is a raftsman, albeit skilled. His task is xacting, but not mysterious. The lender works with his grain and malt hiskies to achieve a blend that will, in his opinion, appeal to consumers. The grain whiskies are used to modify the forthright pungency of the malts. More grain whisky means less taste in the final blend. This muted taste has been equated with "lightness," and is prized by many people who drink Scotch.

The distillers are understandably reluctant to reveal the proportion of grain whisky in their blends, nor are they required to by law, as Americans are. (If you check the label on a bottle of a domestic blended whiskey, you will see stated the exact proportion of whiskey and grain neutral spirits.)

Though it is alleged that, on the average, the proportion in a blended Scotch is about 50 percent malt whisky and 50 percent grain whisky, in practice there are Scotch blends with as little as 20 percent malt whisky—some even less than that. The day may come when such pertinent information will be mandatory on every label, and then we shall know what actually goes into a specific bottle of Scotch whisky.

Attaining the desired taste is only half the blender's delicate task. The other half is maintaining a consistent taste, batch after batch, with reasonable uniformity, so that a loyal consumer can count on getting the same taste bottle after bottle. This is not quite as simple as it sounds. No company distills all, or even a majority, of the whiskies it requires. A couple of major exporters produce nothing, depending entirely on outside sources for whisky stocks.

The category least likely to maintain a constancy of taste over a period of time is the bulk Scotch. Bulk or barrel-shipped Scotch is a new and interesting phenomenon, and in many ways worth while. At least the paying customer gives evidence of being convinced. There's every reason to believe that bulk-shipped Scotch will account for half of all the Scotch whisky sold in the United States some day. Bulk may be considered the "plain pipe racks" of Scotch—no frills, no extras. The majority of bulks sell at around the $5 level or a little higher. Most are bottled at 80 proof, rather than the standard 86 proof or 86.8 proof. Modest savings on taxes and reduced costs of advertising, breakage, pilferage, and freight account for quite a substantial part of the price differential. (Please turn to page 321)

CONGENIAL GROUPINGS

Indulgent rather than severe, the mood of Milo Baughman's "New Concept" furniture for Thayer Coggin allows them to fraternize freely, as shown, with designs of other periods.

1. A long view of part of the living room of Mr. and Mrs. James L. Wiswall's house in Wellesley, Mass. To one side of the traditional inglenook, art nouveau panel, modern skeletal bookcases; at the other, below an old-style, diamond-paned window, an ancestral portrait. The lighting, entirely today's; rugs, antique Orientals. Agreeing readily with these diverse elements, the "New Concept" furniture, with its luxurious textures and rich colors. 2. The harmony of periods includes here the familiar lines of a piano, a Victorian chair, a vivid new velour floor chaise. 3. Secluded fireside seats near an open conversation group. (More on next page)

Close-ups of the same living room shown on the preceding two pages: 4. The rectangular "New Concept" coffee table impersonating a dining table, set for supper in front of the inglenook, a very convivial arrangement that, like the rest of the room, mingles old charms with new in a free fashion. Notice the varied heights and offbeat placement pattern of the bouquets and the sterling candleholders. All the candleholders and the sterling flatware in "Vision" design, made by International Silver. "Regency" crystal goblets by Paul A. Straub. "Shell Edge" china by Syracuse. The candles and napkins, Dansk Designs. 5. Sturdily decorative game table, serving here as a parking spot for reading-in-progress. The round top, polished walnut; the base, rods, and ribbons of burnished bronze in a design as modern-minded now as the art nouveau panel was in its day. 6. Another view of the twin chairs and the couch between them. Both the gently arched chairs are covered in soft, bright suede cloth, a pampering fabric. The deep aubergine cushioning of the couch rests upon a walnut ledge above a lacquered base as snow-white as the curtains, the wallcovering, the lamp shades. 7. A second look, deservedly, at the floor chaise, a warm-toned invitation to sit down, stretch out, and take it easy, as if relaxing on a tropical beach instead of in a New England living room. Conducive to such a sybaritic feeling, the lush velour upholstery, which, in the "New Concept" manner, is as gratifying to touch as to see. Furnishing details on page 331.

Shown here and on the next two pages, ways to make a high-in-the-sky apartment as warmly welcoming as a down-to-earth house. The apartment pictured, at 1000 Lake Shore Plaza, Chicago. All furniture mentioned by American of Martinsville; here, the new "Consensus" group.

1. Entertaining set-up, all grace and simplicity. Lighted tapers in old brass candlesticks cast a genial glow over a dining room where antique china and silver, Belgian linen, flower gatherings complement the mellow-tone pecan of the trestle table, the dining bench and chairs, the beautifully beveled buffet. 2. A high study in country-quiet colors. Pride of the room: the series of pecan cabinets, door, drawer, and bookcase units, precisely aligned to give the effect of an impressive single piece. 3. Conversation is made easy, is encouraged, by this living room's sociable arrangement of comfortable furniture. A decorative focus of attention is the coffee table with its remarkable spool-turned base, the glass top permitting a full view of the design and keeping the look of it light. Other pieces here from the same diversified group, the pair of end tables. 4. A gaming table shapely and ample, allowing plenty of elbow room: the chairs, leather-seated, the back panels resilient cross straps of the same leather. A serving cart considerately near the players holds food, drink, a crystal container of ice.

The built-in equipment supplied, of course, by 1000 Lake Shore Plaza: the perfumes, lotions and such, personal choices, as usual. 7. Amenities made available in this part of the living room: music, reading, and overlooking the city. The bookstand, a working antique; the new curtains, white linen printed in gold tones, by Kent-Bragaline. 8. In a corner of a bedroom, the beveled pecan of the headboard repeats the mellow tone of the capacious side table. 9. Pet of the past, in favor again, the armoire, here in a new version that, like other "Consensus" pieces, is a blend of modern, country, and Mediterranean influences, as is the chair beside it. Possessing the versatility that marks most of the pieces in the "Consensus" group, this cupboard could serve equally well in a library, a study, or a living room, holding books, trophies, bibelots, or a collection of other interesting objects. The chairs flanking the cupboard are the same pecan-and-leather types that are shown on page 291 around the gaming table.

invite your guests to listen

Martin Bookspan, reviewer, critic, and Director of Programming for WQXR, New York, tells why he believes music worth playing is worth paying attention to, and lists some favorite records to share with guests

What Mr. Webster has to say about "entertainment" (as listed under the third definition in my dictionary) is of enormous importance today, and worth quoting in full: "The amusement, pleasure, or instruction derived from conversation, oratory, music, dramatic performances, etc.; the pleasure which the mind receives from anything which holds or arrests the attention." The italics are mine, because this is the very point so often corrupted in contemporary society.

One need only enter the nearest elevator, doctor's office, or hotel lobby to realize that all around us music is used as a tranquilizer. It is scientifically programmed to dull the senses and anesthetize the listener rather than to entertain by arresting attention. Such non-music does a great disservice to the real thing.

I have a theory that the Music of the Absurd, so prominent in contemporary concert music, is nothing more than the desperate attempt of unimaginative composers to induce some kind of reaction—even negative—in a listener who finds himself assaulted on all sides by the "wallpaper music" that is so insidious a part of today's environment.

Wallpaper music exists purely as background, without calling attention to itself. But by its very omnipresence it is an irritating and distracting element. Worst of all is the ultimate effect: the listener turns off his ears in order not to hear it. Thus, the very nature of music is denied.

Music must reach out and involve the listener. It must stimulate his senses and arouse response. As Shakespeare put it in the closing scene of The Merchant of Venice: Jessica says, in praise of music: "I am never merry when I hear sweet music." To which Lorenzo, her lover, responds: "The reason is, your spirits are attentive."

Because of our family interest in music, as well as my professional interest, music is often the focus of an evening's entertainment. But when music is not featured, it is not played at all. We never play it as background to conversation, dining, or general conviviality. The reason is quite simple: We respect both music and our guests too highly to dilute the pleasure of one with the other.

For musical evenings we especially like to gather groups of friends to share the enjoyment of some new-found gem that has turned up among the releases I get for review. (Please turn to page 316)

My heart leaps down when I behold gadgets with cocktails . . .

I don't want any toast covered with vulcanized caviar
Or any soggy popcorn covered with cheesy butter or buttery cheese,
I don't want any potato chips or Tiny Tootsie pretzels or pretzel sticks,
And I don't want any crackers coated with meat paste or bargain pâté de foie gras particularly please.

Do not hand me that plate filled with olives unripe

Anchovies whether curled or uncurled I have concluded

COCKTAIL BALLAST

By HELEN McCULLY

Of the recipes presented here, we suggest you serve perhaps three—one cold and two hot, or the other way around. In addition, a tray of cheeses—a full, ripe-flavored Cheddar, with that queen of cheeses, the Roquefort, and a creamy Brie (all brought to room temperature before serving, please); a variety of suitable breads such as French or Italian, cocktail pumpernickel or rye, baked toast, plain unseasoned crackers with a generous pot of sweet butter. We suggest having small plates and forks available for those who would like them and, naturally, plenty of napkins.

Roasted Eye of the Round

Choose a 6-pound roast and have the butcher tie it securely. Bring meat to room temperature, then rub the surface well with salt and freshly ground pepper. Place on a rack in a preheated 450° F. oven and roast at this high temperature for 1 hour. Don't cover; don't baste. The cooked meat should be pink all the way through.

Allow the meat to stand about 15 minutes before carving. Then remove the strings and place on a hot platter. It can be partially carved in the kitchen or carved at the cocktail table so the guests can slice it, thick or thin, to suit themselves. If the latter, a very sharp knife is recommended.

Serve with a bowl of coarse salt, a pepper mill, and Horseradish Sauce.

To make sauce: combine heavy cream, whipped, with grated fresh horseradish (if available) to taste, or drained, prepared horseradish.

Codfish Balls With Chili Mustard Sauce

Prepare one 2-ounce package shredded salt codfish as directed on the package. Set aside.

Heat 1½ cups water with ½ cup heavy cream to the boiling point only. Take off the heat and whip in the contents of one envelope instant mashed potatoes briskly. Combine thoroughly with the well-drained codfish. Add 1 whole egg, freshly ground white pepper to taste, and a dash of ground ginger. Depending on the saltiness of the cod, you should taste here for salt. Mix thoroughly. Refrigerate until cool.

When cold, make into balls about the size of walnuts, roll in fine, fresh bread crumbs, and refrigerate for at least 30 minutes. Makes about 30 balls.

Fry in deep fat heated to 400° F. on the thermometer until brown and crusty all over—about 3 to 4 minutes. Drain on paper towels.

Serve piping hot with Chili Mustard Sauce: Gradually mix enough cold water into 1 tablespoon powdered mustard until creamy and completely smooth. Allow to stand for 10 minutes to ripen. Then combine with 1 cup chili sauce. If there isn't a pleasantly sharp "bite," make and add a bit more mustard sauce.

Cold Pastrami

This delicious, cured beef, generally available in kosher markets, is crowned with whole peppercorns.

Buy a piece weighing around 3 pounds. Place 1 cup of cold water in a heavy kettle with a rack and place the meat on the rack. Bring to a boil, then simmer very, very slowly for 3 hours. Don't baste and don't touch the surface of the meat or you will disturb the peppercorns.

Pierce with a fork to determine if meat is tender. Lift out of the pot with care, and cool.

Serve at room temperature, carving against the grain in thin slices. Serve with a good sharp mustard.

He had built her a castle in the sand. But even on the Riviera one does not use a sterling silver spoon for a shovel.

Unless, of course, one is the young Armand du Champignon-Molyneaux de Moujons de Provence. And the castle is his famous ancestral home. And the sterling Mademoiselle.

Never had Yvette seen such silver. So delicately shaped, with one perfect rose planted at the tip. Fresher, younger than anything she ever saw.

"Beloved," said Armand, "marry me and you will live in this castle and eat with this solid silver forever." "Yé-yé," said Yvette in French.

And they lived happily ever after in the Chateau du Champignon-Molyneaux de Moujons de Provence with their Mademoiselle sterling.

The International Silver Company makes it. You can own it. The Bride's Set, a 44-piece service for eight with a walnut chest, is only $288. It would cost $353 in open stock. You save $65.

(Other remarkably yé-yé sterling patterns turning up in young homes all over the world are Rhapsody and 1810. The International Silver Company makes them. You can own them.)

Only Seeburg organs have ingenious Select-a-Rhythm.

So a Seeburg organ's more fun for everyone. Much more.

We insisted that our organs be more fun for their owners right from the start. That's why Seeburg organs—and only Seeburg—have the ingenious feature we call Select-a-Rhythm.

Listen:

Take a dozen percussion voices—drums of one sort and another, tom-toms, maracas, claves, cymbals, and so on. Now, using different combinations of these voices, produce different dance rhythms, say 18 of them. Then get an electronic mastermind to fix it so you can summon up any rhythm of your choice at the punch of a little button.

Choose your tempo, set it for "constant", and play away. Or, set it on "follow" and your personal percussion combo will follow your tempos.

That's Seeburg Select-a-Rhythm. Much more fun for everyone. Right away.

Seeburg Organs are as versatile and responsive as modern electronic organs come, and far better than most. Yet when your final choice is made, it will be made on quality of tone. And on that basis alone, we are confident you will choose a Seeburg with pleasure. A Seeburg organ speaks with the most beautiful and most exciting voices a modern organ can have.

Oh, yes. All that about one organ being "easier to play" than another. Nonsense. They are all easy to play. But a Seeburg is easiest of all. Why? Because Select-a-Rhythm is the greatest learning device since the metronome. (Incidentally, a metronome is also included in the Select-a-Rhythm.) Send for a free folder and the name of your nearest dealer. Write: Seeburg Organs, 1502 N. Dayton Street, Chicago 60622.

There's a Seeburg piano, too. Superb.

If yours is about to become a "piano family," we invite you to buy a Seeburg. You will be happy with it for years—to look at, to listen to, to play. Piano actions—a piano's "works"—were the original Seeburg product way back in 1902. Knowing what goes into the product led to the name: Superb Seeburg Pianos.

service which opens up unobvious, recherché places and pursuits which are not normally available or even known to tourists in New York. The day on the town, price-tagged at $125 for two people, starts with lunch at one of Restaurant Associates' restaurants, like Charlie Brown's, La Fonda del Sol, Tavern on the Green, or Paul Revere's Tavern, takes you through an afternoon of visiting behind the scenes of a well-known couturier or milliner, or to an auction or a press party, then on to dinner at the Forum of the Twelve Caesars, the Tower Suite, Trattoria, or Four Seasons. After this comes the theater, a concert, ballet, or perhaps a performance at Lincoln Center, followed by nightcaps at a discotheque or a typical boite de nuit. Bear in mind the name, address and phone number of Entrée Unlimited, 25 East 83 St., New York 10028, 212-AG 9-1000. For a $50-a-day fee, they can arrange all sorts of other extra-specialties like guest privileges at private clubs in and around Manhattan and otherwise make the out-of-towner feel on the inside track of metropolitan goings-on.

Trans-World Airlines, making use of its own initials, has a Theater While Away program for New York visitors, especially those business people whose daytimes are full and whose evenings might be empty. For something like $40 they can put up at the Drake, Americana, or Summit hotels and have an evening at the theater, orchestra seat included.

Eastern Airlines offers "Hit Show Weekends," with orchestra seats to two shows, accommodations at the Americana or City Squire Motor Inn, with guest privileges at the City Squire swimming pool and sauna, starting at about $50 a person.

For westward travelers, American Airlines offers a variety of package tours in California and Arizona, and nothing could be more attractive to desert-lovers than a week's stopover at one of eleven real, live ranches in Tucson and environs, where riding, cookouts, square dancing, cattle branding and all that sort of expected thing are part of the works, often with swimming pools and golf courses unexpectedly in the bargain. From Easter to May, accommodation with all meals and all the recreational trimmings can be as little as $81 a person.

Working with car rental services like Avis and Hertz, American has also come up with a number of what they call Autojet Vacations—meaning that you step off the plane and into your own hired car, ready to follow any number of holiday routes through the West. Arrangements have been made with the purchase of the plane ticket. Rates for seven days' driving of Chevrolet, Ford, and Plymouth sedans are $99, with no mileage charge.

National Airlines, concentrating upon its route which flies across the map from New York to California via Florida, has worked out a slate of package arrangements which put travelers up at more than 250 hotels in Florida from St. Petersburg and Tampa right down both coasts to Fort Lauderdale, Miami, Sarasota, and Fort Myers. Especially appealing: a stay on Key West, for a taste of 19th-century architecture and lime pie. The starting price for a week's accommodations ranges from about $50 a person, through January, then increases a bit during the high season, coming down again in April. Arrangements for car rental can be made at about $35 a week plus mileage. Since the Caribbean and its inviting islands are so near, National also suggests certain extended island-hopping itineraries which cover Nassau, Jamaica, Puerto Rico, Aruba, Curaçao, Trinidad and the Virgin Islands. Accommodations on these will run from $40 a day. Air fares are, of course, not included.

British West Indian Airways, which flies from New York to pretty nearly all the Caribbean islands, could garland a tree with different hotel packages in such exotic places as Antigua, Aruba, Barbados, Grenada, Guadeloupe, Martinique, St. Lucia, St. Croix, St. John, Tobago, Trinidad, Puerto Rico, Haiti, and Jamaica.

Date your Christmas promise May 1 or later—in what the Caribbean considers the off-season, even though there is never really any let-up in the touristic pleasures down there—and you'll save money. The Rockefeller hotels in particular offer extremely attractive accommodations at very palatable rates. As an example, Dorado Beach, Puerto Rico—

On the seagoing side of gift-giving, the Home Lines' conversation piece S.S. Oceanic will be continuing its three-day voyages from New York to Nassau through December 4. Starting round-trip price tag, $175. To this can be added, at special rates, a nine-day, eight-night stay in one of Nassau's hotels, starting at $105 per person.

Its decks appropriately named for precious stones since its Caribbean routes take it through sapphire and emerald waters, the Incres Line's Victoria is scheduled for at least 15 cruises between now and Income Tax Day, stopping off at a long list of tropical islands. Its January 3rd six-day cruise to Nassau starts at $155.

The Holland-America Line's schedules appear to list innumerable late-fall, winter, and spring-time cruises, but one that catches our eye as a candidate for tree trimming in a family of golfers is the Nieuw Amsterdam's 12-day Golfers' Paradise Cruise, which takes its passengers, golf clubs and all, to Bermuda, St. Thomas, Nassau, and Jamaica where they can try out some of the prettiest and trickiest courses on the continent. Starting fare: $360.

Bermuda, home of the great Mid-Ocean Golf Course, is also home to the Pompano Beach Club

This is a seven-day, six-night session of V.I.P. accommodation in a specially fine suite, with almost every holiday extra included: boating (a private boat for reef fishing), snorkeling, golf at Riddell's Bay Golf Club, tennis, sight-seeing, sailing, the use of a motor bike, unlimited bar privileges, and tips taken care of. Cunard Line's Queen Elizabeth suggests an Easter present at Christmas—a five-day cruise from New York to Bermuda in lily time, leaving on April 7, returning April 12. Fare starts at $150.

The sister ship Queen Mary, not to be outdone, will be sailing from New York on February 18 for a Washington's Birthday celebration during its five-day cruise to Nassau, arriving back on February 23. Fare starts at $150.

THE French Line's France, one of the most elegant ships afloat, will sail the Caribbean out of New York four times this coming fall and winter—November 10, January 13, January 28, and February 14—rates starting as low as $425 for an inside stateroom on a 13-day cruise. But the big bargain of the year is its Atlantic crossing on March 5, New York to Cannes, stopping off at Gibraltar and Naples en route with time to shore-visit. Rates begin at $280 tourist, $492.50 first class. Then, they offer three nine-day itineraries—by air, by train, or by car—through Provence and the Riviera. The goal is Paris and a stay at the George V or the Plaza Athenée. They start at $290 in the drive-yourself-to-Paris category, but arrangements come in many versions. Steve Lohr, the internationally known skimaster who tests, evaluates, and collects ski slopes the way other people do rare stamps, heads an outfit called "Europe on Skis," for which he has worked out a hard-to-believe assortment of paid-in-advance ski vacations in Austria, Italy, Switzerland, France, and Germany. Think of any four-star skiing area—Cortina, Chamonix, Gstaad, Kitzbühel, Innsbruck, Pontresina, Sestriere, Zermatt, Val d'Isère, you name it—he has plotted out a planned package which will take skiers from major airport of entry to resort hotels, put them up in modest to deluxe style, and deliver them back to their point of departure. Example of one 16-day arrangement: arriving in Munich, a skier goes by train to Kitzbühel, has the time of his life on the slopes here for six days, the next day goes off to his choice of Davos, Kloster, or Arosa for six more days of skiing, then packs up on the 16th day for a train trip to Zurich and the plane home. Price in the off-season corresponding in these parts roughly to the month of January and after March 15, is graded according to four qualities of accommodations: $98, $161, $197, and $267. In season, February to March 15, the same package is $105, $179, $229 and $322. For the complete story, Europe on Skis, 532 Madison Ave., New York 10022.

Christmas being the time for the extravagant gesture, here are a few: If someone special is heading for New York, have him (or her met at the airport, or taken to dinner, or sight-seeing, or to the theater, in the poshest limousine you can think of. It might be a Rolls Royce at $15 an hour, a Cadillac at $8.50, or a Lincoln at $10. Make your wishes and exact time of reservation known, enclosing the fee, to Buckingham Livery Service, 47-15 36th Street, Long Island City, N.Y., and they'll send you a gift certificate to present to your pampered friend.

For those who'd like their pos with a giggle, you can order up a vintage limousine—a 1920 Packard, say, running board and all—to convey them around town in a style to which they've unquestionably never been accustomed. For further information: Classic Coaches, Ltd., 509 West 34th St., New York, New York.

INCIDENTALLY, if you have a charge account with Restaurant Associates, 515 West 57th Street, New York, N.Y., they issue attractive guest cards so that you may invite your friends to have lunch or dinner as your guests at any of these New York restaurants: Four Seasons, Forum of the Twelve Caesars, Trattoria, Charlie Brown's, Tower Suite, Brasserie, La Fonda del Sol, Paul Revere's, Zum Zum, Mama Leone's.

Two enticing possibilities if the onee is a lady, the first the perect added fillip to a trip to Mexio. Give her a couple of days at he Hotel Ixtapan in Ixtapan, beween San Miguel de Allende and axco—same spa where Montezuma used to go to soak away the ches and pains of battle with ud packs and hot baths from the adioactive springs. Give her a ourse of baths, massage, and eneral beautification at the Instituto de Belleza, situated in the hotel, where the gentlest, most talented young graduates of the school of beauty are on hand to make clients look and feel like a million pesos. The public hot-springs baths and mud masks are free, but you could include a course of baths in the hotel's specially designed, very private marble pools. Coming rates are not immediately available, but last year's tariff, per day, averaged less than $20, including baths, massage, and the complete course of beautifying sprouts, from hair-do to pedicure. For complete information, write the Mexico City reservation office, Hotel Ixtapan, Paseo de la Reforma, Mexico, D.F.

Our second suggestion is enthusiastically offered as a gift to earmark for a lady who is about to go through a hectic Christmas season, say, or has been through a rough year's business tensions, who needs to lose weight or to gain weight, or just get back a little joie de vivre and a sparkle in her eye. Something that will do even more for her morale than a new mink coat is a week at the Hambletonian Spa in the rolling green country in Goshen, New York, no more than one hour's drive from George Washington Bridge. This amounts to a sybaritic stay in a well-appointed mansion where all the guests enjoy a regular daily regime of exercise, massage, sauna, swimming, and a thorough cosmetic reconditioning and restyling of figure, face, hair, hands, and feet, every facet of this administered by expert and personable specialists. And there's also breakfast in bed! Weekly rates: $475, $500, and $525 reflected in the room accommodation only, for all guests receive the same services. The spa will supply thoughtful husbands with gift certificates. For more information: Mrs. Beatrice Kimmel, Director, Hambletonian Spa, Old Chester Rd., Goshen, N.Y. ■

Steak Tartare

Take very fresh raw chopped round or sirloin, free of all fat, and have it ground by the butcher three times. Season meat with salt and freshly ground pepper. To 2 pounds of meat, mix in four egg yolks, finely chopped green onions, and well-drained, chopped capers to taste.

The amount of meat you buy depends on the number you intend to serve. You should probably allow about ¼ pound or so per person.

Place meat in a mound in a bowl, sprinkle generously with minced parsley. Serve with French, cocktail rye, or pumpernickel bread, or hot buttered toast. Traditionally, Steak Tartare is served in patties with the egg yolks sitting in a small indentation; but for a cocktail party, this seems to us the more practical approach.

Terrine de Caneton

1 4-pound duck
1½ pounds fat pork, unsalted
1 pound lean fresh pork
Duck liver
5 teaspoons salt
¾ teaspoon freshly ground white pepper
¼ teaspoon Spice Island Spice Parisienne
2¼ cups dry white wine
½ cup brandy or Cognac
⅓ cup vegetable oil
8 shallots, peeled
2 medium onions, sliced
10 cloves garlic, peeled
¼ teaspoon thyme
½ bay leaf, crushed
Few sprigs parsley, chopped
2 slices firm-textured white bread
1 whole egg

To prepare the duck: With a small, sharp knife, cut the skin down the entire length of the back; cut off the wings with a heavy knife. Then remove all the skin from the body carefully, cutting it away from the flesh but keeping it intact. Cut the breasts off, in one piece, following the line of the bone; cut meat off leg bones; cut fat pork into 6 or 8 slices.

Place the duck meat, skin (this will be used to line the terrines), fat pork, fresh pork, and duck liver in a deep casserole.

Sprinkle with 2 teaspoons salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, Spice Parisienne, and mix well with your hands. Add ¼ cup of the wine and ¼ cup of the brandy or Cognac, mixing it in well. Cover and allow to marinate in refrigerator for at least 24 hours.

Using a large, heavy cleaver, chop the duck rack, wings, and all other bones very fine. Discard gizzard. Heat the oil in a heavy pan. When it is smoking, add the bones and cook a minute or two, stirring constantly. Then add half the shallots, crushed, onions, 4 of the garlic cloves, crushed, thyme, bay leaf, and parsley. Do not add salt or pepper. Cook about 5 minutes over high heat. Add remainder of the wine, cover, and cook another 12 minutes. Take off the heat and strain this essence into a 1-cup container. Cool, then refrigerate, covered tightly.

Using the coarse blade of a food grinder, put the duck meat only through the grinder once. Then, using a finer blade, run the fresh pork through the grinder. Now, put the pork through a second time, alternating with the fat pork.

Take the essence from the refrigerator and heat about 2 tablespoons of the fat on top in a heavy skillet. Add remaining shallots and garlic, crushed. Stir in fat for a minute. Add all the essence and heat long enough for remaining fat to melt. Take off the heat and put mixture through the grinder, followed by the bread.

Place mixture in a large bowl, add remaining brandy or Cognac, salt, pepper, and 1 whole fresh egg. Mix thoroughly with your hands until all ingredients are perfectly combined.

Cut the duck skin in half and line the bottoms and sides, as much as you can, of 2 1-quart ovenproof terrines, or oblong Pyrex baking dishes. Spoon the meat mixture into the terrines. Cover, place in a large pan with boiling water reaching to about half the depth of the terrines, in a preheated 450° F. oven and bake for 1 hour and 15 minutes. Cool to room temperature, and then refrigerate. Serve thoroughly chilled.

To unmold, run a thin knife around the sides of the terrine, then dip bottom of mold in hot water until it is released. Invert on plate.

Mr. and Mrs. Guilford Dudley, Jr., hold a spring dance during a Palm Beach golf tournament and during spring vacation from schools. The Dudleys' house is festooned with pink tulle, pink net, butterflies, and roses. Two bands play in separate rooms: soft music for those who love to dance romantically, the big beat for those who jerk or frug. The atmosphere is planned to make women realize men are wonderful, at least for tonight.

Thanksgiving means a great deal to Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Sherrill. "I am so thankful for everything that I want to see everyone I love and their children and families," Betty Sherrill remarked. Their party is held in Southampton, where a brisk cold wind blows off a blue November ocean. Fires crackle in all the rooms, and pumpkins and ears of dried corn are everywhere, creating the atmosphere of an old-fashioned Puritan Thanksgiving, with a menu to match. Betty Sherrill has favors for everyone. The children play outside, coming in for dinner with their cheeks as rosy as the polished apples in bowls. This is a time for shared satisfaction in the good things of life so many do not stop to appreciate.

BEFORE you give another party, stop and think of a good reason to have one. Build it around a personal date in your life, or a favorite holiday, or a local social event, or give it just because your home is at its loveliest and most welcoming at that time of the year. National holidays are good times for parties. Americans should have both sentiment and pride in the days that have been important in the founding of this country. Why not have a party on George Washington's Birthday? Halloween is a totally American holiday, so why should it be reserved only for children? After the children's trick-and-treat is over, a party for your adult friends could be fabulous fun. Drape the room in orange silk to look like the inside of a pumpkin. Have a witch in another room telling fortunes. Bob for apples or anything else. It is an opportunity for adults to throw their worries to the winds and be as carefree as children.

Love of snow lends itself to dramatic parties. Plan a party with a big sled pulling lots of little sleds behind it on a moonlight night. Load the sleds with masses of borrowed fur rugs and throws so people can burrow in. With sleigh bells jingling and hearts beating faster, ride from a friend's house where you have met for cocktails to your house, which is ready and waiting with fires alight and ice tinkling and the dining table loaded with appetizing food.

In St. Moritz each year there is an unforgettable party given high on the mountains above the village at the Corveglia Club. Dressed to the teeth in aprés-ski clothes, everyone rises skyward on the lift. The moon lighting the mountain tops makes the scene look like a wild sea full of white caps. The view is so unbelievable that people become enraptured. The party goes on until dawn tinges the sky with pink.

Look into your life and your personal loves, and plan your party this year, and make it a tradition in your life. It will mean so much more to you and your guests. Then, as the candles flicker out and the glasses are taken away, you will know why the satisfaction was commensurate with the trouble you took.

When a party has a special reason for being, it becomes something special, an evening worth remembering. Can a host and hostess give more to their guests? I think not. ■

The pantry in the McGuire town house has a long, wall-to-wall stainless-steel counter stretching across its steel sink. Below, there's an undercounter refrigerator. Window shades are lined with the same custom-made vinyl that covers the kitchen walls.

A pair of 18-century hat cupboards flank the living-room fireplace (see page 264) and hold precious Chinese porcelains, jades, and carvings. One, shown at left, has been completely outfitted as a bar and includes a refrigerator.

Mr. McGuire's bath-dressing room is partially sheathed in marble, partially in translucent glass. The clothes closet is lined with a glossy, pseudo lizard skin—an Italian wallpaper pattern called "Coccodrillo" from Clarence House.

Few guest rooms in the world could be as glamorous as the McGuires', overlooking the light-spangled city. Few beds are as ingenious—twin in-a-wall installations of steel and teak, which fold back (top) to match the room paneling and bookshelves. Designed by Finn Juhl, they come from Christian of Copenhagen.

NOW ON THE TABLE: AMERICAN WINES

distinctly different from the Champagnes of France.

From these producers, and some others, notably Widmer, come table wines still more distinctly different. The whites have in general more finesse than the reds. They are light, intensely fragrant, wines of the Delaware and Catawba grape, of the Diamond and Niagara grape as well as blended wines called Rhine, Riesling, Sauterne, Chablis. They are a new experience to those whose taste is formed on European models, but they are impeccably made, and they have a loyal clientele.

Alongside these is a range of new wines recalling the light wines of northern Europe, based on grape varieties new to the region. Good examples are the Vin Blanc Sec of Great Western, the Seibel Rosé of Widmer, the Johannisberg Riesling of Gold Seal as well as new red wines in which the intense aroma of the traditional New York State reds is attenuated.

The middle stretch of the Hudson River Valley is old wine-growing country too. The region fell into a decline, but is currently in revival. The High Tor Vineyard not far north of New York City is the bellwether, concentrating on wines from some of the new French hybrid grapes. The Chautauqua District, west from Buffalo along the south shore of Lake Erie into Pennsylvania, is historically more concerned with grape juice than with wine (here the Concord grape grows to perfection, but it is only secondarily a wine grape). But the evolution in grape varieties is affecting it too. Plantings are being diversified, several wineries are in production, and we will be hearing more about Chautauqua wines.

Other American regions

After New York state, the list of wine-growing areas thins out rapidly.

Ohio is a substantial producer. In his vineyards near Cincinnati, the first Nicholas Longworth exploited the possibilities of the Catawba grape in the early 19th Century.

Disease infested these vineyards, and Prohibition finished them. But there has been a revival, and good wines are being made again where Longworth broke the ground, the leading producer being Meier's Wine Cellars. Meier has also become the leading producer in the northern part of Ohio, where there are large plantings around Sandusky and on the islands of the Lake Erie archipelago. The Isle St. George has turned into one vast vineyard. The classic grapes are the Delaware and the Catawba, but there is considerable planting of the new French hybrids. Other producers of more than local importance are George Lonz on Middle Bass Island and the firms of Hommel, Steuk, and Engels & Krudwig on the mainland.

New Jersey just inland from Atlantic City was an important area in its time, based on the old standard American varieties plus certain local favorites such as Noah. Prohibition proved very nearly lethal, but there has been a come-back, the chief producer being Renault. A bit farther south, Maryland supports two wineries both basing their production on the new French hybrids (being without hampering traditions). They have shown the potential of such tidewater areas as the Eastern Shore of Maryland (so like the French Médoc in many ways) and of the mid-Atlantic Piedmont region.

There is much fine vineyard land in Michigan, especially in the southwestern part near Lake Michigan, and a good deal of wine is made. But little or none of it leaves the state, nor is it likely to. Michigan demonstrates the damage done by unwise alcoholic beverage laws which creates semi-monopolistic conditions for local producers regardless of merit.

In Missouri there was a thriving wine-growing district along the lower Missouri River in the late 19th and early 20th Centuries, mainly around the town of Hermann. Vine diseases and the blight of Prohibition killed it. Only now has a come-back begun. The same is true of parts of Illinois, which formerly produced a fair bit of wine, and of the Ozarks around the Arkansas towns of Altus and Tontitown.

Thus are more areas being heard from as the audience for good American wine increases.

The French have a saying that a day without wine is a day without sunshine. Fortunately we need no longer look to Europe for all our bottled sunlight. ■

The Indispensable Viburnums

From among this great and varied family of plants there are sure to be some that can make your garden more rewarding.

By ELSIE LOUISE SCULTHORP
Landscape Architect

The viburnums are an extraordinary family, which includes some of our most beautiful and useful shrubs. It is hard to imagine a garden in which one or more would not be an ornamental addition.

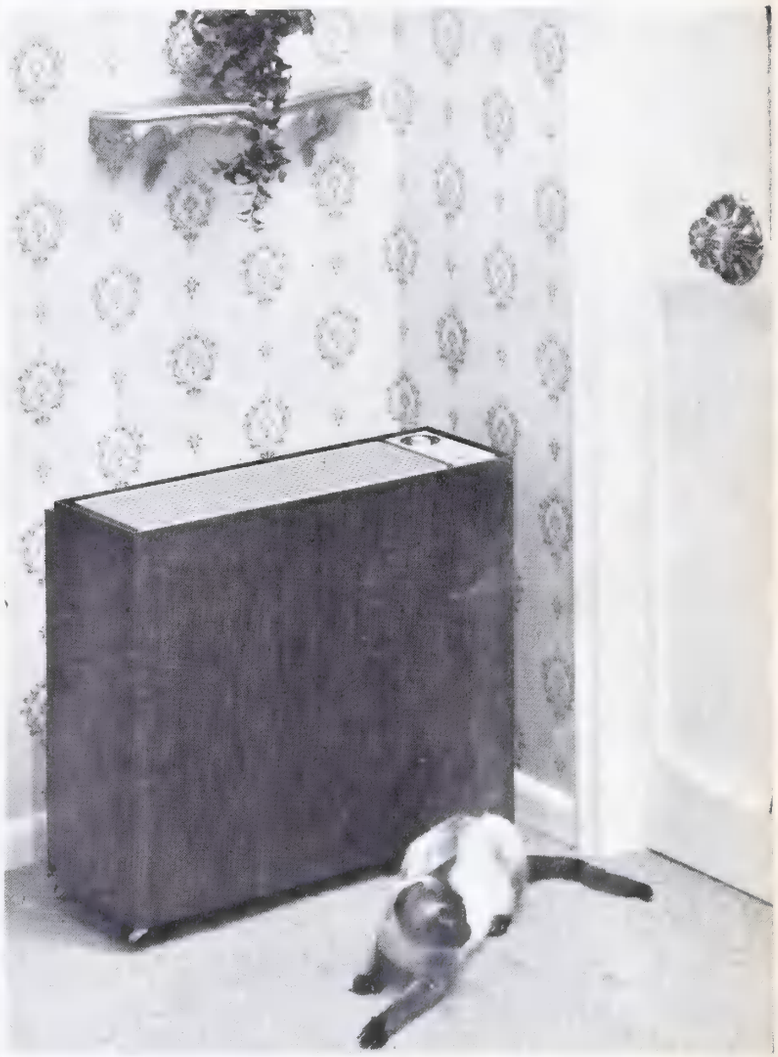
Perhaps your acquaintance with the family is limited to the old-fashioned Snowball Bush—the fine old performer that's found in every small-town park and covers itself with bloom for the Memorial Day parade. But there's more to the viburnum family than this unique and interesting individual.

Consider, if you will, some of the outstanding characteristics of others which should earn them a place on your garden shopping list! They have a surprising range of size. Some of the large ones make fine small trees. At least one (Viburnum opulus nanum) makes a splendid low and compact hedge, and Viburnum davidi is a low spreading shrub that can be used as a ground cover. Some of them can be used to espalier on a wall.

Most viburnums have lovely spring and summer foliage which, in many varieties, turns to brilliant colors in the fall. Many have showy fragrant clusters of flowers in spring and summer, and bright berries at the end of the season. Branches can be cut to bring in the house at any time of the year.

The fruits of some are edible, and the highbush cranberry (V. trilobum) is used as a substitute for cranberries.

As if these admirable qualities were not enough, the viburnums are not particular about soil or exposure. Although some prefer light shade, and nearly all do better with plenty of moisture at the roots, they don't insist on these conditions. They will grow well nearly everywhere.



They are hardy, handsome in form, easy to grow, transplant readily, and are bothered by few insects or diseases. Only one cultural precaution is necessary. The viburnums have an unusual susceptibility to dusts and sprays that contain sulphur. It can cause black spots and perhaps the loss of foliage. If you must use a fungicide around viburnums, it's best to use one with a base of copper instead of sulphur. If there are roses nearby, which must be treated for fungus, be careful that drifting spray or dust doesn't get on the viburnums.

What other group of plants possesses so many praiseworthy qualities? With such diversity at hand, a careful selection can be used together anywhere for either harmonious or contrasting effects. A whole shrub border could be made of them, with no fear of monotony.

Korean spicebush (V. carlesi)

Some are so beautiful in form and flower that they should be planted where they can be seen and enjoyed from the house the year round. In mild climates some of the varieties are evergreen, and some of the deciduous ones have berries that stay on throughout the winter and are strikingly beautiful against the snow.

To help find the right viburnum for that special place in your garden, the following plant list is arranged by size, with separate headings for evergreen and deciduous kinds.

20 outstanding viburnums

The ultimate size of a plant and whether or not an "evergreen" variety will hold its leaves through the winter, depends upon how well it is suited to the climate and soil. Sizes and characteristics indicated here are for optimum conditions.

Plants under 4 feet tall

DECIDUOUS

Hedge viburnum (V. opulus nanum). Dense shrubby plant that grows naturally to about 18 inches high but can be clipped lower. Grows anywhere, even in wet heavy soil. Seldom flowers but has attractive bronze-green foliage on red stems.

Appalachian tea (V. cassinoides). Grows to about 4 feet. Has dense coverage of shiny leaves that turn purple, then orange-red in fall. Flowers are flat clusters in late May and June. Berries are varicolored on one stem—interesting and unusual.

EVERGREEN

Viburnum davidi. Strikingly handsome, spreading, and low growing. Dark evergreen leaves are deeply veined and 5 to 6 inches long. White flowers are not particularly showy, but the metallic blue berries are unique and attractive. Not suited to cold climates. Does best in the Pacific Northwest.

Plants from 4 to 6 feet tall

DECIDUOUS

Korean spicebush (V. carlesi). A wide spreading round-topped shrub that grows 4 to 5 feet tall. Foliage is bluish-green. Dense flower clusters begin in May as pale orange-pink buds, that become creamy white as they open. The fragrance is delightful.

Viburnum burkwoodi. This is a semi-evergreen with shining foliage and a strong habit of growth. The flowers, in May, are rounded clusters of waxy white suffused with pink. Clusters are 3 inches across with wonderful fragrance. One plant will scent a large area. Fall color is especially brilliant. Likes a hot, dry location.

Oriental viburnum (V. wrighti). Interesting deeply-veined blue-green leaves which turn rich red in autumn. Flowers, borne in large clusters, are followed by an abundance of small scarlet fruit.

Arrow wood (V. dentatum). Normally a 5- to 6-foot upright shrub, but if not trimmed, can reach to 15 feet under ideal conditions. It prefers moist soil. White flowers, in 2- to 3-inch rounded clusters, have a feathery texture. The small black berries are much liked by birds. Leaves turn purple and red in fall.

Maple leaf viburnum (V. acerifolium). Interesting irregular shrub that looks like a dwarf red maple. Has clusters of small white flowers in June, and wonderful fall color which varies from crimson to shades of purple. Berries are black.

American wayfaring tree (V. alnifolium). Broad leaves, almost round, on a plant of informal habit. Normally grows to 5 feet, but will reach 10. The unusual flowers in May are flat clusters of greenish-white with larger white flowers around the edge. The edible berries are bright red, and turn black as they ripen. The plant does best in damp shady places.

Plants from 6 to 9 feet tall

DECIDUOUS

V. carlcephalum. A splendid hybrid originated in England by crossing V. carlesi and V. macrocephalum. It has a handsome branching habit and quick growth. Is easily pruned to any size or shape. Bears rounded flower clusters from 4- to 6-inches across that are exceedingly fragrant. Also has fine fall color.

Doublefile viburnum (V. tomentosum). A lovely plant in flower. Neat flat clusters of white blooms are carried side by side the length of the graceful branches. It blooms in June. Some nurseries list a pink form. The berries are red to blue-black. Another variety, called V. t. mariesi, has a more compact habit of growth, larger flowers, and brilliant red berries.

EVERGREEN

Leatherleaf viburnum (V. rhytidophyllum). Considered hardy as far north as Massachusetts, but is evergreen only in warmer climates. Grows to about 10 feet, and is noted for the deeply veined, long pointed leaves. Flowers are creamy white clusters 4 to 8 inches across, borne well above the foliage in May. The showy fruit is red, changing to shining black.

Sandankwa viburnum (V. suspensum). A handsome evergreen, but is dependably hardy only in milder climates. Check with a local nurseryman for hardiness in your area. Has glossy dark green leaves and fragrant white flowers. Laurestinus (V. tinus). A bushy free-flowering shrub with dark shining leaves. Pink to white flowers are slightly fragrant and often bloom from May to August. Berries are black. This is a good container plant that can be forced into winter bloom in a greenhouse.

Plants 10 to 12 feet tall

DECIDUOUS

Highbush cranberry (V. trilobum). An open, spreading New England native with white flowers in May and June and very handsome edible fruit. The berries begin to color in July and hold their bright color until spring.

European cranberrybush (V. opulus). Shining green leaves and good fall color. Showy clusters of white flowers in May-June. Ruby red berries which the birds don't seem to like—so they last well into winter. V. o. xanthocarpum is a yellow-berried variety.

EVERGREEN

Viburnum odoratissimum. Compact pyramidal form with branches close to the ground. Leaves are dark green, tinted red in fall. Pendant clusters of flowers, which bloom in May, are creamy pink and delightfully fragrant. Berries are red, changing to black.

Tall shrubs, or small trees

DECIDUOUS

Wayfaring tree (V. lantana). Will grow in poor, dry soil and still reaches 15 to 20 feet. Has blue-green foliage, and creamy white flowers in flat-topped clusters. Blooms in May. The "fragrance" of the flowers is considered unpleasant by some. One should check this personally before planting. Berries are red, changing to blue-black.

Nannyberry (V. lentago). A nicely shaped plant that grows well in damp places and will reach to 20 feet. The fragrant flowers are carried in 4-inch clusters and resemble the flowering hawthorne. Has large handsome blue-black edible berries. ■

One of these was the recording of Vladimir Horowitz' triumphant return to Carnegie Hall last May 9. This exciting performance has been an evening's entertainment at home on several occasions during the last few months, and is irresistible to any aficionado of the piano.

And when two different recordings by Rudolf Serkin of Beethoven's Fourth Piano Concerto were released simultaneously a few months ago (although the performances were actually separated by about 20 years), we spent some absorbed and absorbing evenings with friends comparing the similarities and differences between the two.

EVEN for the most enthusiastic music lovers, a couple of hours of group listening is enough. We have found, by trial and error, that it's much better to play two or three pieces too few than even one too many. The point, again, is to entertain, not anesthetize.

One of the most unexpected musical developments of the postwar years has been the unprecedented popular interest in music of the Baroque period. It was a recording of Vivaldi's The Four Seasons, that unique picture of nature's changing year, that was the catalyst for the Baroque revival beginning in the late 1940's.

Since then, Vivaldi's Seasons has become as well known to the public as Rimsky-Korsakoff's exotic symphonic suite, Scheherazade. At home we often play The Four Seasons as a prelude to an evening of Baroque recordings. We particularly enjoy the six Brandenburg Concertos of Bach, and the Royal Fireworks Music of Handel. The spectacular recording of the Handel, conducted by Charles Mackerras, features an enormous wind band of 64 players and nine percussion instruments, and practically guarantees total involvement in the music. It will also call forth the full range of performance from your hi-fi equipment.

Recordings of operas and of Broadway productions are favorites to listen to with friends. There is no fan of concert music quite so intense and passionate in his likes and dislikes as the opera lover, and among our friends we number some who are fiercely partisan. What sometimes begins as a friendly evening listening to some new opera recordings can develop into a heated debate as to the expression, phrasing, or, heaven forbid, the pitch of a particular performer. Maria Callas, for one, can always be counted upon to stir controversy. A recent session during which we listened with friends to her recorded performance in Carmen provoked such disagreement that two of the participants are not currently speaking. There was certainly no lack of involvement on that evening, but this may be carrying it too far.

ANOTHER rewarding aspect of listening to recordings with friends is to share the joy of discovery. Sometimes one hears a new talent well before the artist breaks through to fame and fortune. I well remember the thrill we enjoyed with some friends six years ago when the first recital disc of arias by Joan Sutherland was released. This was some time before she first appeared at the Metropolitan Opera House, but it was quite clear then that here was a performer who would soon be counted among the great.

Within the past year, through their European-made recordings, we have discovered Montserrat Caballé, Nicolai Ghiaurov, and Mirella Freni, who are making their Metropolitan Opera debuts in the current season, and who seem well on the way to becoming international stars of the first magnitude. Having heard them early on, we will always take special interest in their careers.

And, of course, there's a world of "original cast" Broadway musical recordings from which to choose for entertainment. No matter how familiar the songs have become, we continue to enjoy the Lerner and Loewe score for My Fair Lady whenever we play it. Our preference is for the first of the two original-cast recordings—the one made in New York before the days of stereo. It has a more sprightly spirit of impudence and fun than the second one, which is a stereo version made in London when the show opened there. The stars for both recordings are the same—Julie Andrews, Rex Harrison, and Stanley Holloway.

The sound-track recording from the motion-picture version is to be avoided. It accomplishes what should have been impossible: the total deadening of a fine score.

Another favorite of our household is the original-cast recording of Leonard Bernstein's West Side Story. It has all the tenderness and fire of the stage show and, through sensitive stereo staging, it even manages to suggest the vivid direction and choreography of Jerome Robbins.

ROBBINS was also responsible for the direction and choreography of Fiddler on the Roof, the current reigning hit on Broadway. Even at the recording session, which I was fortunate enough to attend in Manhattan's Webster Hall (a cavernous, deserted old ballroom), Zero Mostel and his colleagues managed to convey the joy, pathos, and frustration of the inhabitants of Sholem Aleichem's Anatevka. The recording is an arresting evocation of the glories of the show. Many a gathering at our house has listened to it with misty eyes.

Nostalgia always overtakes us when we listen to the recording of the 1938 Carnegie Hall concert by the great Benny Goodman Orchestra that included in its ranks such instrumentalists as Lionel Hampton, Harry James, Jess Stacy, Ziggy Elman, and Gene Krupa.

Included in the set are Goodman's effervescent theme Let's Dance, and such other Goodman classics as Sing, Sing, Sing, Don't Be That Way, and his own version of Count Basie's One O'Clock Jump.

Finally, there have been some hilarious evenings with friends listening to some of the many comedy recordings now on the market. Among our favorites are Herschel Bernardi's warm remembrances of his early youth on the Lower East Side of New York (a record that might justly be called Life With Mother): Woody Allen's slightly mad monologues (he tells about the watch he bought from his grandfather on his deathbed): the pioneer Allen Sherman collection of song parodies: and the Mike Nichols-Elaine May dissection of the medical profession. I guarantee that, like the humor or not, you will become involved in its telling.

It is this element of involvement, so vital to communication, that is too often lost today. But, fortunately, it can be found and shared with friends on tapes and records at home. And it can, we hopefully believe, lead to communication and involvement on other levels.

Bulk Scotches are generally quite light, containing a high proportion of grain whiskies. Their drawback is the variation of taste you may encounter, and occasionally a variation in quality. It's something one must be aware of when offering bulk Scotch to guests. Scotch that is bottled in Scotland will say so on the label. The words "distilled and blended in Scotland" are not enough. If you do find a bulk Scotch that's to your liking, it's a good idea to order more from the same shipment immediately.

At the other end of the scale from the bulks are the Single Malts. They are the aristocrats of Scotch whisky: full-bodied, full-flavored, with a satisfying roundness that Scotch fanciers call "meaty." A Single Malt is, quite logically, the product of a single distillery. It is not blended with other malt whiskies, nor, of course, with grains.

There is not too much Single Malt Scotch bottled for sale to the public, but there seems to be a small but growing fraternity of connoisseurs who are eager to buy all that's available. Five brands of Singles are imported with some degree of regularity—Macallan-Glenlivet, Glenfarclas-Glenlivet, The Glenlivet, Glen Grant-Glenlivet, and Grant's Glenfiddich. The old names have a roll and ring . . . evoking images of burns, bogs, and heather.

Many reasons have been advanced for the new-found popularity of Scotch: fashion (or status); the import cachet; the notion (mistaken) that Scotch is less punishing than other whiskies; returning servicemen and tourists who had developed a taste for Scotch whisky while in Europe; and the readily apparent change in the spirit itself. A great many new Scotch drinkers are younger people, perhaps uncertain of their tastes, and women, who favor the light blends now available.

You find that people talk about their brands and preference in Scotch whisky. Any given group will turn up advocates for a variety of different brands—all staunchly defending their particular choice. And while one bottle of Scotch in the home bar is certainly adequate, the thoughtful hostess could conceivably offer three or four different kinds if she's entertaining a conclave of Scotch drinkers. Let's say a bottle of light—J & B, Black & White Extra Light, or Vat 69 Gold on one side of the light line, Dewar's, Grant's, 100 Pipers, or Cutty Sark on the other; then one of the fuller blends, which range from Teacher's and White Horse to Johnnie Walker Red and Ballantine's; perhaps a premium-priced Scotch like Chivas Regal or Haig & Haig Pinch; and finally a Single Malt for those who might enjoy trying a really full-bodied Scotch.

Not only are more people drinking Scotch, but they are doing so in a greater variety of situations—before lunch or dinner, for the cocktail hour, at parties and picnics, during the evening while rooting for the home team on TV.

Bartenders in better places report a marked increase in calls for Scotch-based cocktails. At one time the Rob Roy, essentially a Scotch Manhattan, was the Scotch cocktail, the only other mixed drink requested being the Scotch highball. Now we have at least three versions of the Rob Roy, plus many other cocktails.

The Scotch Sour and the Mist are quite popular, as are the Scotch Old Fashioned, the Scotch Rickey, and the Rusty Nail. The Whisky-Mac, of English origin, has adherents among golfers and skiers, and the Scotch Milk Punch is an appetizing brunch-time choice. (Recipes for these and other drinks are given later.)

You can expect to see more aged Scotch in the future. Distillers are beginning to catch up with current demand, and are setting some whisky stocks aside for longer maturing. It's well to remember that age itself is no indication of quality. The grain whiskies, for instance, benefit very little from aging—the malts, by and large, benefit substantially. Whisky does not age at all once it goes into the bottle.

Scotch whisky coming into the States is required to be at least three years old, and in practice is aged a minimum of four years in the cask. Extra aging will not do too much for the light blends. Even the malt whiskies do not continue to improve indefinitely in the cask. They turn woody or "casky" after they pass their prime—usually about 15 years. There are exceptions—rare Scotch whiskies aged 20 or even 30 years—with depth of taste, polish, and engaging "nose" or fragrance. The term "liqueur Scotch" is often applied to these older whiskies. It has no meaning other than the shipper's belief that his product is quite special. It may well be. But it's wise to try a really old Scotch by the drink, at a bar or restaurant, before buying the bottle.

Most of the changes in Scotch have been dictated by and suited to contemporary tastes. The greater variety of choice we now have can only increase our pleasure in the spirit and the facility with which we use it. But the Scots themselves have an uncomplicated feeling toward their native libation. They say: "There's whisky and there's guid whisky, but there's nae bad whisky."

Black-Tie Dinner

Smoked Salmon

To serve: Slice paper-thin or have the market do it. Classically, it is served accompanied by lemon wedges, well-drained capers, buttered toast, and a pepper mill.

Crown Roast of Lamb

Have the butcher prepare crown roast with the rib sections. This is actually a double rack shaped into a crown. You can if you wish stuff the center with ground breast of lamb. The butcher will do this for you but before roasting the crown, take the mixture out of the center and season well with salt and freshly ground pepper. Then replace it, but don't pack down too tightly. In lieu of the ground lamb, fill the center with Mushroom and Bread Stuffing (see below). A 7- to 8-pound crown will serve 8 to 10.

Bring the crown to room temperature before roasting, rub it well with a mixture of salt and pepper, and cover the tips with aluminum foil to prevent them from charring.

To roast, place crown on a rack in roasting pan and roast, uncovered, in a preheated 450°F. oven for 15 to 20 minutes, then reduce heat to 350°F. and roast another hour. The cooked lamb should be pink when served.

Mushroom and Bread Stuffing: Crumble rather fine about 4 to 5 cups day-old, firm bread, season to taste with salt, freshly ground pepper, summer savory or rosemary, crushed, to taste; add coarsely chopped mushroom caps and enough melted butter to bind the mixture.

To serve: Remove the foil on tips of ribs and replace with paper frills (your butcher will undoubtedly be able to provide these). Also remove the string with which the crown is bound. Place on hot serving platter and keep warm. Garnish one end with a big bouquet of parsley.

Cumberland Sauce

2 cups red currant jelly (1½ jars 10-ounce size)
Juice 2 oranges
Juice 2 lemons
4 teaspoons arrowroot
2 cups Port wine
Grated rind 1 orange
Grated rind 1 lemon
2 tablespoons Grand Marnier (optional)

Melt the currant jelly in a saucepan, add the strained orange and lemon juice, bring to a boil, then simmer about 3 minutes. Carefully mix the arrowroot with enough Port to make a smooth paste, then stir it into the fruit mixture and cook, stirring constantly, until slightly thickened. Finally, add the lemon and orange rind and the remaining Port. Grand Marnier can be added at this point, which many cooks say "makes all the difference."

Puréed Celeriac

Prepare in these proportions: 2 medium potatoes to 4 large celeriac (your market may know it as celery root or celery knob).

Peel the celeriac and potatoes, cut into quarters, and cook separately in boiling, salted water until tender when pierced with a fork. Take care not to overcook. Drain thoroughly. Put both through a ricer, then combine. Beat in a good lump of butter, salt, and freshly ground pepper to taste, and a few tablespoons of heavy cream. Beat until creamy and free of lumps.

Place in top of double boiler and heat over bubbling water. To prevent a skin forming on top, place a piece of Saran directly on top of the purée. Serves 8.

Don't put the Chartreuse too close to the milk

(someone might pour it on the cornflakes!)

But then why not? Chilled Chartreuse goes with lots of things... grapefruit, ice cream, desserts... and, naturally, on the rocks or as a highball. The main point is: chill Chartreuse before you serve it. For that's the new way to add finesse to Chartreuse's 350-year-old flavor. A most venerable and versatile liqueur. Combine milk and 4 tablespoons of the sugar with the vanilla bean in a large, heavy saucepan and bring to the boiling point, then simmer.

Meanwhile, beat the egg whites until stiff enough to form peaks when you hold up the beater, then gradually beat in 4 tablespoons of the sugar to make a smooth meringue. Drop the meringue by small spoonfuls, a few at a time (because they puff up) into the simmering milk. Turn each one over with a slotted spoon two or three times. Poach about 2 minutes. Lift out of the milk onto a fresh towel to drain.

Beat the egg yolks with remaining sugar and stir gradually but vigorously into the hot milk. Cook, stirring constantly, over low heat until custard thickens and coats a spoon. Do not allow mixture to come to a boil or it will curdle.

Strain through a very fine sieve or several layers of cheesecloth into a serving dish. (Save the vanilla bean, washed, for future use.) Chill. To serve, arrange the little "egg" meringues on top of the cold custard. Serves about 8.

Chicken and Tomato Soup

Take about 4 cans chicken broth (unless you have some of your own) and add about 1 cup tomato juice, salt and pepper to taste. Cook this over high heat to about half. Add a good dash of sugar and the grated rind of half an orange, and approximately ¼ cup dry vermouth, or to taste.

Serve piping hot in hot bouillon cups to 4.

Welsh Rabbit

2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce
½ teaspoon dry mustard
Dash cayenne
Dash paprika
½ cup ale or beer
1 pound sharp natural Cheddar cheese, grated

Mix the Worcestershire, mustard, cayenne, and paprika in a saucepan, or the top of a chafing dish. Add the ale or beer and place over low heat until hot. Add the grated cheese and stir until it has melted.

Welsh Rabbit can be made ahead of time and heated over hot water. Serve to 4, with dry toast triangles.

Pears in Spiced Wine

Combine 1 cup red wine, 1 cup sugar, 3 or 4 cloves, and 1 stick of cinnamon. Heat in a saucepan until sugar is dissolved, then boil over moderate heat, for about 5 minutes.

Meanwhile, peel, halve, and core 6 firm pears, drop them into the simmering syrup and cook until they are tender but still firm. Chill, covered, in the refrigerator.

To serve, remove cloves and cinnamon. Serve cold with syrup spooned over pears. Serves 4.

Green Turtle Soup with Lemon

Heat the contents of a can of green turtle soup (1 pint, 3½-ounce size) according to directions. Add a dash more sherry, if you wish, after tasting.

Serve in hot bouillon cups with lemon quarters presented on a bed of crisp watercress.

Serves 4.

Lobster in Patty Shells

1½ cups freshly cooked lobster meat
4 tablespoons butter
¼ cup Cognac
3 egg yolks
1 cup heavy cream
Salt
Freshly ground pepper

Cut the lobster meat into comfortable pieces and sauté in the melted butter over moderate heat for about 5 minutes. Do not overcook or the meat will be tough. Take off the heat, add the Cognac, and ignite.

Beat the egg yolks with heavy cream in top of a double boiler and cook, over simmering water, stirring constantly, until mixture coats a spoon. Add cut-up lobster meat, salt and pepper to taste, and heat through, but do not allow it to come to a boil.

Serve in heated patty shells with a garnish of fresh watercress. Serves 4.

Pink Pussyfoots

Spoon about 2 tablespoons grenadine syrup into each mug or tall glass and add two scoops lemon sherbet. Fill with sparkling water. Serve with a straw and a spoon.

Fried Chicken Drumsticks

Allow about two legs per child and insist on your butcher's giving you legs from broiler-fryers not weighing more than 2 or 2½ pounds. Heavier birds take longer to fry and the net result is often dry, stringy meat.

Place the legs in a shallow pan and cover with a mixture of eggs and milk, beaten slightly (2 eggs to ½ cup milk). The amount depends on the number of legs. Allow to stand for 2 hours.

Mix together a sufficient quantity of corn meal seasoned with salt and pepper to coat each leg well. Heat enough salad oil in a heavy fry pan to reach to a depth of about 1½ inches. When the fat is hot (325°F. on thermometer), cook the coated legs, a few at a time, for 10 to 12 minutes each. Turn with tongs—not a fork, which pierces the coating and makes it slip off. Try to maintain the same temperature all the way through. Drain on paper toweling. Keep warm on serving platter.

Meanwhile, have enough small, peeled, cooked potatoes ready to accommodate the young visitors. Keep potatoes warm in a serving dish. When all the chicken legs are cooked, drain off all but about 3 tablespoons of the fat, leaving in any brown crumbs. Blend into this 3 tablespoons flour and cook, stirring, for a couple of minutes. Then slowly stir in, in these proportions, 1 cup milk and 1 cup heavy cream, and cook, stirring constantly, until gravy has thickened sufficiently. Pour the gravy over the hot potatoes, garnish with a sprinkling of minced parsley, and serve with the chicken legs.

Proportions, as must be obvious, depend on the number of children at the table.

Angel's Food

1 cup sifted confectioners' sugar
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup sifted cake flour
1½ cups egg whites (11 to 12 whites, depending on size)
1 teaspoon vanilla
¼ teaspoon almond extract
1½ teaspoons cream of tartar
1¼ cups superfine sugar

Combine sifted confectioners' sugar, salt, and sifted flour. Sift twice. Set aside.

Combine egg whites, vanilla, almond extract, and cream of tartar in a very large bowl. Beat with the electric beater at the highest speed until whites stand in peaks when you lift up the beater. Add the superfine sugar, a small amount at a time, beating only long enough, after each addition, to incorporate the sugar.

When all the sugar is in, carefully fold in the flour mixture, by spoonfuls, with a large whisk or spatula, making sure all the flour is well combined, but only until the batter is well blended. Overmixing is fatal to an Angel's Cake.

Pour into an ungreased 10-inch tube pan and bake in the center of a preheated 350°F. oven for 35 minutes or until cake springs back when touched lightly. Invert the pan on a funnel or over a cake rack. Allow to "hang" until cold. To remove cake from pan, run a sharp, thin-bladed knife around side of pan with one long steady stroke and invert cake on serving plate.

Instant Rich Chocolate Sauce

Combine in these proportions: one envelope no-melt chocolate with ¼ cup light corn syrup. Stir until blended. Serve hot or cold over ice cream.

Fill with Rum Butter Cream. To make: Place 4 egg yolks, 1⅓ cups sifted confectioners' sugar, 4 tablespoons dark rum, and 1¼ cups (2½ sticks) softened, un-salted butter in a fairly large bowl that has been rinsed out with boiling water and dried. Beat with an electric beater at moderate speed for approximately 5 minutes or until cream is smooth. Chill in refrigerator until cold but still soft enough to spread.

Lacking an electric beater, cream the butter with your hands, then work in the sugar, finally beat in the egg yolks and rum very hard, beating until mixture is completely smooth.

To finish the Dacquoise: Spread about two-thirds of the Rum Butter Cream between three layers. Top with the fourth layer and shower with sifted confec-tioners' sugar. With the remain-ing Butter Cream, pipe rosettes between the layers all the way around. Serves 8 or so.

The Dacquoise improves with aging. We suggest you make it two days ahead, cover securely, and refrigerate. Remove from refrigerator a half an hour before serving.

RECIPES FOR OUR HOLIDAY PARTIES

To prepare goose, cut off the lower wings with a heavy knife or cleaver and pull out the lumps of fat in the cavity and neck. If it has been thawed, dry the cavity with paper towels then rub with a mixture of salt and pepper. Stuff and truss securely.

Rub the skin of the goose with salt and pepper, then brush with either butter or goose fat. Prick the skin along the thighs, back, and lower part of the breast to allow fat to escape.

Place on a rack in a deep, generous roasting pan. To the pan add the onions, garlic cloves, and several cups of boiling water. Place in a preheated 450°F. oven for 20 minutes. Reduce heat to 350°F. and continue roasting, basting every 15 minutes with the pan liquids (add more boiling water if it boils away) for 2 hours and 40 minutes longer. Then cover breast with aluminum foil and roast another 30 minutes. Properly cooked, the legs should feel soft when pressed and move easily in their sockets.

Instead of Goose Liver Sauce (see below), you can turn pan liquids into a most delicious sauce. Pour into a small saucepan (onions and all), then pour off all the fat that rises to the surface. Add about half a cup of water, place over a moderate heat, and cook 30 minutes.

To make a Giblet Sauce: Brown neck, heart, gizzard, and lower wings with 1 onion and 1 carrot, sliced, in hot salad oil. Cover with beef or chicken broth, add a small bay leaf, a few sprigs parsley, and a pinch of thyme. Simmer for 2 hours. Strain, remove any fat, and taste for seasoning. Reheat to serve. In this event, combine goose liver, minced, with the Prune Stuffing.

Note: In buying a goose, be sure the market leaves it in its original wrapper so you can tell the place of origin. The best geese available today are raised in North Dakota and Wisconsin and are generally sold frozen, although, during the autumn, you can sometimes buy them fresh. Whatever, make sure the goose you buy is young or "green"—in short, has seen only one summer. Any goose older than that has lived too long to deserve a place on your table.

To thaw: Place goose in the refrigerator in original wrapper and allow a minimum of 24 hours or place it in a pan under cold running water still in its wrapper. Once thawed, remove the giblets immediately.

Prune Stuffing

1 pound (1 package) tenderized prunes
½ cup (1 stick) butter
1 large onion, chopped very fine
8 to 10 cups fresh bread crumbs
Salt
Freshly ground pepper
Grated rind 1 lemon

Cover prunes with cold water, bring to a boil, then simmer about 5 minutes. Cool in liquid. Drain, cut in half, and remove pits. Melt about 3 tablespoons of the butter in a heavy saucepan and sauté the onion until limp but not brown.

Combine prunes with the bread crumbs (they should be made from firm, day-old bread and can be "crumbled" successfully in the electric blender). Mix well. Add salt and pepper to taste, lemon rind, onions, and remaining butter, melted. Mix thoroughly.

Stuff the cavity of the goose, truss securely, and roast according to directions given above.

Onions in Wine

2½ tablespoons butter
2½ tablespoons salad oil
¾ cup dry white wine
Salt
Freshly ground pepper
Few sprigs parsley
1 small bay leaf
Good pinch thyme

Onions should be all of the same size, about an inch or so in diameter.

Heat the butter and oil in a large heavy skillet. When hot and bubbling, add the peeled onions and sauté over moderate heat for about 10 minutes. Shake the pan occasionally to roll the onions about, but do not brown. Add the wine, seasonings, and herbs. Cover and simmer until onions are cooked but still retain their shape, about 25 to 30 minutes. Drain and serve immediately in a hot serving dish. Serves about 8, de-

guests.

Note: Onions can be prepared head of time and reheated.

Goose Liver Sauce

medium onion, minced
tablespoons butter
oose liver, minced

large mushrooms, minced

cup heavy cream
egg yolk
lt eshly ground pepper
tablespoons Cognac

Sauté onion in melted butter

a small lump of butter. Add oth and simmer about 5 min-lender, pour into container, and lend until smooth.)

Beat up the cream, egg yolk, lt, and pepper. Add slowly to e simmering broth, beating eadily. Cook over low heat, stir-ng constantly, until sauce has ickened. Do not allow it to boil
it will curdle.
When of the right consistency, stir in the Cognac, taste for seasoning, and pour into warm sauceboat.

Note: The sauce can be made early in the day and refrigerated. Heat up in a double boiler over hot, not boiling, water.

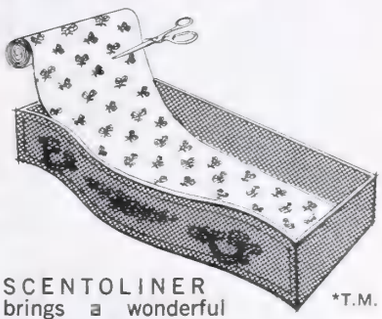
4 eggs, lightly beaten
4 heaping tablespoons raspberry jam

Grease a 2-quart mold thoroughly. Sift flour with baking soda. Cream butter with your hands or an electric beater until fluffy, then gradually work in the sugar. Stir in the eggs and the raspberry jam until mixed. It will look curdled at this point, but carry on.



Sift the flour, a small amount at a time, over the mixture and fold in thoroughly. Pour into prepared mold. If the mold hasn't a tight cover, seal tight with heavy-duty foil. Place mold in a large kettle, add enough boiling water to reach to two-thirds of the depth of the mold. Cover kettle tightly and steam over low heat for 2 hours. Add more boiling water when necessary.

To serve, unmold on suitable serving platter, surround with canned apricot halves piped with whipped cream. (These should be prepared ahead and refrigerated.) Serves 8 to 10.

Serve hot with Apricot Sauce: Combine one 12-oz. jar apricot jam with 8 tablespoons sugar and ½ cup water in saucepan. Cook, stirring constantly, over moderate heat for 5 minutes. Strain through a fine sieve and stir in Cognac, Grand Marnier, or kirsch to taste. Serve hot. ■

A fall booster for spring beauty—now

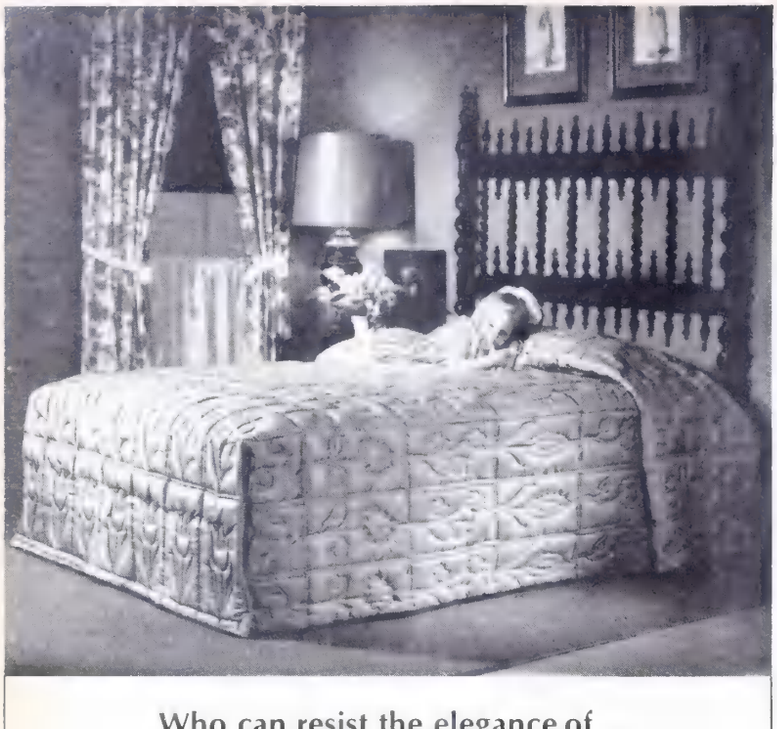
It took a lot of strength for your trees to put forth their lush, green foliage all summer long. Now, nothing but a deep-root feeding by Davey experts can restore their strength. This also helps offset the effects insects and disease can have on weakened trees.



If your soil is worn-out or hard-packed clay, Davey's new Organic Tree Food will rejuvenate the soil as it feeds roots. For normal soil, use famous inorganic Davey Tree Food.

Davey can also move in and plant good-size trees now—with modern equipment and experience that prevents damage to your lawn, gardens, walks, or hedges. Or, Davey crews can move that treasured tree where you've long wanted it.

Don't let your trees go into the rigors of winter without expert Davey pruning, bracing, cabling. Keep winter from having its way with unprotected trees. Protect them the Davey way.

Atrium enclosed with Thermopane insulating glass in Andersen gliding doors and fixed window walls.

Enjoy your own private Roman courtyard in a Thermopane® Atrium House

It's right in the middle of the house where you can enjoy it all year 'round in complete privacy. A place for the kids to play where you can keep an eye on them. A place to sun-bathe next summer where nobody can keep an eye on you. We didn't invent the idea of the atrium—the Romans did. About 2,000 years ago. We just brought it up to date with Thermopane insulating glass in surrounding walls and sliding doors for maximum comfort and fuel economy. Which, when you come to think of it, is quite an improvement.

P.S. No matter what kind of house you want, you can enjoy Thermopane. It comes in sliding doors and all kinds of windows—double hung, casement, sliding, awning—to eliminate the cost and nuisance of storm windows. Why have holes in your insulation, when you can have Thermopane throughout your house? Look for the name etched in the corner of the glass.

Oh, you shouldn't have.

(But I'm glad you did!)

Isn't that what they always say when you give the Smooth Canadian? That's because Seagram's V.O. does what no other whisky can. It defines smooth once and for all. Light? Of course. And gift wrapped (at no charge) to look as if someone really cares. Which you and we certainly do!

Time for a KitchenAid dishwasher.

If you're sick and tired of doing dishes—and who isn't?—it's time you got a KitchenAid dishwasher.

Why KitchenAid? For some very good reasons.

Start at the start. Take that load of dishes and pop them into a KitchenAid Superba VariCycle dishwasher. Both racks pull all the way out. There's a place for everything, from roasters and cookie sheets to dinner plates and glasses.

No need to pre-rinse dishes by hand. Select the wash cycle designed for the load (you have four cycles to choose from). The KitchenAid 4-Way Hydro Sweep wash action takes over. There's a 180° SaniCycle rinse for extra health protection. And an Automatic Rinse Agent Dispenser to help dry everything spot-free.

Now the dishes are done sparkling clean. And thoroughly dry. (Flo-Thru drying did the job, circulating currents of hot air around, over, and under every dish and plate and cup).

Dishwashing? It's a snap—with a KitchenAid dishwasher.

Don't let anyone switch you from the best. See your KitchenAid dealer. (He's listed in the Yellow Pages). Have him show you all the KitchenAid models and the Vari-Front panels designed to match your dishwasher front to your kitchen decor.

Isn't it time you got a KitchenAid?

The Chinese cook's time-hallowed fry pan—the wok—that looks like an inverted coolie hat set on a pierced metal ring—is available at The Bridge Co., 498 3rd Ave., N.Y.C. For cooking vegetables by the delectable Chinese ch'ao method—finely chopped and stir-fried briskly at high heat in low oil—this firm supplies a 14½"-diameter stainless-steel wok, with a copper bottom for the concentration of heat. Price of wok, $8.95; ring, $1.95; aluminum cover, $2.50, plus shipping.

For cooking the famous Arab couscous as Algerians and Tunisians do, Pampered Kitchens, 21 E. 10th St., N.Y.C., supplies an imported couscous steamer. This double boiler with a colander top gets its name from the sibilant sounds it makes while steaming semolina, farina, cracked wheat, or faufal (tiny pellets of wheat). Any one of these cereals—exquisitely steamed—makes an accompaniment for the famous Middle East tagine, or stew. A 6-quart cooker costs $24, an 8-quart, $28, postage prepaid.

The Yankee cast-iron bean pot, as New England in character as the Sabbath dinner the early Puritans cooked on Saturday, may be ordered from the House of Webster, Box 1265 HF, Rogers, Ark. For baking pea or yellow-eye beans in traditional New Hampshire, Vermont, Cape Cod, or Maine lumber-camp style, or for cooking stews, goulash, chili, or pot roasts, this electric pot holds 5 quarts and is self-basting and thermostatically controlled. On its own tripod and with a 6-foot cord, the pot ($39.95, postage extra) imparts a Yankee flavor equally to indoor hearth or outdoor patio, and brings as a bonus a batch of authentic old-fashioned recipes.

If you've ever drooled over paper-thin Scandinavian krumkake or goro, you probably know that the cook's secret lies in using the correct pan—in this case, iron. From Nyborg & Nelson, 937 2nd Ave., N.Y.C., these scroll-designed griddle plates of cast iron—the round krumkake, 6" in diameter, the goro, a 5" by 7" rectangle—are available at $5 each, complete with ring. Postage is extra. From the same source, you can get the famous Swedish plett-pan of cast iron ($2.95) for making the pancakes that go with lingonberries as Greta goes with Gunnar. You can add the imported lingonberries (59 cents a jar) to your gift; also a Swedish pancake mix (59 cents a box). Recipes included with all three cookware pieces.

FOOD:

Nobody ever tells you these things

From the kitchen of our food editor come helpful answers to some of the common but often puzzling questions in cookery

By HELEN McCULLY

Why is plum pudding called plum pudding, since it's made without plums? It was once made with prunes or plums. Originally called "plum porridge," it stems from a dish known as "frumenty" (there are many spellings) which at one time was Christmas fare in many parts of England. This was a rather uninspired concoction composed of boiled wheat, milk, and eggs and served with venison or mutton. Later, spices and prunes or plums were added, the latter eventually being supplanted by raisins. By the end of the 17th Century, it had become a proper steamed pudding, rich with fruits and spices; but the name "plum" stuck, and has to this day.

What is angelica? According to André Simon's Encyclopaedia of Gastronomy, it is "an Alpine plant that grows all the way from Lapland to Spain. It is cultivated in France for making liqueurs and for flavoring, as well as for decorating sweets and confectionery." Candied angelica is generally available in stores in the U.S. that specialize in candied fruits. It is especially attractive for decorating cakes, particularly Christmas cakes and cookies, because of its beautiful green color. Wrapped securely, it keeps almost indefinitely and a little goes a very long way, since it is cut or sliced very thin.

How do you flame a Christmas pudding? Turn the hot steamed pudding out on your handsomest platter, spoon warmed brandy or Cognac (two tablespoons or so) over the pudding, and light with a match. Place a sprig of fresh holly on top, and carry the flaming pudding to the dinner table.

What is the proper way to chill Champagne? The most elegant way, of course, is in a wine cooler or silver bucket. Place the bottle of Champagne in cooler or bucket with chopped or shaved ice (not ice cubes) and water for about an hour before serving. Twist the bottle slowly every once in a while so that all surfaces come in contact with the cold mixture. A less glamorous alternative is the refrigerator, but remember you must not chill wine in the freezer, because it may explode.

Is wassail a drink or a toast? Both, really. Originally, it was a toast or salutation to a guest meaning "be in good health." To this the traditional response was "Drink-hail." But wassail also means the liquor in which, formerly, healths were drunk, especially the spiced ale served on Twelfth Night (twelve days after Christmas). It can also mean riotous festivity and a carol or song sung by wassailers. The wassail bowl is not a punch bowl, such as we know, but rather a large bowl or cup in which wassail was made and from which healths were drunk.

Is eggnog an American drink? Let's put it this way: It has become a traditional American Christmas drink, although it is generally conceded by most authorities to derive from the simple English posset of the 17th Century, a combination of hot milk, eggs, sugar, nutmeg, and sack or ale. However, the Americans put their imprint on it about 1825, when they substituted headier spirits, such as rum or Bourbon, for the gentle sack. The word eggnog originated, according to some sources, from egg and nog (a strong ale); but according to others, nog is an abbreviation of noggin, a mug or cup, and also means a small quantity of liquor (usually a quarter of a pint). Recipes for eggnog in early American cookbooks were usually found in the chapters devoted to recipes for the sick.

W*hat makes the cookies on the edges of a cookie sheet brown more than those in the center?* They are nearer the walls of the oven and so get more reflected heat. When baking cookies on a sheet, do not place them near the edges, do not crowd them, and place the cookie sheet in the center of the oven.

W*hat is lemon butter?* As is often true in cookery, it can be entirely different things. 1. It is a sauce in which lemon juice, seasonings, and butter are combined and served hot with fish or vegetables; 2. An extremely rich cream made of eggs, lemon, sugar, and butter and used as a spread on bread or toast or as a filling for tarts and pies. Also known as Lemon Curd.

H*ow long do you beat egg yolks to achieve "lemon color"?* This, too, is an old-fashioned cooking term that really has no meaning whatever, because the color of the yolks depends on what the hens have been fed. Sometimes they are deep orange, sometimes pale yellow. In the old days, the term meant to beat the yolks until they were very thick and lighter in color. Today, we usually say as thick as mayonnaise. ■

WINDOW SHOPPING

To: A last-minute Christmas Shopper
From: Peggy Ryan, Your Window Shopping Editor

We all know people, I'm sure, who did their Christmas shopping last summer and who waltz through the mounting momentum of hectic holiday preparations rich, wrapped and relaxed.

How I envy them! But their efficiency sets my teeth on edge. For me, Christmas is always a Garrison finish, and although I love every breathless minute of it, I know I'd never make it if it weren't for these December Window Shopping pages.

My problem is not the Important Gift . . . the bicycle for a son, the doll house for a daughter, the smoking jacket for a husband. Rather it's the infinitely more difficult gift decision . . . what to give a child's teacher, the cleaning woman, a husband's secretary, the nieces and nephews who have a way of multiplying like wire coat hangers.

And this is where Window Shopping turns out to be my Christmas Tranquillizer. If you've never tried spending a quiet evening by your own fireside, leisurely flipping through this treasure house of gift suggestions, and finding exactly the right present for everyone on your list, you're not doing things the easy way.

Don't worry about receiving your order in time, either. The mail order firms appearing in House Beautiful's Window Shopping pages are geared up for fast delivery at this time of year. Many companies pride themselves on getting shipments out within twenty-four hours of receiving the orders.

So don't panic. Light the fire. Pour yourself another cup of coffee. Get out your Christmas list, pen, paper and checkbook, and discover how easy it is to shop by mail through Window Shopping.

Merry Christmas!

JAPANESE "HAPPI COAT"

In Japan, the "Happi Coat" is worn as a symbol of a man's profession. By the design of his "Happi Coat" you can tell whether a man is a doctor or a lawyer.

We've imported some because they're so feathery and comfortable for lounging. Large Kotobuki character on back means "Good Fortune".

Superbly tailored, for men and women. No size problem — one size fits all. Red, white, turquoise or black rayon (34" length). Please specify color.

Oil-tempered carbon steel blade with "zero edge" can slice fresh bread 1/16 inch thin.

Send for free brochure "Kitchen Cutlery that Really Cuts"

Think they don't make sharp knives any more? Comus PRO knives are different — they really cut! And you can try these professional quality knives for 30 days without risking a penny.

The Secret is the Steel

The remarkable Comus PRO knives are not made of stainless steel. The blades are not scalloped or sawtoothed. Instead they are razor-keen, high-carbon, cutlery steel — forged, ground and oil-tempered to hold their edge. This is the steel used for professional cutlery . . . These are the knives used by professional chefs.

Still Sharp in 1974?

Yes! Carbon steel does make an astonishing difference. Comus PRO knives are so sharp you can thin-slice ripe tomatoes and fresh bread — carve rare chuck as if it were finest tenderloin — chop and mince vegetables like lightning. And few occasional swipes on steel or stone keeps your Comus PRO knives factory-sharp for ten, twenty years, or even more!

Aged Like Vintage Wine

Albert E. Jordan's Virginia hams have been a must at Christmas for over a century. They have a flavor that has excited the gourmet for even longer. They are prepared in the same painstaking manner our forefathers used over 300 years ago. Selected from only the finest porkers, cured in gentle seasonings and sugar, and smoked over mellow hickory fires. Then comes the aging, about one year, and off to our kitchens. There our chefs glaze them with sugar, molasses and wine, and bake them to a golden brown giving them the savory nut-like flavor enjoyed by gourmets everywhere. the honey-bulb

FROM EUROPE

For years drips have out-maneuvered fingers, spoons, and under-dishes. Now, something new: A pear-shaped bulb through which heavy honey and sticky syrups flow freely and cleanly. Just press down thumb and up comes the plumb; when the plumb-rod drops, the flowing stops. The Honey-Bulb doesn't drip, it emits. And it's so simple it works. A complimentary jar of Orange Blossom honey accompanies your order.

Honey-Bulbs @ $7.95, postpaid. Two for $15.

This Christmas...

why settle for a miniature lamp with just one intensity?

This new Eagle Lamp gives you three for the price of one

A High Intensity that provides the equivalent of 100 watts of illumination... pure-white, glare-free ...that lets you see things in a different light. It's the perfect light to read by, write by, sew by, make-up by, do any kind of close-up work by. And because it casts no shadows, adds no color of its own, it's ideal for color-matching or painting.

Use it anywhere. The 3½" round base fits in the palm of your hand... makes any desk or table top instantly bigger. The flexible gooseneck bends, twists, turns to shed light wherever you need it. The shade swivels a full 360°

A Medium Intensity that's ideal for any kind of background lighting. You'll find thousands of uses for this versatile little lamp. Eagle, long a household word in electrical specialties, makes every important part (except the bulb) right in their own factories where Eagle engineers guard the quality from start to finish. Result: a lamp you can enjoy for a lifetime of pleasure.

The Eagle Lamp offers all these extras too. A convenient handle on the shade that makes light-directing easy. A slotted tab that pulls out for wall hanging. A felt-covered bottom that protects against scratching. Approval by Underwriters' Laboratories.

APPROVED BY UNDERWRITERS' LABORATORIES

A Low Intensity that's just right as a night light. Use it in baby's room or in your bedroom where you need a lamp that provides just enough light to see by, without disturbing anyone, yet is ready to shed plenty of pure-white light at the turn of a knob.

See the new Eagle Lamp at department stores, specialty shops and hardware stores in these decorator shades: bronze, sand, grey, black, pastel green. $11.95, including bulb. If not available at your favorite store, order directly from Eagle Electric. Send check or money order and specify color.

Linda always felt like a different woman, alone with herself in her bath. She enjoyed the elegance of a total lack of inhibition about treating herself right. Sometimes, before John came home, she would spend an hour there, listening to her thoughts, and the water. To her brief thoughts, flashes of her life as a little girl, and to long, luxurious fantasies of her life now, what it was and what it might be, and her life with John. Then Linda's mind would slip off, and time would seem to pass without thought, even without the ticking of time itself, leaving only the sounds of breathing, of bathing, and of water. And the peacefulness of these things, too. You're no better than you should be, Linda, a silent voice told her then. And she wondered for an instant, was it a sin, this self-indulgence, finest feeling of the day, calling for fine soaps to touch one's skin and the musical water, warm on the cool evenings, cool on the warm ones? Or in front of the mirror, idly noticing or frankly studying her real, yes real, beauty this time again? A beautiful woman smiling the private smile of a Grecian lady three thousand years ago, the same smile; and this evening because of the loveliness of these water-beaded limbs and lines, deserving even the finest towel.

FAMOUS CHRISTMAS FESTIVITIES

—and where to go to enjoy them

Like the school's-out season of early summer, Christmas has come to be a major boom period in the year's travel calendar. If you think gold, myrrh, and frankincense are rarities, try booking a holiday plane seat to Puerto Rico, a berth on a West Indies cruise, or a bed in any resort from the Laurentians to Mexico, from Placid to Yosemite. People who have been there before have prudently been earmarking their reservations long in advance, in anticipation of this new seasonal rush. Whether it's to the snows, the skis and skating rinks, to the trade winds and swimming pools, many people have found an excursion out of town to be one way to cope with the holiday.

Last year a friend wrote, from a family Christmas vacation in Hawaii: "Peaceful is the word for it. It may be different, but that's the point. We've toasted the holiday in Mai Tais instead of eggnog. The kids tacked their socks to the trunk of a palm tree; we brought our presents with us from home and opened them on the balcony of our room overlooking the bluest ocean you could dream of. We have papaya and grilled mahi-mahi for breakfast, and I went to church wearing the pikaki lei the children had given me. We didn't skip a beat so far as Christmas carols and Santa were concerned. The hotel has been full of traditional goings-on. (Please turn to page 188)

is mountains studded with fashionable ski resorts, medieval castles, and the open, wonderful welcome you see in every face. Discover them all, here in the pockets of the glittering Dolomites. You'll recognize the people by their hospitality. It's unmistakable. Just as the warm-blooded Italians' love of cold-weather skiing (and bob sledding, ice hockey, tobogganing, ice skating) is! Not only here, but in the northwest of Italy, too, where some of Europe's highest mountains tower into the sky. Getting there is easy. Just an autostrada jaunt from the famous La Scala Opera House. Staying there is what you'll want for weeks, at a plush hotel or a modest one (for as little as $5 a day). There are slopes for every kind of skier, lifts for every type of run. But don't stop with the Italian Alps. Follow the mountainous backbone of Italy, the Apennines. Picturesque towns and gleaming ski lifts are almost everywhere. And every resort seems, somehow, magically connected by side trips to fabled cities. Sample the classic wines, wander through Roman ruins, buy up peasant woodcarvings and embroideries. Ski, too, in the shadow of Mount Etna (indulge in a Mediterranean swim right after). There's everything to happen in the mountains of Italy...there are Italians to meet, like the innkeeper who serves the most fabulous cuisine you've ever tasted...that all-form, all-purpose, but all-fun skier on the slopes...or the villager who'll teach you a lovely old mountain song.

It always comes back to the people. That's why people always come back to Italy.

CHRISTMAS FINERY

Glitter, gleam, greenery, and some imaginative ways to use them: Hang gazing balls from the ceiling, as Edward Wormley does, to reflect gaiety. ▪ Give windows a tremolo of excitement by fastening satin ribbon streamers to their tops. ▪ Tape small fan-shapes of holly, in a pattern, to a foyer wall—José Reinares' idea. • Mass greens in ombré arrangements. ▪ Make pousse-cafés Harry Zelenko fashion, by filling brandy snifters or apothecary jars with layers of colored glitter, tinsel, or shiny ball ornaments. On the holiday table: A spectacular cloth-of-gold metallic net with gilt balls or bells at the hem. ▪ Fresh carnation heads blanketing the cloth; a red carnation nosegay on each napkin—both Marion Preminger's ideas. Hers, too, a centerpiece of gilded fresh pineapple circled by oranges and gilt balls; instead of paper frills around drumsticks, five-and-dime pearls. ▪ Multicolor candles in holders of varied heights, banked with greenery and seasonable fruits. ▪ Tie a bright narrow velvet ribbon around pieces of stemware and serving pieces. ▪ Fill a cognac glass with red-tinted water and oil and put a floating candle in it. For the tree: Polka dots of white daisies. ▪ A new silhouette such as Jaap Penraat created by tying boughs of twigs together, painting them white, decorating with Christmas ornaments, and putting them in a tree stand. ▪ A cone base covered with half-opened pea pods, string beans, close bayadere stripes of cranberry chain. ▪ Borrow Joseph Braswell's idea for a Christmas Eve party: An unpredictable tree. Ask every guest to bring an ornament for a green tree that starts out decked only with crystalline lights. ▪ Decorate a white-sprayed tree with nothing but fresh greens, fruits, or vegetables. ▪ Dramatize any tree or massed decoration by portable spotlights. Instead of a tree: In the country, Pauline Trigère heaps a half-moon table with small gifts wrapped in fabric rather than paper, and with fresh fruits and vegetables. ▪ Other alternates: A baker's rack; library steps. ▪ Or, to enchant children, individual trees, each bearing special-interest miniatures—ships, guns, horses, etc. More: Bonnie Cashin adds to traditional décor by strewing lots of children's books around, ready to give to young visitors. ▪ Blown-up snapshots replace names on presents for the small fry Gerry Stutz entertains on Christmas Eve. ▪ Anne Klein attaches a candle of appropriate size to each present, large or little, that is handed out. ▪ Make a lamp-shade topper of foil-covered cardboard, perforated with star shapes.

FOUR PHOTOGRAPHS BY WESLEY BALZ

Above: An old-fashioned Nutcracker Suite of a tree, 16′ high, is the focus of Christmas life at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Dibble, Scarsdale, N.Y. Unabashedly sentimental, the tree is piled with mementoes of long-remembered family occasions, treasures of 30 years of travel, gifts from friends, Christmas and non-Christmas things alike. Decorating it is a cherished annual event. In the close-ups, right, from top to bottom: a tiny, painstakingly detailed model of a Japanese house; a real bird's nest found by a friend and gilded as a gift, filled each year with different-colored balls; and, from Mexico, a shepherd and his sheep.

Still active, it is served by a modern-day circuit-riding preacher named Gabriel Pea. Rising out of the desert primeval near Tucson, Arizona, Mission San Xavier del Bac was completed by Spanish priests in 1797 to minister to primitive Papago Indians. Built of plastered adobe bricks—its rich interiors resplendent with dazzling ornamentation—it is an exuberant, sophisticated New World fusion of Byzantine, High Renaissance, and Baroque architectural forms.

Built in 1955, the all-wood chapel of St. James the Fisherman (Episcopal) at Wellfleet, Massachusetts was designed by Olav Hammarstrom. Named for one of the few saints commemorated in the summertime, it accommodates summer residents of Cape Cod from June to September. The hovering, shingled steeple provides shelter for the birds—and the bell.

Bruton Parish Church (Episcopal) in Williamsburg, completed in 1715, was originally the court church of the British crown colony of Virginia. It has been in continuous use since that time. The Sounds of Christmas

Splendor, majesty, tenderness, intimacy — all the emotions of hope and joy—are reflected in one of the largest and most varied categories in the entire treasury of great music

By RICHARD FREED

Probably no single theme in literature, history, or religion has inspired more music than Christmas. Settings of the Christmas liturgy, secular music on the theme of the Christmas story, and joyous holiday pieces have been written by the greatest composers and by anonymous ones, representing all periods and all styles.

There is Christmas music for virtually every imaginable performing combination and every mood, ranging from the majestic splendor of Handel's Messiah and the jubilant trumpets and drums of Bach's Christmas Oratorio and Vivaldi's Gloria to the hushed intimacy of "Silent Night."

On records, now, one may sample Christmas music from as far back as the 10th and 11th Centuries, in the form of the old Gregorian Chant masses and vespers for Christmastide. The rich tradition of English carols may be traced back to those composed by John Dunstable and King Henry VI more than 500 years ago. Before Bach and Handel, Heinrich Schütz composed a work that is still too little-known but well worth investigating—his Christmas Story (Weihnachts-Historie), whose full title, in translation, is The History of the Most Joyful and Glorious Birth of the Son of God and Mary, Jesus Christ.

Even Hector Berlioz, of whom one tends to think in terms of the sweep and drama of the Symphonie (Please turn to page 194)

Looking down from within the great "Gloria in Excelsis" tower of The National Cathedral (Episcopal) in the nation's capital recalls the glories of pure 14th-century Gothic architecture. Conceived by President Washington as a church for national purposes, the Cathedral's charter was finally granted by Congress in 1893 and its foundation stone placed in 1907.

FESTIVE FOR THE HOLIDAYS, Festive all the year

At Christmas, a wreath on the door, as at right, and garlands through the house, as below, signal the holiday spirit of the New York town house of the Claude Girouxes. In mild weather, window boxes filled with ivy and geraniums enliven the house façade. And within, whatever the season, there is a look of gaiety, of verve, signature of Interior Designer Edward Zajac, an associate at the firm of Baldwin and Martin. See on the facing page, and the following four, fresh effects due, in part, to his witty use of the unexpected. A youthful house, its sprightly garden room was shown on our cover for the "Young Innovators" issue (July).

In a lighthearted living room, right, an exuberance of gilded roses as a merry Christmas tree, designed by Joel Schumacher and placed to shine against a floral print copied, in cotton, from a Chinese silk. Cotton, too, elegantly unpretentious, for the citron moire curtains and upholstery, the damask slipcover on the couch, the striped satin and pillows. The pale rug, braided flax. Oriental notes: Japanese lacquer-brown satin, the various dolls; a table of brass bamboo.

1. Skipping the dark tones common in libraries, the Giroux library, left, is blithe with unexpecteds—sunny citron, scarlet lacquer, brightness of brass, leopard-print slipcovers dramatized by appliqués of brown velvet. Time itself goes decorative in a fantastically carved frame made of bleached pine. Eye-catching, too, the scattered collection of figurines, the parade of antique horn cups and sea shells on the marbleized wood of the mantel, the drawing beside them and the nearby painting, both by Santé Graziani. A most diverting room and one ready for conviviality when a big party spills over from the living room (it is seen through the door). N.B. The leopard print is of cotton, favored by Mr. Zajac, especially for slipcovers, which he likes for their gently fitted lines, their relatively easy maintenance, the chance they give for not-too-costly changes now and then.

2. In the master bath, right, encasement of old rattan with a pattern of Gothic arches, its mellow goldenness intensifying the keen blues and white roundabout: a ceramic garden seat used as a table for a medley of flowers.

3. A glimpse, right, of the master bedroom, where the small-scale pattern of the wallpaper and the large-scale print of the canopy, the bed covering, provide vivacity against the cheerful calm of citron and the varied whites of lamps, sheer cotton draperies, and the snowy glass table top.

4. Another view, seen below, of the table back of the couch in the living room, showing pieces of African sculpture that Mr. and Mrs. Giroux found and bought not in the country of origin but on a trip through Israel.

In the efficient Giroux kitchen, crisp good looks and unexpected treasures. Among them, the huge commercial stove, the roll-about table (in lieu of an island unit) with a chopping-block top of laminated maple, unique legs made of chrome-plated iron pipe. The chairs, peel rattan with vinyl seats as black as the lacquered cabinets. Beside the refrigerator, left, a cook's helper, a food warmer, and, farther over, an extra sink and counter space.

Views, right, of two children's rooms, alike in this: they were designed without condescension. The wallpapers, the furnishings, the Noguchi lanterns, the wood-patterned vinyl floor, all would be suitable in a grown-up's room. Only the personal possessions confide that these are children's quarters. Proudest possession: the Regency rocking horse with seats for three—one tall in the saddle, two in the rocker chairs.

"Ecuyère," color lithograph by Marc Chagall. $35. Graphis, Inc.

For giving: ORIGINAL ART UNDER $100

Original art is a Christmas gift equally satisfying to the person who has everything and the person who needs everything but disdains the practical.

Fortunately, the giver need not be a millionaire. He need have no more in his pocket than the price of a fake pearl necklace—or the cost of an art book and a willingness to learn.

In general, the Christmas art-shopper on a budget should limit his looking to the graphic arts, for most fine paintings and sculptures soar high into the three- or four-digit price bracket. Broadly speaking, graphic arts encompass original prints (in limited editions), posters, and drawings. A word of caution: Reproductions are also referred to as prints, so one must be certain he is purchasing an original print.

The technical processes involved in producing original prints become more intricate every year as the renaissance in the graphic media accelerates. For a complete description of the major types, a reader might refer to an article by Jeffrey H. Loria entitled "Collecting Original Graphics" in the November issue of House Beautiful, page 24.

A prospective buyer can see examples of various techniques in dealers' shops, art galleries, libraries, and museums. The Print Council of America—a non-profit organization that "fosters the creation, dissemination, and appreciation of fine prints, new and old"—publishes three times a year a Print Exhibitions Calendar. This reports print shows to be held in museums, colleges, print clubs, and similar institutions.

Each morning I woke with an eager, expectant feeling, as if I had just had a good dream.
"SEVENTEENTH SUMMER" BY MAUREEN DALY

For a young girl rapidly outgrowing her childhood, the pretty femininity of this pink, white, and green room is neatly balanced by the cool formality of pecan wood furniture adapted from 18th-century English styles. The bed, chairs, and tables are sophisticated enough to move with her as a grown-up. The sprightly rose print splashed across the bed is reiterated on draperies, tablecloth, shades, and wallpaper. For the young girl who is less sugar and spice than spirited tomboy, a tailored but sunny headquarters that looks out into the treetops. The built-in, plastic-surfaced desk has extra drawers for storing clothes. The wicker-framed bed with its fitted quilted cover has the aplomb of a day bed. Yellow burlap covers the walls, providing an interesting counterpoint of texture for the woven wicker and the exuberant lazy-daisy chintz on the bed and squashy easy chair.

"A CHILD'S GARDEN OF VERSES" BY ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON

The serenity of this young lady's ivory tower results partly from the blue-and-white color scheme, partly from the beautiful blend of the furnishings with the architecture. The blue-painted four-poster bed neatly frames the view in its bamboolike uprights. In keeping with the simplicity of the room, the ruffleless canopy is stretched across the top of the bed like the canvas in a picture frame. Interiors by Melvin Dwork of Yale R. Burge, Inc. Everything has been done here to make spacious headquarters for the activities of a young boy. To add floor area for playing, one bed can be pushed under the corner table, as shown, then pulled out for guest use when needed. Clothes storage has been built into cabinets beneath the fancifully trimmed bookshelves. Foldable, canvas-covered director's chairs pull up to a plastic-topped table for railroading and games and other young operations. Home of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Sills.

THE GIFT OF MUSIC —NOW AND FOREVER

Each of these instruments has news that makes it a more exciting gift than ever before

Swing wide the doors of this armoire and, presto, a world of entertainment. Stereophonic record player, AM-FM stereo radio, and all the colors of the rainbow in the 25-inch TV. Designed for a wall that needs a vertical accent, or where the space is too narrow for the usual horizontal shape. From RCA Victor, about $1,400.

In a secret compartment, under a sliding music holder, go the rolls that operate this new player organ. It's completely automatic, and, of course, a regular organ, too. Some 50 rolls are available; more coming, including "teaching rolls" that help one learn to play. Some rolls play 20 minutes. Kimball, about $1,600.

If any instrument could be called a member of the family, it would surely be the piano. It's a keystone of musical learning, and a grand piano is one of the most beautiful instruments. This svelte 5-foot model from Kohler & Campbell has a music rack that folds into top. About $2,150.

This package of electronic wizardry takes instant home movies in sound, and does related magic. The Sony video tape recorder captures image and sound of TV programs on tape to be replayed at any time. Recorder as shown, with 9" TV and 15-minute blank tape, about $1,000. Camera kit, $350. One-hour roll of tape, $40.

Instant warm-up at the turn of the TV switch is achieved by use of transistors instead of tubes. AM-FM radio with stereo FM, and stereo record player are also transistorized. This means no heat build-up and considerable savings on electrical power. Stereo Theatre by Magnavox. The Granville 24 (24" screen), about $450.

THE DELICIOUS WAY TO SAY MERRY CHRISTMAS

We present here a small but rich collection of recipes that any cook, even with a modicum of experience, can make successfully. Whether you choose from our recipes or make something that is already in your own repertoire, do tuck in the recipe with your Christmas message. With the exception of the mousse, which should be made only a day or two before you send it, all can be made well ahead of time. The fruit cakes, of course, call for a few weeks' mellowing.

Candied Fruit Peels

To candy orange, grapefruit, or lemon peel, choose fruit that is free from any blemishes.

Using a potato peeler, shave the rind off the fruit—very thin, in pieces as large as possible. Then cut the peel into thin strips. Cover with water, bring to a boil, drain. Repeat three times. The fourth time, cook the peel, after it comes to a boil, 15 minutes. Drain thoroughly.

Combine 1½ cups sugar and 1½ cups water, add peel, and cook over low heat about 45 minutes, until syrup has almost evaporated (this amount of syrup is sufficient for the peel from 8 large navel oranges, 8 large grapefruit, or 12 large lemons). Keep an eye out while syrup cooks down so peel doesn't stick to pan and scorch.

Sprinkle a large tray generously with granulated sugar. Add the drained peel and mix until every piece is thickly coated with sugar. Dry on wire rack. If it's good dry weather, this will take about a day. Makes about 1½ cups of whichever fruit you are using.

Obviously, candied fruit peels are delicious as candy, but they can also be used as décor on freshly frosted cakes (simply scatter the peel on top while frosting is still soft) and one of our enthusiastic readers suggests using Candied Lemon Peel, instead of fresh, in hot tea.

A jar of each, resting in a basket of tender evergreens, would make a charming Christmas gift.

Port Wine Jelly

2 cups port wine
3 cups sugar
½ teaspoon rosemary leaves
½ bottle liquid fruit pectin

Combine port, sugar, and rosemary leaves in the top of a double boiler. Place over boiling water and stir until sugar has dissolved, about 2 minutes. Take off the heat, strain through several layers of cheesecloth, and stir in fruit pectin immediately. If any froth rises to the surface, skim it off.

Pour into hot, sterilized jelly glasses. Seal at once with a thin layer of melted paraffin. Place metal covers on top. Makes about five jelly jars' worth, or, to put it another way, five delicious Christmas remembrances.

Salted Almonds

Heat 1½ cups salad oil in a large, heavy skillet, add ½ pound or 2 cans (4½-ounce size) whole, blanched almonds. Fry, stirring constantly, until nuts have turned golden. Lift out of the oil with a slotted spoon and drain on paper towels.

Mix together 1 tablespoon celery salt, ½ teaspoon regular salt, and ¼ teaspoon cayenne pepper. Sprinkle over the almonds while they are still warm. Makes about 1½ cups.

Several batches will take care of several Christmas people deliciously.

Delicacies for you to make, pictured right: Candied Fruit Peels, Port Wine Jelly, Three-Frosting Fruit Cake, Candied Brandied Cranberries, Mousse of Chicken Livers, Snowballs, Salted Almonds. For those whose talents run in other directions, Champagne with an armful of red carnations; a young, tender pheasant nesting in fresh evergreens; or baskets of beguiling French candied flowers are sophisticated alternatives.

A second vacation?

Well, why not?

Time was when your name had to be Rollinginmoney, or Richuncledied, for you to even consider going off twice a year on a holiday.

Times have changed.

For one thing, Americans are better off than ever before. (They earn more, and have more leisure time.)

And for another, the cost of travel (particularly air travel) has dropped considerably. A round-trip ticket to London on the magnificent new Super VC 10 costs just $335.* About ten years ago, London was $425 round trip away.

Ponder these facts. Then ponder these splendid second-vacation tour ideas from BOAC. Mind you, all the prices to these far away places include round-trip air fare, hotels, meals, sightseeing, multilingual escorts, tips, taxes and all other transportation costs.

Europe. We've got lots of tours to Europe. Among the most interesting is our 17-day independent tour (you're on your own but BOAC plans everything for you) of London, Madrid, Paris and Rome for $724.* If you prefer group travel, we've got a splendid, 15-day tour of 6 countries for $512.*

Bermuda, Nassau, Jamaica. If you like snow-white beaches, blue waters, and sunshine all the time, come to one of the Islands. Come to Bermuda, for instance. We'll give you 8 happy days for just $144.50. (Based on 17-day Jet economy fare from New York and double occupancy in hotels.)

Kipling Around the World Tour. 51 days globe hopping from San Francisco to Hong Kong, from Afghanistan to Syria (and 15 exotic places in between). $2844 from New York. First tour leaves March 4, 1966.

Africa. Are you game for a photo safari? We've got lots of them. One of our most photogenic is the $1726* trek through the best parts of Uganda, Kenya and Tanzania. It takes 22 days, and you'll take in Mount Kilimanjaro, the Masai villages, and the world's best collection of wild game.

The Nile. Here's a 20-day tour that encompasses 5000 years. You fly BOAC to Cairo and cruise down the Nile. See the colossal statue of Rameses II at Memphis, the Valley of the Kings, the Great Pyramids, the Sphinx. Stand in the palace of Akhenaten—the great heretic king, walk through a temple that took a thousand years to build. Price? From $1159.*

The Orient. Want to visit a sultan's mosque in Singapore? Dine on a floating restaurant in Hong Kong? You can on our Heart of the Orient Tour. Twenty-three great days in Tokyo, Miyanoshita, Kyoto, Taipei, Hong Kong, Bangkok and Singapore. Price? $1621. (Based on economy fare from San Francisco and double occupancy in hotels.)

Ski Tour. There's nothing quite like this! BOAC will give you 14 glorious days of schussing in St. Gilgen, Austria, for just $515.* 13 wonderful, romantic nights are included.

Around the World. Our pièce de résistance. A 52-day holiday called the Marco Polo that takes you clear around the world. You fly to, cruise around, rumble through Italy, France, Egypt, Arabia, Pakistan, India, Indonesia, Malaysia, Hong Kong, Japan and Hawaii. The price is $2350.

These are just a few of the exciting holiday tours BOAC is offering during this fall-winter season. There are a lot more where they came from. Just mail in the coupon and ask for our free "Why Not" Tour guide. We'll give you some more to think about.

Three-Frosting Christmas Cakes

- ¼ pound candied citron
- ⅛ pound candied lemon peel
- ⅛ pound candied orange peel
- 1 pound candied pineapple
- ½ pound candied cherries
- 1 pound golden raisins
- ½ pound seeded raisins
- ¼ pound currants
- ½ cup dark rum
- 1 can (4½-ounce size) shelled, blanched almonds, coarsely chopped
- 1 can (4-ounce size) shelled walnuts, coarsely chopped
- 2 cups sifted all-purpose flour
- ½ teaspoon mace
- ½ teaspoon cinnamon
- ½ teaspoon baking soda
- ½ cup (1 stick) butter
- 1 cup granulated sugar
- 1 cup light-brown sugar, sifted, firmly packed
- 5 eggs, well beaten
- 1 tablespoon milk
- 1 teaspoon almond extract

The day before you are ready to bake the cakes, prepare the fruit. Cut citron, lemon peel, orange peel, and pineapple in thin slivers with a very sharp knife; cut the cherries in half. Cover and set aside. Pick over the raisins and currants to get rid of any stems or seeds; place in a bowl with the rum. Give them a stir so the rum reaches all the fruit. Cover and set aside overnight.

Grease 4 1-pound metal coffee tins thoroughly and line bottoms and sides with brown paper, fitting it in well, but leaving about an inch above the rim.

Combine all the fruits and nuts in a very large roasting pan with ½ cup of the flour and mix well. Sift remaining flour with spices and baking soda. Cream or work butter with your hands or an electric beater until light and fluffy, then gradually work in both sugars. Stir in the eggs, milk, and almond extract, then the flour. Mix very thoroughly. Pour the batter over the fruit mixture and mix with your hands until well combined.

Divide the batter evenly among the four coffee tins, pressing it down firmly to make a compact, solid cake.

Place in a preheated 275° F. oven and bake 2 hours and 15 minutes. Remove from oven.

Cakes should stand until cold. Then clip off the paper around the rim and turn out on a cake rack. Peel off the paper with the greatest care so as not to disturb the fruit.

Wrap each cake in several layers of cheesecloth soaked in rum and place in an airtight container (preferably tin and preferably each one separately). Allow to age at least 4 weeks, looking at them occasionally to see if they have dried out. If so, sprinkle on a bit more rum, but don't overdo it, or your cake will be too soft to cut properly.

When you are ready to complete the cakes, you make three frostings: 1. Almond Paste; 2. Milk Frosting; 3. Double-cooked Decorating Frosting. In addition, you will need a few candied cherries, a bit of angelica, and, if you like, some blanched almonds for decoration.

Almond Paste: Work 1 pound blanched almonds through a food grinder or blend in an electric blender. Mix with 1 pound sifted confectioners' sugar. Beat up 3 egg whites lightly and combine with the nut mixture and 1 teaspoon almond extract. This is best done with your hands, because it is very heavy and needs to be mixed thoroughly. Divide into 4 parts and make an even layer on the top of each fruit cake. Smooth the top and its edge with a spatula dipped in hot water.

Note: Commercial almond paste is available in cans and can be substituted for homemade in the same amount (2 pounds).

Milk Frosting: Melt 1 teaspoon butter in a pan, add 1½ cups sugar and ½ cup milk. Stir until it comes to a boil. Then boil, without stirring, until a little dropped in cold water forms a soft ball (240° F. on thermometer). Cool to the point where you can dip your finger in it, then add ½ teaspoon almond extract and beat until it turns milky-white and is of spreading consistency. (If it hardens on you—and it may because it's not to be trusted—place the pan over hot water until it melts. Cool. Then beat a second time. This time it should behave.)

Smooth the frosting over the Almond Paste and around the edges, covering the other frosting completely, but not the sides of the cakes.

Double-cooked Decorating Frosting: Combine 1 cup sugar with ½ cup water in a saucepan, stir until dissolved. Then cook until syrup reaches 230° F. or "thread" on the thermometer.

Meanwhile, beat 2 egg whites with a dash of salt until they stand in peaks when you hold up the beater. Then beat in, gradually, 3 tablespoons sugar. Add the syrup to the beaten egg mixture in a slow, steady stream, beating constantly. When all the syrup is in, place the bowl over, but not in, a pan of boiling water. At this point, stir into the frosting ¼ teaspoon of baking powder plus tartaric acid, in equal parts. (This is a stabilizer. The tartaric acid can be bought in a drugstore.) Continue beating the frosting until it sticks to the bottom and sides of the bowl and holds firm peaks.

Take off the heat and spread smoothly with a spatula over tops and around edges of cakes, again covering only the frostings and leaving the lower half of the cake exposed. What you are really making is a frosting crown.

While frosting is still moist, decorate with a pastry tube; then finish the cake with bits of candied cherries and slivers of angelica (our photograph on page 169 will guide you).

To present your cakes, place in evergreen-lined round baskets or smart white boxes lined with white paper lace doilies and a stuffing of tissue paper under the doily to hold them in place.

To cut any fruit cake correctly: use a sharp, wet knife, making slices about 1" wide; then cut slices in long, narrow fingers.

Candied, Brandied Cranberries

Pick over 4 cups (1 pound) fresh or frozen cranberries to eliminate any stray stems or imperfect berries. Place in a shallow baking pan, large enough so the fruit can lie absolutely flat. Sprinkle 2 generous cups of sugar over the berries, cover tightly (if your pan hasn't a cover, use double-duty foil), and bake in a preheated 350° F. oven for 1 hour. Cool, then mix in about 4 tablespoons brandy or Cognac to taste, and sprinkle lightly with more sugar. Makes about 2 cups.

Spoon into a handsome glass jar, and send it on its bright and merry way.

Mousse of Chicken Livers
from
The Four Seasons, New York

- 1 cup (2 sticks) sweet butter
- 2½ pounds fresh chicken livers

2 large onions, sliced
3 eggs, hard cooked
3 tablespoons sweet sherry
Salt
Freshly ground white pepper
Canned consommé
Truffles

Melt about two-thirds of the butter in heavy saucepan and sauté the chicken livers (don't crowd the pan) until golden, taking care not to overcook. Melt remaining butter in another pan and sauté onions until transparent but not brown. (You can add a little water to the pan and cook until it boils away; this is the easy way to sauté onions without browning.)

Put the livers, onion, and eggs through a meat grinder, using the finest blade. Add sherry, and salt and pepper to taste. Then blend at low speed in the electric blender until you have a smooth, suave mixture.

Spoon into a 1-quart terrine (or two 2-cup terrines); smooth surface with a spatula. Chill. Meanwhile, have ready consommé that is of the consistency of egg white. Take the terrine from the refrigerator, cut the truffles into thin slices and make a design on top; then spoon the consommé over the truffles. Place in refrigerator until aspic is firm, or until you carry the terrine proudly to the recipient.

If truffles seem extravagant, even for Christmas, you can make a pretty design with black olives.

Snowballs

1 cup (4-ounce can) walnuts
2 cups (4 sticks) butter
1 egg yolk
¼ cup sugar
2 tablespoons Cognac
1 teaspoon vanilla
6 cups sifted cake flour
Whole cloves
Confectioners' sugar

Grind the nuts in an electric blender or grate them very fine. Set aside.

Cream or work the butter with your hands or an electric beater until fluffy. Then beat in the egg yolk thoroughly. Add sugar, Cognac, and vanilla. Finally, work in the nuts and flour until well mixed. This, too, is best done with your hands.

Shape the dough into tiny balls about ½ inch in diameter (they should be literally one bite in size). Stick a clove in the top of each, place on an ungreased cookie sheet, and bake in a preheated 325° F. oven for 15 to 20 minutes. While still hot, shower with sifted confectioners' sugar. When cool, lift off cookie sheets carefully.

Makes a good round 10 dozen of the most delectable snowballs you ever put tooth to.

Not recommended as a Christmas gift to anyone watching his waistline.

Almond Brittle

1 cup or a 5-ounce can slivered, toasted almonds
1 cup granulated sugar
⅓ cup light brown sugar, packed down
2 tablespoons water
1 cup butter (2 sticks), melted
½ teaspoon baking soda

Butter an 8- by 12-inch pan generously, then spread the nuts over the bottom so they lie flat. Add both sugars and the 2 tablespoons water to the melted butter, in a heavy pan, mixing thoroughly. Bring to a boil, stirring constantly. Continue to cook over moderate heat, without stirring, until mixture reaches 300° F. on the thermometer or the "hard-crack" stage. Keep a sharp eye on the candy to make sure it doesn't stick to the pan and scorch. Take off the heat and stir in the soda.

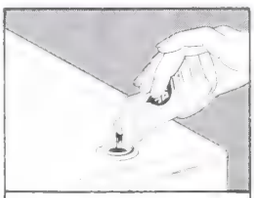
Pour over the nuts carefully. Cool. When cold, turn out of pan and break into pieces. Makes 1½ pounds.

To present, pack in a box lined with either foil or Saran and a lace paper doily.

Sugarplums

Soak 1 package (1 pound) tenderized prunes overnight in enough port to cover.

Have ready some commercial almond paste and blanched, whole almonds. Slit the prunes down one side with a small, sharp knife, and very carefully cut out the pit, cutting around it, taking care not to break the skin or pulp any more than you can help.

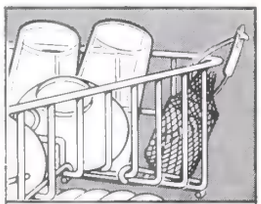


Take about ¼ teaspoon or so of almond paste and wrap it around 1 whole blanched almond. Mold it with your hands into a little tube, so almond is completely covered. Place in the center of the prune and wrap the prune around it. Allow to dry overnight on a rack.

The following day, roll in granulated sugar until completely frosted.

One package (1 pound) makes about 2 dozen Sugarplums. Line a small basket with fresh evergreens, then a layer of Saran wrap, and fill with Sugarplums. ■

Simply amazing how 'Jet-Dry' automatically dries glasses spot-free in dishwashers!



Even though your dishwasher washes your dishes hygienically clean, your glasses and silverware can still come out with unsightly spots. This happens because minerals in the clean water itself cause these spots. Every drop of water left to dry on glasses and dishes after they are washed causes a spot. The water evaporates, but the minerals remain and form a spot. Detergents are helpless to prevent such spots, simply because they cannot wipe rinse water off dishes. But JET-DRY does. JET-DRY in the rinse water causes glasses, silverware and dinnerware to shed every drop of water right after they are rinsed. In a split second they are as bone-dry, spot-free and sparkling as if you wiped and polished every piece with a clean, dry towel.

If your dishwasher is equipped to dispense JET-DRY, don't let the reservoir run dry. One washing without JET-DRY can cause spots.

Leading dishwasher manufacturers recognize and recommend JET-DRY as the answer to spotting problems. They actually equip many models to automatically dispense JET-DRY, and place sample bottles of JET-DRY in these dishwashers at the factory.

Until recently you could enjoy spot-free automatic drying only if your dishwasher was equipped to dispense LIQUID JET-DRY. Now any dishwasher can dry dishes spot-free with new SOLID JET-DRY — a handy bar neatly encased in a mesh bag. Clip it to any corner of the upper rack, and watch your spotting problems disappear.

If your dishwasher is not equipped with a LIQUID JET-DRY dispenser use SOLID JET-DRY. Clip on any corner of upper rack.

Remember to buy JET-DRY®

Coming away for the holiday worried me for a while—I thought we might all feel a little homesick come Christmas Eve, but not at all. The youngsters, surprisingly, love the change, and I've concluded that home really is where the heart is. No matter where we are, it's Christmas as long as we are together. Already we've reserved these rooms for next year."

Of course, everyone doesn't find Christmas away from home appealing either temperamentally or from the financial viewpoint (although we've heard it said that a family holiday can actually cost less than festivities on the go-for-broke home scene). But if you've never experienced this sort of freelance celebration and are still a little wary of the idea, you should know that by now there are certain away-from-home celebrations that have attained the status of traditions in themselves.

To Californians and enlightened outlanders, Yosemite is as traditional a place to spend Christmas as Grampa's farm used to be for the rest of us. And what more appropriate background than the snow-mantled world of the great sequoias and steep mountain faces? Since they are open all year, there are accommodations at both Yosemite Lodge and The Ahwahnee, and if you've ever experienced the combination grand-mansion-family-homestead atmosphere of The Ahwahnee, you can understand why its Christmas reservation lists are quite full.

EVER since 1927, the great holiday event here is the Bracebridge Dinner. This Christmas Day feast is produced with waits, carolers, a master of the revels, and a Lord of Misrule, every course heralded with song and presented to the "Squire," his family, and guests. It's a colorful, costumed make-believe, harking back to the old English holiday traditions of a Yorkshire Squire's house, a matter of flaming pudding and wassail and some good humored anachronism. Ansel Adams, long an aficionado of Yosemite, an ardent conservationist and nature photographer, wrote the script and directs the pageant which is played by faculty members of Stanford University. The hotel's hall can serve 350 at a sitting, and two presentations of this spectacular meal are made on Christmas Day (at 5:00 P.M. and 8:30 P.M.). Guests at The Ahwahnee have first choice of tickets, which cost them $14.80 a person, half-rate for revelers under ten. For guests from outside (and they do swarm the ramparts) the dinner tariff is $20. Accommodations at The Ahwahnee are American Plan, starting at $22 per person sharing double room and bath. For information: Yosemite Park and Curry Co., Yosemite National Park, California 209.

Quebec, to the north, is one of North America's rare picturesque cities in any season, but under a Christmas fall of snow its gray stone citadel calls up the medieval Paris of jongleurs and trouvères, those cloaked and bright-hued minstrels who illuminate art museum Christmas cards. In Quebec, Christmas Eve, resonant with bells of church and sleigh, evokes the Old World celebration with more than 200 midnight masses, followed by the réveillon, or after-mass breakfast where the program features the traditional meat-pie tortière of French Canada.

THOSE who customarily go to Quebec for the holidays contrive to stay at Le Château Frontenac, that stately institution more castle than hotel, with vaulted salons, armorial halls and guest rooms high in round towers overlooking the silvery St. Lawrence. Here the by now time-honored festivity borrows heavily from Ye Olde English holiday as well as from the French, the seasonal spectacular being Christmas Day dinner in the big dining room, where six-foot logs crackle in the great fireplace while costumed retainers bear in to the feast the boar's head, the 200-pound baron of beef, the plumed pheasants and the blue-flame plum puddings. Customarily there is a choice of two celebrations—the formal dinner at 8:15 and the less formal dinner dance. This begins at 6 and at 7:45 features a Parade de Cuisiniers in the Grande Salle de Bal which introduces the chefs in full panoply carrying the dinner dishes—the wreathed suckling pig, the chocolate cake yule log, and the set pieces, the galantines, mousses, and similar concoctions to be admired for their form and color as well as for their flavor. Later, in the Salle Jacques Cartier, carols are sung, especially the medieval songs of the French shepherds that have so sweetened the world's repertory of Chistmas singing. For information about the Château Frontenac rates and dates: Canadian Pacific, 581 Fifth Ave., New York, N.Y. 10017. And not too far away, up at Lac Beauport, the ski slopes and the frozen lakes are on hand for the skiing, skating, sledding, and snowshoeing that make a Quebec Christmas such fun. Over to the west with Montreal as their port of entry, are the Laurentians, with their countless slopes, steep to gentle, over 50 inns and hotels, their French-Canadian villages and whatever the French word for gemütlichkeit is, awaiting anyone who is looking for a cozy, snow-clad, atmospheric Christmas away from home. For more hotel information: Laurentian Resorts Association, Queens Hotel, Montreal, Quebec, Canada. For Quebec information in general: The Quebec Government Tourist Bureau, 17 West 50th St., New York.

PROBABLY the most nostalgic Christmas of all—one which so investigates the cultural roots of the American scene that it almost seems as if we should all be subsidized to take part in—is Christmas in Colonial Williamsburg, Virginia. Here from Friday, December 17 on through Sunday, January 2, 1966, so many festive events are planned that it's almost too much to list them—from typical plantation breakfasts to concerts by candlelight, often with fireworks, Christmas Eve observations with yule logs, overpowering dinners, syllabub, and services in the old Bruton Church (Episcopal) that you might almost feel lost in the 17th and 18th Centuries. There are so many goings-on, whether you fancy colonial "a-semblies" with the dancing of the minuet and lancers, or ear-exhibitions of drum-beating, or junkets to Carters Grove, or to others of the great old colonial mansions which are near enough to make a trip to them a must. And all Williamsburg's other delectations are ready for you as they are at all times of the year—the all-season tours through its boxwood-hedge lanes, quaint workrooms, shops, homes and kitchens. For information on hotel and tour rates in Colonial Williamsburg: Colonial Williamsburg, Williamsburg, Virginia. And for the great Old Dominion of Virginia, the state you'll be traversing: Department of Conservation and Economic Development, State Office Bldg., Richmond, Va. 23219. ■

The Print Council also puts out two other publications of value to the novice print hunter: "What Is an Original Print?" (25 cents); and "Print Dealers and Art Galleries in the U.S." (10 cents). All organizations listed in this brochure have subscribed to the standards formulated by the Print Council and have pledged to abide by them.

Unless a buyer is sophisticated enough in his knowledge to be able to spot a reproduction, it is a wise idea to purchase from one of the 120 or so sources in this booklet. Two department stores are included: Sears, Roebuck & Company and J. L. Hudson in Detroit.

In France, particularly, photomechanical reproductions of an original graphic art work are sometimes signed and approved by the artist, even those with the standing of Braque or Picasso. By the time such estampes get to this country, their credentials may have been misplaced and they could be sold for large sums of money as originals. Regrettably, all one is really paying for in such instances is the famous artist's signature.

If one cannot visit a dealer in person, there are art organizations that will send out catalogs of their current exhibitions, usually illustrated, and accept mail orders. Perhaps the best known dealer of this type is Associated American Artists, 605 Fifth Avenue, New York, N.Y.

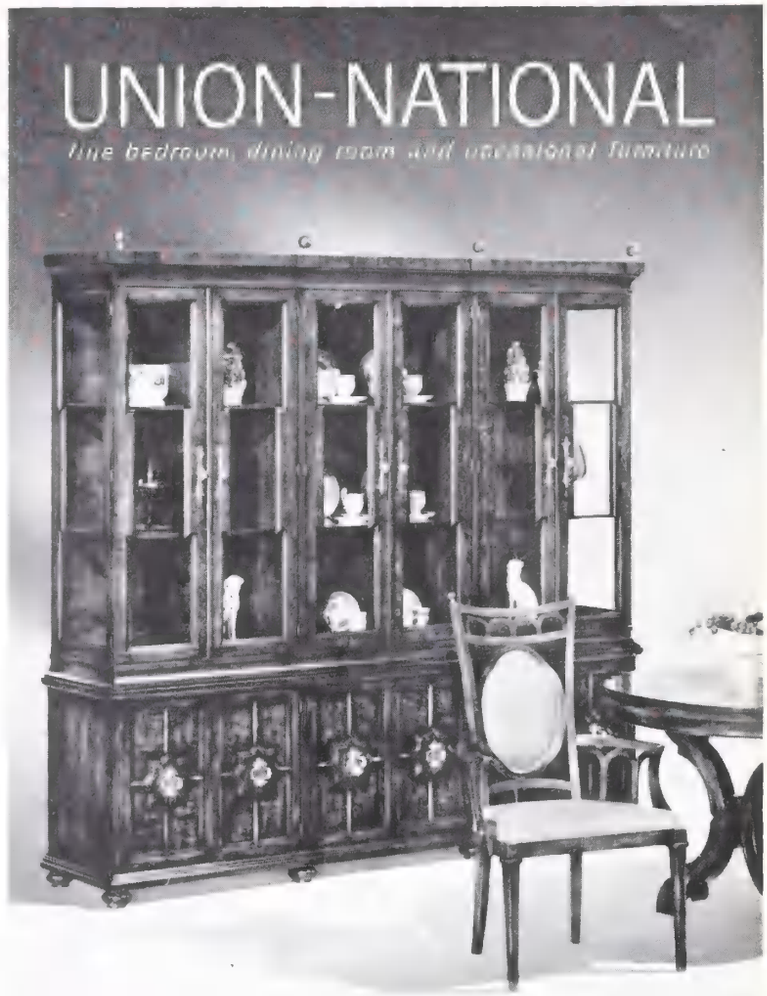
"Le Couple" is a color etching by Jean Cocteau, $85, At Graphis, Inc.

In giving prints you are not limited to the wide range of modern works—from abstract to representational—you can also choose from old prints. The low prices of some of these antique works are surprising, and print shops and galleries are worth haunting to uncover a less-than-masterpiece that is satisfying to look at and to own.

Art posters also find favor with graphics fans. They can be divided into two main categories: the commercial and the original.

The important difference between the two is that the commercial poster is turned out photomechanically and the artist's original is reproduced by hand. It is the low price of the commercial poster —generally under $15 — that commends it to many collectors, and when it is well printed on a fine paper, the commercial poster looks remarkably like its more valuable counterpart. The art work may consist of a reproduction of a painting or print, or an original design or drawing.

Less expensive than commercial posters are copies of commercial posters. Usually these are not a wise purchase because, in general, only on the original run of a poster are the colors as true and the lines as crisp as the artist intended.



One of New York's largest selections of commercial posters can be seen at Wittenborn & Co., 1018 Madison Avenue. Most of the collection is French, and such names as Picasso and Miró are represented. Prices go from $3.50 to $30.

A few New York City art galleries sell posters created by artists to publicize their own shows. Among them are the Leo Castelli Gallery, 4 East 77th Street, and Terry Dintenfass Inc., 18 East 67th Street, New York, N.Y.

A broad range of such artists' posters can be ordered by mail from Poster Originals Limited, 145 East 79th Street, N.Y.C.

Graphic works require only simple, inexpensive frames, or they may be stored in portfolios and changed often, but besides these obvious supplementary advantages, they offer a further advantage at Christmas time: A graphic work can be rolled into a mailing tube, brightly wrapped, and stuffed into a stocking or hung on the Christmas tree.

CHRISTMAS TREES THAT WILL LIVE ON

There are some good trees other than those shown on pages 162 and 163 that will live happily indoors for a few days before moving outside. The Austrian pine and white pine are almost as dependable as the Scotch pine shown in the drawing. They are all similar in appearance.

The white fir (Abies concolor), is another good choice, as is the Hatfield yew. The upright yew is interestingly different. It has a less conical shape than the typical Christmas tree. The English holly shown in the drawing is not dependably hardy north of New York City, in the cold areas of the Midwest, or at higher elevations. For these colder climates, the American holly (Ilex opaca) is a better choice. Keep in mind that all hollys need rather heavy soil, on the acid side, and the English holly requires protection from the wind when planted in exposed locations.

And, finally, on the subject of hollys, the one you buy will doubtless have berries. It will not, however, produce berries outside unless there is a male pollinator within 200 feet or so. A small male holly is not expensive, and could be planted next spring to insure berries in the future.

The local nurserymen are the most dependable source of living Christmas trees. They know which varieties are hardy in their area. The trees they sell are balled and burlapped as on pages 162-163. Prices vary from about $10 to $50 depending upon size and species.

The earth ball around a good root system is quite heavy. A four-to-six-foot tree may weigh 175 to 200 pounds. Some nurseries deliver them wrapped in plastic and recommend putting them in a tub or box for their time in the house.

If the root ball is frozen when you get it, it's best to warm it up gradually at moderate temperature, such as in a semiheated garage. Bring it into the house as soon as the soil is thawed.

Rosedale Nursery, near New York City, which sells quantities of living trees at Christmas, has developed an excellent method of handling them. The burlapped tree is put in a round galvanized washtub with handles. The tubs are 32 inches in diameter and will accommodate the roots of a tree up to six feet tall. The handles make it relatively easy to carry.

When decorated in the house, the tub is camouflaged with boughs or bunting. If the tree is on a wood floor, put it on an old piece of carpet to keep the tub from making a ring.

Put the tree in the coolest place in the room. If near a radiator, it is not likely to survive. While it's in the house, water the top of the root ball daily. A quart or two should keep the earth moist but not soggy. It's also helpful to spray the tree with a gentle mist of water before decorating. The moisture in a living tree makes it the safest kind to have. A week is about as long as a living tree should be kept in the house—ten days at most. If kept too long, it won't live outdoors.

Tree lights should stand away from the branches to keep the hot bulbs from burning the needles. Sprayed-on glue or snow is also harmful to live trees.

When the tree is planted outside, dig a hole deep enough to bring the top of the root ball even with the ground. Lift the tree gently out of the tub and set it firmly in the hole. Leave the burlap around the ball. Fill the hole with loose top soil and tamp it down well. Water thoroughly and cover the root area with 3 or 4 inches of mulch.

Special note for those who live where ground freezes in December. To avoid the problem of digging a hole in frozen ground to plant the tree, put down a heavy mulch where it is to go before the ground begins to freeze.

Use wood chips, sawdust, salt hay, or a pile of leaves with soil or branches on top to keep them from blowing away. Make the pile 3 to 4 feet in diameter and about a foot deep. When it's time to plant the tree, set the mulch aside and the soil will be soft and easy to dig.

Although all the trees recommended here will tolerate some shade when planted outdoors, they do best in the sun—particularly the pines. And when you plant them, remember that these are forest trees and will grow, and grow, and grow. It's better for all concerned if they have the room they need to develop fully without crowding. ■

Quite deliberately, we've made the Nassau Beach the "fun" hotel of the islands. We provided a private balcony for every room, with a spell-binding view of the ocean. We arranged poolside luncheons with calypso music for every day. And we painted each night with the glamour and gaiety of Latin American music and limbo, native shows and dancing to 5 bands, and parties, parties, parties. Top it off with treasure hunts, crab races, water skiing, sailing, skin and scuba diving, barbeques, beach parties, aqua snows, and you'll agree the Nassau Beach is "where the action is".

Fantastique and Damnation de Faust, produced the delicate L'Enfance du Christ, an oratorio on an intimate rather than grand scale, characterized by unpretentiousness and charm.

One of the happiest traditions, as fresh today as during the Renaissance, is the blend of "popular" and "serious" music in formal works that incorporate well-known carols, songs, and hymns. One of the most stunning of all Christmas records is a Deutsche Grammophon Archive disc that offers Ten Christmas Carols in Arrangements from the Time of Praetorius. In some of these carols, the respective verses have been set by as many as seven different composers of Praetorius' time (c. 1600). The sequence is filled with fanfares and interludes played on such ancient instruments as the zink, pommer, dulcian, and krummhorn, and the variety of the performing ensembles is astonishing.

One of the ten carols in this collection is performed by a huge group comprising four choirs, four recorders, four violas da gamba, four trombones, a wind quartet, two organs, lute, harpsichord, and offstage trumpets and drums. Another is an affectingly simple setting for solo soprano and krummhorn. Quite apart from its appropriateness at Christmastime, the record is an irresistible sampling of Renaissance music, without a trace of pedantic dullness.

A more extended single example from 17th-century France is the exquisite Petite Messe de Minuit (Little Midnight Mass) of Marc-Antoine Charpentier, which quotes French carols of the period between the sections of the mass.

In our own time, Benjamin Britten has created a lovely Ceremony of Carols for boys' choir and harp (sometimes sung by women instead of boys), and the late Arthur Honegger left, as his last completed work, Une Cantate de Noel (A Christmas Cantata), in which timeless German, French, and Latin hymns (yes, including "Silent Night") intermingle in a swirling setting for children's and adult choruses with large orchestra. The Cantate de Noel, a fitting capstone to a life of creativity, may well prove to be the work by which Honegger is most vividly remembered, for, in its deceptively simple way, it mirrors both the wonder of childhood and the questing hopes of the centuries with a poignancy even our own sophisticated age cannot resist.

In the realm of instrumental music, many of the Italian baroque composers wrote Christmas concertos, several of which have remained in (or recently returned to) the active repertoire. The identifying characteristic of a Christmas concerto is a broad pastorale, usually the final movement, in gently rocking siciliana rhythm, an affectionate tonal depiction of the night of Jesus' birth and the lullaby of the Virgin. The best-known example is the glowing Christmas Concerto of Corelli, but others by Manfredini, Locatelli, and Torelli have become familiar and all four of these charming works may be had together on a single record.

In addition to the music already mentioned and such operas as Gian Carlo Menotti's Amahl and the Night Visitors, Rimsky-Korsakov's Christmas Eve, and Tchaikovsky's Vakula the Smith, the Christmas tradition in music includes many works that have no direct textual or programmatic connection with Christmas but which were composed as Christmas gifts and/or have become established as Christmastime favorites. One of these is the ingratiating Siegfried Idyll of Wagner, a lullaby-serenade in much the same vein as the Italian Christmas concertos. It was Wagner's gift to his wife Cosima (Liszt's daughter) and their firstborn son on Christmas Day of 1870, a delicate weaving together of themes from Der Ring des Nibelungen.

Tchaikovsky's famous ballet The Nutcracker, with its Christmas setting, was composed as a gift for children, and so was Humperdinck's opera Hänsel und Gretel. Humperdinck at first hadn't even intended Hänsel und Gretel for public performance: he wrote it as a lavish gift for his sister's children.

Leopold Mozart, father of the incomparable Wolfgang Amadeus, wrote a good deal of music for children, using toy instruments. Whether any of these works were meant especially for Christmas is hard to say, but there couldn't be a better time to investigate the pleasures of A Musical Sleighride and the Cassatio in G, both available on the same record. Sleighride includes sleigh bells and other wintry effects, while the Trim tree-care costs ...Davey's off-season is on!

This is the money-saving time to take advantage of Davey's midwinter off-season economies. Think what trained Davey experts with modern equipment can do for your property now—efficiently and with special economy:

REMOVE DANGEROUS TREES and unsightly stumps while the ground is frozen. No lawn damage. "Stumpeater" removes stumps below ground level.

PRUNE away damaged, split or dead branches. Trim off low-hanging limbs. Improve trees' shapeliness. Even in dormant state a well-trimmed tree is a thing of beauty. Extend the pride in your landscape to the very edges of your property.

BRACE AND CABLE heavy limbs. Don't let sudden ice storms split off branches, depriving you of next summer's shade.
